LAMP BURNERS

The screw part or burner-base is covered, which protects against fire. Many burners are made cheaper by leaving the screw part open so that dust, dead insects, or charred portions of wick may collect, thus becoming saturated with oil and liable to catch fire. OURS DON'T.

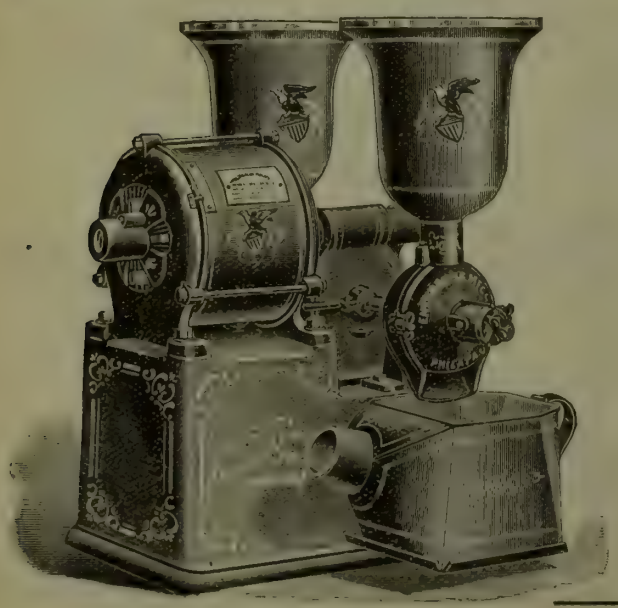
"Enterprise" Economy



An enterprising grocer, who does things right, uses an "Enterprise" Electrically-Driven Coffee Mill.

The right way is also the cheapest way in the end. It always pays. Take the experience of the Philadelphia grocer who grinds 15,000 pounds of coffee a month with an "Enterprise" Mill electrically-driven, at a cost for current of $3.00.

He bought the Mill as a great convenience—a time and labor saver, and an up-to-date attraction for his store. Its economy astonished him.

Look through our catalogue and you will find Mills of any capacity, any power required, for direct or alternating current. Your local power supply company will co-operate with advice and assistance.

The Mill illustrated here is No.08712, fitted with ½ horse power motor for alternating current. Capacity of each iron hopper, 6 pounds of coffee. One Mill is fitted with grinders for granulating, the other for pulverizing. Granulates 2 pounds of coffee per minute, and can be regulated for fine or coarse grinding while mill is running. If you haven't the catalogue showing all our Mills, write for a copy to-day.

This amount of cane was grown on an approximate area of 849,000 acres. The sugar production of 1906-7 was 1,444,310 tons, the largest in the history of the island and 214,574 tons more than in 1905-6 and three times more than that of 1904-5.

THE USES OF CORN.

Can you get along without corn? Of course you can give up johnny-cake and breakfast flakes, but what of the extra cent or two for every starched thing you wear if the laundry does not use cornstarch? What of the higher priced soap if there is no corn oil in the glucose factory? What of the cheap silk ties that will vanish softly and suddenly away because the cellulose adulteration is based on corn pith? What of the 10-cent instead of 5-cent mucilage bottle when gum arabic is used instead of dextrin, made from corn? What of molasses instead of a table syrup, and more costly and less palatable candy when it is deprived of the grape sugar or glucose content? The navy without corn would mean battleships without the linings of corn pith in their bulks. When a shot penetrates the armor and lets in the water the corn pith swells and fills the hole. A navy without corn pith would be a Spanish armada in a modern sea fight. Without corn dairy products would double in price.

A CONTEMPORARY'S COMMENT.

The following note from a recent issue of the Maritime Merchant, of Halifax, shows how The Grocer and The MacLean Company are appreciated in the Maritime Provinces:

"The Canadian Grocer celebrated its 21st birthday on the 15th of this month by issuing an exceptionally large and most interesting number. The Canadian Grocer has been one of the most successful of Colonel MacLean's publications, and he now has well along to a dozen of them covering almost every branch of trade and industry in which Canadians are interested."

A POINTER ON SALESMANSHIP.

So few clerks realize the importance of salesmanship. A gentleman entered a market store the other day and asked for a roll of butter. The clerk said: "Do you want the 55-cent, 65-cent, or 75-cent roll?" We submit to our readers that this is about as poor a method of address as could be used. The customer in question replied: "I want some good butter just as cheaply as I can get it. I want good butter, mind you, and I do not want to pay any more than necessary." The clerk replied: "Oh, then you want the 70-cent butter," and went off after it. Not a word about the different quality of the three! Not an inquiry about what use it was to be put to! Not a bit of salesmanship, in short! To be sure, he sold a roll of butter at the highest price, but we are willing to bet something that the customer did not return to that store again. —The Oregon Tradesman.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

Profit, Popularity, Permanent Success

These are the invariable results of selling only the most satisfactory goods. You know very well that customers soon begin to fall away when the quality of your goods begins to deteriorate. High quality is undoubtedly the main factor in permanently big success. In your canned fruit and vegetable department it will pay you to specialize on because Old Homestead goods are uniformly high in quality. We would not iterate and reiterate this statement if we were unable to show proof.

Every Can is a Confirmation of our quality claims. We entered the canned goods business to STAY; and we know that high quality alone can retain our prestige.

The character of this Brand has an International Reputation.

Its success has never been equalled in the history of the tea trade.

It leaves every dealer a good "Protected Profit," and sells everlastingly.

Experiments with Bulk teas and other Brands can only prove an unsatisfactory and profitless occupation, for the reason that the quality of "SALADA" has given it a Leadership which none can follow.

The foregoing is not simply an Advertisement, but a Plain Statement of "Facts"

Can we send you an assorted sample case? We will be glad to do so. Yes, and guarantee the sale, too.

As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty-mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident—its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

The Grocers of Western Ontario

Story of a Trip Through the Trade Told by a Canadian Grocer Representative—Brantford Merchants in Enviable Position With a Strong Association and Favorable Local Features—The Prominent Retailers of the City and the Wholesale and Manufacturing Features.

With a view to seeing business conditions as they actually exist in various sections of Ontario and to note the revival in trade now looming large on the country's horizon, a representative of The Grocer is now visiting some of the larger towns in the western part of the province and conferring with grocers and those immediately connected with the grocery trade to obtain the news and views of these men on various matters affecting their business relations, and generally the economic conditions prevailing in the different sections of the country. Another matter for his consideration and an important one, is that by this means he may get closer to the heart and mind of the grocer of the country—to think his thoughts, to speak his words, and to help work out the problems that beset his path and perplex him in the daily round of his duties. That the trip will be a pleasureable, as well as an educative one, is already assured by the friendliness and heartiness with which he has been received by the grocers in the various centres already visited. That it may be a profitable one to the readers of The Grocer is a wish that is devoutly hoped for.

A Visit to Brantford.

The first place visited was the city of Brantford. One of the busiest manufacturing centres of Canada and a city which ranks next after Montreal and Toronto in the export of manufactured goods. Busy, bustling Brantford sends her wares to almost every known country of the world. Last year the output of her factories was valued at close on $12,000,000 and over $2,000,000 was paid in wages to 6,000 workmen.

Brantford is essentially a city of workmen, most of whom own their own homes. The population to-day is nearly 21,000, and close on 50 large manufacturing plants are located inside its gates, making nearly every imaginable necessity. Iron works and machinery concerns predominate, but other lines of industry have a large place.

In the cognomens given to the various cities of the country Brantford is known as the "Telephone City" for the very good reason that it was there that Prof. Graham Bell first put his invention into operation. It is well to remember also that the automatic telephone machine was invented in Brantford. No wonder, then, that almost every house and business place has telephonic connection with the surrounding neighborhood. Nor is that all, the city is supplied with electricity for lighting and natural gas for heating purposes, and some of the manufacturing establishments use the water power of the Grand River. First-class water and sewage systems, too, are installed; there is also a street railway system, and the conveniences of an up-to-date city are found on all sides.

The granting of a bonus of $57,000 to the Grand Trunk Railway has resulted in Brantford being placed on the main line of that system, thus giving greatly improved facilities for getting in touch with the outside world, for handling freight and for building up the business of the city. In addition there is the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo line, giving connection with the Canadian Pacific and Michigan Central Railways, and an excellent system of radial lines—one of the best, if not the best, in the whole Dominion—giving frequent service to Hamilton and bringing closer together the prosperous towns of the Grand River Valley—Paris, Galt, Preston, Hespeler, Berlin and in the not distant future, Guelph. Of all the varied sections of Canada probably none can compare with this Grand River Valley. Scenically, it is a continuous unfolding of beautiful pictures; agriculturally, it is in the front rank; and industrially, it is beyond compare, many iron and woolen industries being located in its lap.

Founded in 1830, when the Indians surrendered the land to the Crown, the present city of Brantford occupies the site of the Six Nation Indian Reserve at Brant's Ford, across the Grand River, and is named after the celebrated Mohawk chief, Joseph Brant. The whites settled on the land as early as 1824, though the first house had been built by John Stalts in 1805. The first public work which gave the new settlement a boost was the construction of the Grand River Navigation Canal, and later the building of the Buffalo & Lake Huron Railway helped on the progress of the village. In 1847 Brant's Ford was incorporated a town, and thirty years later was created a city. A present Brantford possesses two daily newspapers, 28 churches, a collegiate institute and eight schools, some of these building being particularly fine specimens of architecture. Numerous and well-maintained public institutions are to be seen on every hand and besides the County Court House, the John H. Stratford Hospital, Public Library and Armories—all splendid structures—there are the Ontario Institute for the Blind, situated in a beautiful park, and the Mohawk Institution for the education of Indian boys and girls. The country round about is good agricultural land, though a little sandy in places. Still there is none of the heavy clay seen further south and east nor any of the heavy gravel seen further north. The fall wheat looks fairly but some grumbling was heard from farmers regarding the scarcity of rain. This, no doubt, has had much to do with the putting off of plowing and sowing by some farmers, though they are getting busy now preparing the soil. Butter and eggs, and in fact, all farm products, are commanding high prices and the farmers of Western Ontario generally are to-day in an enviable position, much better off than many merchants and manufacturers.

Business Good Till June.

Speaking with a number of manufacturers and merchants on business conditions The Grocer was surprised to find that not until June was the financial stringency appreciably felt. True, some manufactories closed for a few days last winter, but until the early summer business was in a normal and healthy condition. Just now most of the industrial concerns are running with reduced staffs on short time, though all entertain a hopeful view of the future. One establishment, the Massey-Harris works, which was closed for six or seven weeks, during the summer, is said to have sufficient work for export ahead to keep busy until the early summer next year, and perhaps will be forced to turn over some orders to the Toronto house. The slowing up of work has, of course, left its effect on business conditions and as to improvement in collections, opinion is divided, some merchants averring that bills are more promptly met, while others say collections are now just as bad as they were in the earlier months of summer. At any rate, things are no worse.

What the Grocers Say.

A class of merchants who are closely in touch with trade conditions—more closely, perhaps, than any other section of the community—is the grocers. They, too, have felt somewhat the tightening of the purse-strings, though when a comparison is made month by month with last year it is found that just now business is not so far behind what it was a year ago, and some months show even an advance.

Some Local Features.

There are features in the grocery trade in Brantford which at once strike the visitor to the city. One of these is the butcher department carried on in connection with almost every grocery store in the city. That it pays is evidenced after a conversation with the men engaged in business. Some butchers, though, who tried to add groceries were converted from their former occupation to grocers with a meat department added. This has brought about a family relation between butchers and grocers, and the best of good feeling prevails, so much so that the two trades have combined forces in the Brantford Grocers' and Butchers' Association, an excellent organization which has done and is doing, good work on educative lines and also bringing together for mutual protection and profit the grocers and butchers of the city.

A Strong Association.

If one were asked as to its success it is only necessary to say that out of about 70 merchants engaged in these two branches of trade 60 are members of the Association and they are among the foremost merchants and citizens of the place. The Association was formed some eight years ago and to-day is as active as when first organized. Meetings are held once a month at which subjects of interest to grocers and butchers are discussed; subjects like uniformity of prices, collection of accounts, bad debts, protection of traders, etc. Financially, the organization is very strong, the revenues being much in excess of disbursements. This is due principally to the success of the annual excursions. Every year about Christmas time sums of $50 are voted to the hospital and various charitable organizations, and yet with it all there is a small balance left with which to begin the new year. At the annual meeting stated amounts are voted to the secretary and treasurer to recoup them in part for the time devoted to the interests of the association. The officers are strong and aggressive workers, not long on talks, perhaps, but certainly long on work. The president is A. Coulbeck, a north-end grocer; Fred Corey is vice-president; the treasurer is A. L. Vanstone, a hard-thinking grocer on Market Square; and the secretary is G. Norman Willits. There is an executive committee composed of the before-mentioned officers and J. Misener, J. Kew and H. Foulds. All of these merchants served in the same offices last year, and so well pleased were the members that without opposition they were chosen unanimously for a second term. The work accomplished by the association since its organization is notable. The merchants work well together, there is a better feeling abroad, there is a minimum of bad debts and there is no price-cutting. This does not mean that the consumer pays a higher price. The prices paid for groceries by the Brantford consumer are as low and in some cases lower than in other sections of Ontario. There is more work for the Association to do however, and one of the matters to engage the attention of the Association this year is to overcome the present method of selling cheese by farmers on the market. Just now farmers come to town, buy some cheese from a wholesaler or jobber and cut it up and sell it on the market in competition with local grocers. It is not that they sell cheaper than the grocers—the grocers more than meet the market prices—but the local merchants complain that as the grocers pay rent, taxes and help keep up the market, the farmers should not enjoy these privileges gratis. Certainly it does not look fair for the grocer to pay his own and the market expenses and then have the farmer come in and profit by a transaction made from goods not his own. Another matter to be dealt with affects the butchers and is with reference to farmers engaging in the retailing of meat on the market. Both matters have been referred to a solicitor for an opinion and on this opinion depends what action the Association will take.

System of Order-taking Prevails.

Another feature of the grocery trade which is very noticeable is the method of shopping very much in vogue. Instead of buyers coming to the store, the store (or its representative, rather) is sent to the customers. Of course a certain percentage of telephone orders are received, but the proportion is small, and it is necessary that a clerk be employed to cover his customers every morning. This custom prevails more or less strongly all over Western Ontario, and it is a rather expensive custom. One dealer said he estimated it cost him $900 a year. He paid a clerk $9 a week to do the work, and found it necessary as well to keep an extra horse and rig.

Nearly every grocer and butcher in Brantford has a red or buff-colored delivery wagon. They all look alike, except for the name on the side of the cover. Another feature noted was the absence of outside display and the free appearance of the sidewalks and streets in front of the stores.

Some Attractive Stores.

The interiors of the stores are thoroughly up-to-date and the equipment is of the latest style—computing scales, cheese cutters, paper rollers, string holders, bag racks, and cash and account registers. Most of the merchants use the front of the store for display and a back section is screened off where the stocks are kept. The interior displays are well carried out, but much more could be done in the way of window dressing. Still it was remarked on more than one occasion that a decided improvement is noted in this regard in Brantford of late.

A Long-Term Window.

This brings to mind an incident which was told The Grocer. A certain Brantford grocer whom we will call Mr. Jones, because that is not his name, sixteen years ago had his window dressed by his son a day or two before the latter left for the United States. So pleased was the merchant with the display that for fourteen years he allowed the window to remain without changing. Therein is a moral for him who runs. No doubt Brantford grocers will soon be in the front rank with window displays, judging by the way they are coming forward in other respects.

There was one simple, yet attractive window shown by G. S. Winter, Son & Co., Colborne Street, which attracted The Grocer's attention. It was a display of fruits and spices for the Christmas plum pudding and for the Christmas dinner table. In the centre was a carton of layer figs set in a frame of assorted shelled nuts, while at the corners were bunches of table raisins. Around in various groups were dates, currants figs, raisins and cranberries, and the background was built up of glasses, fancy tins and packages of spices and seasoning articles. It was the first display of these goods seen this season, and it speaks well for Mr. Winter's enterprise when he can display a line of goods that other grocers are but placing on their order books. Though he had a well-stocked store, Mr. Winter said he had just that day placed an $800 order with a traveler for more goods. That does not sound bad, even in Brantford.

Fred Hays, who conducts the "Cash Bargain Grocery" on Dalhousie Street; his brother, George, who has two stores in town; the Forde Co., Jno. T. Wallace, J. Thompson, A. L. Vanstone and J. Hagey ("Bon Marche") are the leading grocers in the centre of the town, Mr. Vanstone conducting a first-class china department in addition to groceries.

Interested in Local Politics.

Jim Burns and Fred Corey are prominent members in the trade, and W. T. Pearce and Sam Suddaby are grocers taking a foremost place in public affairs. Mr. Pearce is a school trustee and Mr. Suddaby is serving a second term as chairman of the Brantford Board of Works. To him more than to anyone else is due the inauguration of the "good roads" movement in Brantford. Dalhousie Street was paved this year and Colborne and Market Streets will be paved next year. When finished these principal streets—Dalhousie, Market, and Colborne will compare with the best streets in any of our Canadian cities. Chas. B. Heyd is another prominent figure. He was until lately a representative of his city in the House of Commons.

Hon. William Paterson, the veteran biscuit manufacturer, is a resident of Brantford, and at the recent elections was returned to Ottawa. At present the Minister of Customs is the dean of the House. It will thus be seen that the grocers of Brantford hold quite a large place in the public eye and that they hold prominent offices in city, county and country.

Huffman & Craig are new grocers in Eagle Place, and with J. Cunningham, Chas. H. Lewis, M. Jno. Kew, John Peachey, Chas. W. Grantham, J. C.

Struthers & Co. and Fred Corey, help to look after the temporal wants of the residents of the south and east ends. Misener Bros., too, in the east end, are again building up a good business. In fact, all the grocers in the newer sections of the city are establishing stores that appear to be flourishing. In the west there are Sam Suddaby, R. J. Welsh, Jno. M. Hyde and James Mathers. In the north, up Terrace Hill way, Rich. Gowman is a butcher who has added groceries to his stock and who, with Jas. M. Lamb, McCann Bros., and Wm. C. Edwards, is seeing that his neighborhood is supplied with the best of what is going in the grocery line.

A Confectionery and Ice Cream Department.

At least one Brantford grocer has struck out on independent lines. That grocer is Alf. Patterson, and he has a confectionery department added to his business. In summer he throws open an ice cream parlor in which he does a thriving trade. Some Saturdays as many as eight persons are required to wait on the customers alone, and Mr. Patterson has sold in one day as high as 60 gallons of ice cream. How he made the people in the neighborhood acquainted with his business is an interesting story. Shortly before last Christmas business was going rather slowly and Mr. Patterson, a candy-maker by trade, decided to add a confectionery department. He bethought himself how best he could bring his wares prominently before the people. He bought an outfit consisting of a doll which revolved on a pivot and placed it in the window with a card attached bearing the legend that on Christmas eve it would be given to the person buying the largest amount of candy between December 1 and Christmas eve, a check being given for every 20 cents worth sold. A number of printed dodgers distributed at the school doors set the ball rolling and Mr. Patterson soon had a great many customers in the store who bought not only candies, but groceries as well. The revolving doll cost him nine dollars, but the result more than justified the success of his plan and added as well some dollars to his bank account. Mr. Patterson's candies became known, especially a high grade of maple cream, and when summer came round it was an easy matter to add an ice cream parlor, which was a paying department from the first. A number of mottoes bearing catchy phrases are placed in prominent places about the store and give the premises a lively appearance.

Mr. Hagey, manager of the Bon Marche, is building up a good business on Colborne Street, and in other parts of the city, especially out in the Brant Avenue district, are a number of bright grocery stores. Among them are Wellington N. Drake, a new addition to the ranks of Brantford grocers; Greensides Bros., Hartley Bros., Elmer Kitchen, Fred J. Matthews, well-posted on grocery news in his vicinity; Ed. Paterson, Philip G. Truss and G. N. Willits, out in Holmdale.

The Manufacturers and Wholesalers.

The manufacturing and wholesale trade is represented by Wm. Paterson & Co., biscuit manufacturers; the Brantford Starch Co., Geo. Foster & Sons, who lately opened a new fireproof wholesale warehouse with up-to-date conveniences; Geo. Watt & Son, tea men and grocers; the Brantford Coffee & Spices Co., Burke Mineral Water Works T. J. Fair & Co., cigar makers; J. S. Hamilton, vinegars and Pelee wines; Howard Bros. and the Ham & Nott Co., manufacturers of grocers' fittings and Ryerson Bros., fruit dealers.

Some Commendable Features.

In general, the grocery trade in Brantford is in good shape and the future is a pleasing prospect. Although there is no civic by-law calling for the closing of the stores early in the evening still nearly all the grocers members of the Grocers' and Butchers' Association close their premises at seven o'clock and a number of them at 6.30. The shop fronts, however, are kept lighted, giving a bright appearance to the streets at night. A word, too, should be said concerning the clerks in the grocery stores. They are a smart, active set of young fellows and many of them have been connected with the trade for at least ten years. In fact, most of the present grocers in Brantford have risen from the ranks and no doubt a number of the clerks of to-day are looking forward to the time when they will be proprietors on their own account. A good understanding exists between principals and clerks, due largely to the fact that the clerks are looking after their stores' business when the premises are closed. It is the intention of the Association to bring closer together the men engaged in trade whether they are merely behind the counter or owners of business houses. There is also a scheme on foot for the establishment of a library of technical books on grocery facts, which will no doubt not only benefit the clerks but be of distinct advantage to all concerned in the trade.

Nothing more need be said regarding the situation in Brantford. The monetary conditions might be improved, but there is a feeling of general satisfaction abroad and on all sides a hopeful and optimistic feeling prevails.

A NEW BULLETIN.

White & Co., the wholesale fruit dealers, of Toronto and Hamilton, showed a new stroke of enterprise this week by issuing their weekly price list and bulletin in a new form. White & Co. believe thoroughly in the liberal use of printers' ink and, in order to assist their customers as much as possible, they will every week present on the bulletin a suggestive advertisement. This, merchants are advised to use in connection with local advertising. White & Co. state that they are convinced that each dealer should keep his business in evidence either in the newspaper or by hand bills and they will be pleased to co-operate with the trade in any way possible for the capture and development of new business on page four of this week's bulletin is a sample local advertisement, worded in a catchy manner and containing some good straight publicity talk for the retailer.

AMERICAN TOBACCO COMBINE GUILTY.

United States Courts Say Company is Operating in Violation of Anti-Trust Law.

New York, Nov. 11.—The contention of the United States Government that the American Tobacco Company is operating in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law was sustained last week in decisions handed down by Judges Lacombe, Coxe and Noyes in the United States Circuit Court here. Judge Ward handed down a dissenting opinion. In the suit the Government asked for an injunction dissolving the combination of the American Tobacco Co. and its 60 subsidiary companies on the ground that it was illegal in that it operated in restraint of trade and commerce. The Government also asked the U.S. Circuit Court to appoint a receiver to wind up the affairs of the allied corporations.

While finding that there was an illegal combination as charged, Judges Lacombe, Coxe and Noyes in their opinion said that injunctions should issue against all the defendants except two. The injunctions are, however, stayed pending an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

The petition asking for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the companies included in the combine was refused as being "impracticable and wholly unnecessary."

The Imperial Tobacco Company and the British American Tobacco Company, English corporations, were included in the Government's suit, but the complaints against these companies were dismissed.

ONTARIO FRUIT FOR ENGLISH EXHIBITIONS.

The Agricultural Department of Ontario last week forwarded a car of the Province's finest fruit, consisting chiefly of apples to England where exhibits will be made at the Royal Horticultural Society's Exhibition at London, November 26 to 30 and in Exeter, Bristol and other towns. The Exhibit will remain about a week in each town. T. B. Rivett and P. P. Farmer of the Agricultural Department will be in charge of the exhibits.

The Bakogeorge Bros., natives of Greece, will open a large confectionery store in Lindsay.

"DOES IT PAY?"

A Discussion of the Relations of the Three Branches of the Grocery Trade—A Question Which is Now Coming Into Prominence in the United States and Canada.

The following paragraphs from a recent issue of the New York Journal of Commerce are interesting as bearing on the question of the ultimate trend of the grocery trade both in the United States and Canade, particularly since recent events are bringing the question into prominence.—Editor.

The legitimacy of certain relations of the three branches of the grocery trade, one with the other, is furnishing a topic so welcome to the commercial press that it is grasping the topic with a fervor that is really delightful, although it perhaps does not lie within the power of the journalist to do much toward bringing about a change. The solution of the problems now agitating the grocery trade will, however, be facilitated by regarding them from the Does It Pay? standpoint.

The truth of the above, from an exchange, is to be judged in the light of interpretation. Of course it is not within the power of a journalist nor anyone else to make "the other fellow" do what he doesn't want to, but there is no more powerful influence at work in the grocery trade to-day than the trade press. Of course the trade press cannot convince the merchant that it knows more about his own business than he does himself; but if it be a consistent and honest publication it can serve a very useful end by agitating certain questions and acting as the medium of exchange of trade thought, Because od certain agitations led by the trade press of late there are unmistakable signs that the trade itself is waking up to the fact that there is need for reform.

The "does it pay?" test is wise only when it is accompanied by a long-distance discernment. A thing may pay immediately, whereas its ultimate effect is distinctly demoralizing. There is striking evidence that many practices which have heretofore been supposed to "pay" are now being suspected of having really wrought more damage than they have good. The retail grocers of Nashville have been debating the question, "Does Price-Cutting Pay?" The very fact that the question was raised at all, and especially the result that the meeting overwhelmingly voted that it did not pay are encouraging signs of good horse sense.

Price-Cutting Fallacies.

It is the essential principle of business that a merchant shall buy as cheaply as he can and sell at as much as he can. He ought to do both with due regard to the rights of others. Any idiot can give his goods away and fill his store with people to take them. In lesser degree, the man who will sell cheapest, quality being equal, will get the most trade. But is he a good merchant thereby? Rather, doesn't he seal his own ultimate doom and incidentally drag the rest of the trade down with him. It is a pretty well established fundamental of democracy that individual rights must bow to the public welfare and it is as true in principle in commercial life as civic. The man who depends on price-cutting to crush his fellow tradesmen is neither safe nor wise. Experience is slowly proving to the trade that cheapness is not essentially a virtue.

Another fond practice of the past which is coming under suspicion as a fallacious principle is buying futures and stocking up in quantities. In a way it is the descendant of price-cutting—the child of quantity, price and speculation. The jobber has fondly believed that it was worth his whole to cut the price if he could thereby load up his customer with a large order. The retailer who could get a slight concession in price jumped at the chance. But it is slowly percolating through the retailer's mind that perhaps the burden and risk of carrying goods is as dangerous as the saving was desirable. It has been carefully figured out that it costs one per cent. a month to carry groceries of the staple sort, an expense hardly commensurate with the economy of loading up with quantities which would last perhaps a whole year. Prices may decline—recent events have painfully proved it—perishable goods may go bad, insurance charges are expensive, storage room is valuable in cities and money tied up is not as desirable as money drawing interest.

The Jobber as a Reservoir.

Even the slight saving which some retailers have found in buying exchanges and quantity purchases, is being brought under doubt as an economic principle. Many a retail grocer has figured out that, with all the attendant risks, he can better afford to carry light stocks and let the jobber do the worrying than do it himself. Small investments, small profits and purchases for short-time requirements—and these have been the order of things for several months past—have been an influence in the study of the problem. The retailer is more than ever convinced that the jobber is worth what he costs as an ally and sponsor—a source of quick supply—a sort of expansion joint to absorb the violence of market variations. Buying futures is being quite generally discredited as an economic advantage by most retailers.

The manufacturer has also been considering whether some things he has heretofore maintained good do really "pay." One of them is trying to rids two horses at the same time—the retailer and the jobber. The recently formed Specialty Manufacturers' Association is one evidence of his change of heart. If he can secure a fair reciprocity from the jobbers, he proposes to confine his merchandising to legitimate channels hereafter. "Playing double" did not pay.

Another lesson the manufacturer has learned, thanks to the operation of the compelling influence of the pure food law, is that quality of produce is a better guarantee of a reputation and steady trade than cheapness. The average manufacturer wanted to be honest, but competition drove him into practices which astounded him, when once he was pulled up on the lariat of the law. He had been cutting prices with his competitor and thereby forcing himself to abandon quality and take refuge in petty dishonesty. The food law decreed that such practices did not pay and, when he was forced into testing it, he found it to be true. To-day he is the pure food law's staunchest supporter.

The influence of association has been a saving one to the grocery trade. Men who, left to themselves and their selfish ends, would follow a rut of habit and never leave it, have been forced by contact with their fellows and by the resultant publicity to study that word "pay" with a different meaning. Profits are not the only things which measure how well or poorly a thing "pays." Reputation and prosperity are also elements in a "paying" business. Reasonable and fair profits, open markets and a fair show, a square deal and a living chance are essentials for successful commercial life. These are the things which association has brought forth. Rapidly the influence is spreading through all the various factors of commerce, and the man who discerns clearly the trend is an optimist.

HEINZ FACTORY AT LEAMINGTON.

By the passing of a municipal by-law at Leamington, Ont., on Friday, November 13, by a vote of 555—18, the establishment of a branch factory of the Heinz Co., of Pittsburg, in that town is assured. The by-law provided for the expenditure of $10,000 for a six-storey factory, the putting in of a sewer, free water and tax exemption for ten years. This will mean the securing of an important and developing industry for the town.

TRAVELERS NOMINATE OFFICERS

The quarterly meeting of members of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society was held in the Association Rooms, Montreal, on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 7. The nomination of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the re-election of Ald. James Robinson as treasurer and Reg. W. Graham as secretary.

S. C. Richards, head of the firm of Richards & Brown, grocery commission merchants, Winnipeg, has returned from a short business trip to England. Mr. Richards succeeded in securing several important English agencies.

UNCLE SAM AND THE TARIFF.

Now that the elections in the United States are over and the Republicans have carried the day, not only in the choice of Mr. Taft as president, but also in securing a substantial majority in the House of Representatives, it is solemnly announced that tariff revision is likely to be a preferred subject in the legislative programme at the national capital.

While some Republican leaders declared during the recent political campaign, from which they have just emerged, that an overhauling of the tariff was urgent, the student of fiscal problems and policies does not seriously believe there will be any radical reduction or extensive alterations in the specific schedules at present in force. The existing high rates of duty are likely to prevail and the only interest Canada has in the outcome is largely that of a spectator or looker-on.

The day has long passed when the Canadian people have followed the practice of gazing in the direction of Washington for relief or bowing the knee to the tariff makers in that city. Efforts made in that direction some years ago were coldly received, no reciprocal spirit being in evidence, and the Dominion now pursues the even tenor of its way, fully convinced that she can work out her own destiny and master her own future without commercial courtesies or negotiations with the southern republic which, since the days of the McKinley tariff, has evinced no desire to lower customs barriers.

The present tariff of Uncle Sam is on an average about fifty per cent. higher than that of Canada against imports from the republic, while the balance of trade between the two countries is nearly one hundred per cent. in favor of the States. As long as Canada continues to buy in this ratio there is small probability of any reduction in our favor.

For the year ending March, 1907, Canadian exports across the border amounted to $109,000,000, while we bought from our neighbors no less than $208,000,000 worth of goods. As long as this big balance of trade exists in favor of the United States there need be no expectation of any incisive re-adjustment of duty, and it, therefore, is a matter of small interest to the Dominion whether there is or not.

Our foreign trade is expanding year by year at an unprecedented rate without support or encouragement from the south. Overtures made in years past were not favorably received and we in no way have to place reliance for our future upon the fiscal attitude of our neighbors where the latest advices would indicate that, while in the proposed programme there may be a nominal revision, there is small danger of the Republicans departing from the extreme protectionist tenets to which they have held so long.

The Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives began hearings on the tariff on the 10th inst., and they will end December 4th, and it is understood that a tariff revision bill will be enacted to go into effect at the beginning of the next fiscal year.

Although it is stated that the programme allows more than double the time hitherto given to any tariff measure, the belief exists that any investigation into such an important and far-reaching subject that can be concluded and drafted in about three weeks' time is not likely to be very searching, exhaustive or at all revolutionary in character and leads the impartial to the conviction that the tinkering will be very trifling.

The kind of tariff revision that will be presented, has been styled by a member of the present administration, as "the veriest sort of makeshift." Mr. Sherman, the newly-elected vice-president, has always been tooth and nail for the most extreme protectionist notions of his party, while Mr. Cannon, who will doubtless be elected speaker, is an out-and-out protectionist, and will use all possible means to prevent extreme action in all fiscal matters.

Mr. Taft, while not an avowed extremist, did not fail, however, in all his campaign speeches to emphasize the relationship between prosperity and high rates of duty, and knowing ones do not expect from him anything in the way of a downward revision.

It is intimated that maximum and minimum duties may be imposed, but the Republican victory, in the view of the verdict at the polls, the political character of the House, and the views expressed so freely by the leaders, evidently means that the forthcoming tariff revision is not likely to result in anything startling or to deviate one jot from the course that the dominant party has adhered to for nearly a score of years.

The outcome is, therefore, creating no stir in Canada, whose dependence on the frown or smile of Uncle Sam in trade matters has long ceased to be regarded as a matter of consequence in the development and expansion of the commerce of Canada.

MAKING THE PAPER HELPFUL.

The first instalment of the story of a trip among the grocers and the trade in Western Ontario by a representative of The Canadian Grocer will be found elsewhere in this issue. This week the article deals with the grocers of Brantford but individual businesses and trade conditions in other towns will be taken up in subsequent issues.

The primary object of the trip of The Grocer's representative is to get in touch with the problems in which the trade is particularly interested so that the paper may be made still more helpful and valuable. While our representative is getting acquainted with the grocers in the different towns he visits he is also studying trade conditions, with a view to bringing away ideas that may be developed for the benefit of our subscribers later on. The Grocer has always carried the confidence of the retailers in Canada. It is the policy of the publishers to make the paper just as helpful as possible to all classes of grocers in Canada.

INTERESTING OPERATIONS IN SUGAR.

Considerable interest has been manifest in the operations of the New York sugar refiners during the past week, and, in consequence of continued price reductions, reports were circulated that the fight which took place about four years ago between the American Sugar Refining Co. and the Arbuckle interests was to be renewed. The reports came from the continued reduction in prices due to the scaling down of the margin between raw and refined sugars during the past few weeks. The normal margin is about 90 cents per hundred pounds. Up till Tuesday the gradual reduction had brought this down to 73 cents, and on Wednesday a cable received by local brokers noted a decline by the Federal interests to $4.60, which would bring the margin down again to 68 cents per hundred. This movement in the face of stiffening prices in European raws appeared rather significant since the margin stated cannot allow for very much more than the cost of refining, and it is said that the reductions will cut down refiners' profits about two-thirds.

It appears that at the time of the former fight between the American and Arbuckle interests an agreement was made by the late President Havemeyer and Arbuckle Bros., which terminated the trouble and since that time business has been on a pretty steady basis. It was said that this agreement had recently terminated, that Arbuckle Bros. had declined to renew it, and that the reductions ensued as a result. Later information, however, does not bear out the truth of this statement, but bases the cause of the reductions simply on ordinary business competition.

While the course of events will have no direct effect on Canadian sugar markets the matter is being watched with a good deal of interest here.

NO MALAGA GRAPES.

How many grocers there are, and not alone grocers, but some dealers as well, who call those luscious Almeria grapes which are becoming so much in demand of late, Malagas. It is simply a matter of misinformation. There are no real Malaga grapes coming to Canada, though they are grown largely in the province of that name in the south of Spain. The Province of Almeria, where the fruit does come from, lies farther east on the coast and the two provinces are separated by a range of mountains. How the name Malaga came to be applied to the fruit is evidently due to the fact that the steamship line carrying the goods runs directly from Almeria to the port of Malaga, where the fruit is transhipped before being forwarded to this country.

EVERY GROCER SHOULD BE INTERESTED.

The Christmas window-dressing and advertising competitions which The Grocer carried on just about a year ago were productive of such satisfactory results that it has been thought well to repeat them this year and particulars of both competitions are presented on another page in this issue. These contests are arranged with a view to stimulating interest among The Grocer's subscribers in departments of their business which we believe to be of prime importance and which can be developed to be of great value.

The contests are arranged so that all classes of grocers are given an equal chance and the trouble and expense required in connection therewith are so slight that they should deter no one. These contests are something in which every grocer in Canada ought to be interested and a large number of entries are expected.

VALUE OF TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

A striking example of the value of trade associations is furnished by the workings of the Brantford Grocers' and Butchers' Association. The organization was founded some eight years ago, so it has passed through its initiation and enthusiastic stage, and that it is stronger to-day than in its early days proves that it is maintaining an active existence.

The association has brought the members of the grocer family closer together and there is a friendly feeling permeating the whole organization. The public is protected too, and as a consequence food products are cheap, good and pure, and compare favorably in these respects with other centres of the province. For their own protection the members of the association have a system to ward off dead-beats. In fact, such improved conditions have been brought about since the inauguration of the association that a mere recital of them would need a special article. However, a few named here may not be amiss. From an educative standpoint there has been a great improvement in the lay-out of the stores and arrangements of the stock. The windows, too, show a welcome change. The folly of price-cutting has been abated. The stores close early in the evening, thus giving the clerks a little time for recreation. There are other features which commend themselves to various minds, but if for nothing else than the cordial relations which exist among the members of the grocery trade in Brantford the association has more than justified its existence.

There is a matter engaging the attention of the officers just now in relation to the way farmers are breaking the civic by-law in the disposing of cheese on the market. But notwithstanding the amount of work the association is doing for the grocers, the members yet have time to help their confreres, the butchers, in their grievance with the selling of meat on the market, and in lending a helping hand in a social and educative way to the clerks in their employ. The association proposes to give an entertainment in the near future to their clerks and in this way to bring themselves in closer contact with those who are helping to build up their business.

A library of grocery technical books, too, is a suggestion that may be acted on whereby grocer and clerk may improve themselves in the knowledge of the goods they are handling.

Lastly, the association fills a field of public usefulness which is recognized by the civic authorities and citizens generally. Next year Brantford proposes to gather together her sons and daughters in far away points during an "old home week" and the first invitation sent out for help by the citizens' committee was to the Grocers' and Butchers' Association. Of course, they promised assistance and if present indications count for anything the event will be a huge success. In its own quiet way the association has been spending its surpluses by contributing to charitable and philanthropic bodies and thus helping to alleviate the sufferings of some of their less fortunate brothers of the human family. Brantford has an association which other cities might well emulate.

Hearing Resumed in Guild Case

Chief Justice Falconbridge Resumes Held-over Sitting on Wednesday Morning—Secretary of Empire Tobacco Company Tells of That Firm's Relations With the Guild—Shredded Wheat and the Wholesale Trade.

The special sitting of the High Court of Justice, at which the business methods of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild are being investigated, was re-opened on Wednesday, Nov. 11th, at 11 o'clock before Chief Justice Falconbridge.

The resuming of the hearing was dated for Tuesday morning, but owing to the fact that counsel in the case were not altogether prepared, it was held over for another day.

Evidence for the defence, the hearing of which was adjourned from Oct. 23 until Nov. 11, was presented, the first witness to take the stand being Henry S. Burke, Montreal.

Mr. Burke is secretary of the Empire Tobacco Co., Montreal. He said that the company was incorporated in December, 1898, although they had been in business years before.

To E. F. B. Johnston he stated that up to October, 1898, they had sold to the retail trade, but this involved too many accounts and customers and they had decided to go to the wholesalers. There were about 30,000 retailers in Canada handling tobaccoes and it took too many travelers to call upon them. Selling only to the wholesale trade enabled them to distribute their goods quickly, and save in handling, freight rates, the matter of bad debts, etc. They had 400 or 500 accounts. With the wholesalers selling to them did not increase the cost of the goods to consumer, wholesalers or any one else.

Save Profits From System.

"How do you manage to pay the wholesaler his profit?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"From a saving in freight rates, administration, office expenses, etc."

"Did you ever refuse to sell goods to any member of the Guild?"

"No."

"Mr. Curtis, of Port Hope, says that he was prevented from buying tobacco from the Empire Tobacco Co. through the Guild. 'Is that true?"

"No. In 1901 he bought, and 1904 he did not. Curtis has bought no tobacco from us since 1901, although our representative called frequently upon him."

Continuing, Mr. Burke sais: "We had an arrangement with the wholesalers regarding terms, which were individual. We did not know whether they were members of the Guild or not. We sent a circular to all persons who signed our selling contract. In the interest of both the wholesale and retail trade, it was necessary to keep to the list prices."

"The Guild had nothing to do with this Curtis cancellation?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"No."

"Was it necessary to sell at list prices?"

"I think so."

"Was any complaint made to your company, either by wholesaler or retailer, or by members of the Guild, with reference to John Curtis, Port Hope?"

"No."

"Was your refusal to sell Zealands, of Hamilton, brought about through any wholesale retailer or member of the Guild?"

"No."

"Why did you not sell them?"

"Because we thought they were a combination of retailers, and we do not sell to co-operative concerns."

"Who fixed your prices?"

"We did."

"Do you know any way of carrying on a business of the size of the Empire Tobacco Co. without selling to the wholesale trade?"

"No; except we had stores of our own. If we had any other system it would greatly increase the details, expense, etc."

No Arrangement With the Guild.

To Mr. Washington, witness said that after 1898 their business was too big to handle with the retail trade, and they had to go to the wholesalers.

"Did they not approach your president first?"

"Not that I am aware of."

"This idea then just dawned on your people without any suggestion from the wholesalers?"

"Yes."

"Was anything said about co-operative institutions?"

"As soon as the traveler called my attention to the Hamilton house, I told him not to take the order."

"Have you any correspondence with the Guild or its officers?"

"We have letters, but do not recognize them."

"What arrangements did you make with the Guild?"

"None whatever."

"Did you ever come to an arrangement not to sell to the retail generally?"

"No, we offered to cut out the retail."

"You confined yourself to wholesalers with some exceptions?"

"Yes, a few old friends and customers. The guild had no right to complain. We used our own judgment entirely. We reserved our right to sell to the retailer where we thought it advisable."

"In case the retailers' orders were sent through wholesalers?"

"Yes."

"The guild called you down," queried Mr. Washington.

"Yes."

"You claim they had no right to do it?"

"Yes."

Mr. Washington read a letter from the Wholesale Grocers of Winnipeg, complaining to the effect that the Empire Tobacco Co. had sold a retailer named Bentley in Lethbridge at wholesale prices, which was regarded as unfair.

Mr. Burke said that all retailers had to agree to certain prices or they would not get the profit.

Mr. Washington—"I have heard those same glittering generalities for years."

Witness was asked how he had discovered that the Hamilton firm was a combination of retailers. He replied that he had learned it from Bradstreet's and from the representative of the Empire Tobacco Co. in Hamilton. He admitted that the guild had the right to complain if the company sold to retailers, but the company reserved the right to use their own judgment in this matter.

A Practical Case.

"Supposing I had $5,000 cash to buy a carload of tobacco, would you sell to me?" inquired Mr. Washington.

"We might, but it would depend on conditions and our trade in your section, whether you were doing a bona fide business, etc."

"Would you be afraid to do so on account of your arrangement with the wholesalers?"

"No; but on account of our sense of fairness to the wholesalers."

"Did the wholesalers approach you in November, 1904?"

"I guess they did."

"Did you make any arrangement with them then?"

"No."

"Did you agree to take all orders to the wholesale houses?"

"Yes; with a few exceptions."

Mr. Washington here read the minutes of the Dominion Guild's annual meeting in Montreal in which complaint was made that the Empire Tobacco Co. had not treated the wholesale trade fairly, selling in certain cases to retailers.

Mr. Burke said that when the guild waited upon Mr. Davis, president of the Empire Tobacco Co., the members were informed that they were welcome as customers or dealers, but the company would have no relations with them."

Mr. Washington read a circular sent out by the Guild in 1904, to the effect that the Empire Tobacco Co. had not adhered to the exclusive clauses setting forth the terms and conditions. One clause was that there was to be a rebate of five cents per lb. by the company if the wholesalers handled their goods exclusively.

To Mr. Johnston, witness said before the guild was ever thought of the house sold to wholesalers at a rebate, who in turn sold to the retail trade at list prices.

"If the wholesale trade handle your goods what have you to do?"

"We have to give them a profit."

"If you do not sell through the wholesalers, what then?"

"We would have to sell to about 30,000 people altogether."

In further examination it was brought out that the exclusive clause in the agreement had been declared legal, after being investigated at Ottawa, by Judge MacTavish, on behalf of the Government.

A Traveler Speaks.

Samuel Meyers, connected with the Empire Tobacco Co., said he took charge of the Eastern Ontario business in March, 1902. He called upon Mr. Curtis, of Port Hope, who said that he could not sell the goods of the Empire Tobacco Co. He told witness that MacDonald's was all the rage in that territory. He ran the Empire goods down.

Mr. Johnston—"You called on him several times?"

"Yes."

"Is there any truth that when he wanted to buy the goods you refused to sell him?"

"No, sir."

Shredded Wheat Company's Experience.

Hector W. McBean, treasurer of the Shredded Wheat Co., said they distributed their products through the wholesale trade because it was cheaper and more comprehensive. His company have nothing to do with the guild. They stipulated that wholesalers should sell to the retailer at a fixed price.

"Who fixes the prices?" asked Mr. Ambrose, for the defence.

"We do."

"You allow a discount to wholesalers?"

"Yes."

"Do you recognize the guild in any way?"

"No; we sell to every legitimate wholesaler."

"Would you consider it proper to sell to a retailer who does some jobbing?" inquired Mr. Ambrose.

"That would altogether depend on circumstances."

"Would that be affected by the guild?"

"No."

"Do you know of any cheaper way of selling goods than through the wholesale trade?"

"I do not," replied the witness.

To Mr. Washington—"It has been largely our policy to deal only with the wholesalers. We were enabled to effect a reduction in price through having a factory established in Canada and by arrangement with the wholesalers and retailers which resulted in a greatly increased market for our goods. There were complaints about price cutting by the retailers and a deputation of them waited upon us, headed by a wholesaler and we came to a satisfactory arrangement."

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

At the resumption of the hearing in the afternoon Robert Henry, of Windsor, formerly of Brantford, was the first witness called. He stated that he was agent for the Clover Leaf and Maple Leaf brands of salmon and represented the Packers' Association of Vancouver. His association had no arrangements with the Grocers' Guild and the latter had nothing to do with the fixing of prices. The association sold only to the wholesale.

Mr. Washington, K.C.—Did the Guild ever say that they would not buy your goods as a wholesale outfit if you did not come to their terms?

"They never did."

To Mr. Johnston, Mr. Henry said that the Packers' Association of Vancouver consulted with their customers as to the fixing of prices, but allowed no dictation.

Fred. R. Porter, of Toronto, assistant freight agent of the G.T.R., gave evidence in reference to the equalization of freight rates on sugar and other commodities.

The Sale of Salt.

Ernest E. Henderson, of the Canadian Salt Company, Windsor, Ont., was the next witness. Examined by Mr. Ambrose, he said that his firm could not distribute their product as cheaply as the wholesalers could. If they undertook to do it themselves they would have to put up well houses in every city and town to distribute to the retail trade. They shipped only in carload lots. If they sold to the retailers they could not collect their accounts only with a great deal of expense; there would be too many collections.

"Do you sell your salt by fixed price?"

"Yes, absolutely."

"Do you sell to the wholesalers at that list price?"

"We give them a commission or discount."

"Do you make any stipulations?"

"Yes, we do that he sells at the fixed price."

"Have you any written agreement with the wholesalers as to that?"

"We send out instructions to that effect, but have no agreement with them."

"Have you any agreement with the Guild?"

"No, not at present and I never knew whether I had."

"Do you confine your sales to the Guild members?"

"No, we sell to every legitimate wholesaler."

"What do you mean by wholesalers?"

"Men who sell to others and not to the consumer."

"If the wholesalers sold to customers you were not expected to sell to them?"

"No."

"Do you know of any cheaper way to dispose of your goods other than through the wholesale?"

"No, I do not. The price to consumers is lessened that way, and there is no other that I know of."

"Did the Guild ever interfere with you in the sale of your salt?"

"No, and no one else."

"Did any one have any business with you in fixing the price or methods with reference to the sale of your salt?"

"No."

"Did you sell to wholesalers who were not members of the Guild?"

"I did."

"Do you consider the wholesalers the best purchasing power by which your goods could be marketed?"

"I do."

Had Heard of Guild.

Cross-examined by Mr. Washington, witness was asked when he first heard of the Guild and replied four or five years ago.

"When did you first make arrangements to sell to the wholesalers?" asked Mr. Washington.

"In 1893."

"How did you dispose of your goods before that?"

"Mostly through brokers."

"From whom did the suggestion come as to selling to the wholesalers?"

"From myself."

"At whose suggestion?"

"From myself to myself."

"Why did you enter into an agreement then?"

"Simply because it was in the form which we had been doing business."

"Were you allowing the same profit?"

"I think so. Some of them had tried to get exceptional arrangements, and we thought it would be a good thing not to be bothered and have all put on the same basis."

"Is there any agreement of any kind between the different salt manufacturers?"

"None."

The Starch Industry.

George F. Benson, President and Managing Director of the Edwardsburg Starch Company, said that his firm had been in the business for fifty years, and he had been identified with the company since 1886. They did not deal through the retailers directly who could be reached by no other way as effectively as through the wholesale trade.

"Do you know of any way of carrying on the business and giving the consumer the benefit other than through the wholesale trade?"

"None that I know of, except by keeping a large staff of travelers at large expense selling one line, while the wholesaler has travelers selling many lines. The most practical way is to sell to the wholesale trade."

"When did you first hear of the Guild?"

"Since I have been connected with the company."

"Did they never have any dealings with you?"

"Yes, from time to time."

"Had the Guild or the wholesalers anything to do with the prices at which you sold or to whom you sold?"

"Nothing whatever."

Mr. Benson explained that his firm sold to a few retailers who had been purchasers of the company before he had been connected with it, and they kept them on. They allowed the wholesale trade twelve and a half per cent. profit for handling their goods, and his firm paid the freight. The prices were fixed by the company, and if a wholesaler cut the figure, the company wrote to him and tried to stop him, as to slash prices, and allow any wholesaler to do this, destroyed the profit of all their interests eventually and injured the starch business. The wholesalers were met by witness in Toronto as he was told they wanted to see him. They desired more trade discount and the company gave it to them, making the discount fifteen per cent. A list of wholesalers with whom the starch works did business was finally agreed upon. It included the wholesalers, some of whom were not members of the Guild, and a few retailers whom they carried on.

"What difference did it make to you if you sold goods whether a man was a member of the Guild or not?"

"It did not make any difference."

"Who fixed the price list?"

"We did ourselves."

"What about the discount?"

"That was agreed upon after consultation with the wholesalers."

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Blackstock next took the witness in hand.

"You say there are two starch companies doing business in Canada?"

"Yes."

"You had objections raised from a good many sources as to selling goods to retailers?"

"Yes, as the demand was mixed."

"Did you fix the prices yourself?"

"Yes."

"Did you confer with the other company?"

"Yes, we conferred with them."

"How do you pay the wholesalers?"

"By trade discount."

"Your practices are not materially different years before to what they have been since?"

"No, practically the same."

"During that time you were accustomed to grant a trade discount of twelve and a half per cent., you paying the freight?"

"Yes."

"In arrangements by which you fixed prices you eliminate the element of bargaining which results in cutting down prices?"

"My point of view was that the goods should be put on the market at attractive prices."

"In that point of view you allow the wholesaler his profit who is also protected?"

"Yes."

"They are supposed to sell to the retailer and protect him?"

"Yes."

"Now what I would like to know who looks after the consumer in these operations?"

"We try to do so that our goods can be sold to the consumer at attractive prices."

"You tried to protect the consumer?"

"Yes! We try to control our goods."

"In the interest of business you make two divisions, the wholesale and retail. You do not favor one retailer over another?"

"We do not."

"Why do you refuse to sell to retailers?"

"We believe there should be two divisions—wholesale and retail."

"What the wholesalers are trying to do is to compel you to give them a monopoly of the retail trade?"

"Yes! But we are trying to act fairly toward both divisions."

"The arrangement made with the Guild has the effect of altering the natural course of business?"

"Yes, to a certain extent."

Mr. Johnston asked what are the conditions of trade generally?

"If ours are not natural then the conditions generally must be artificial." replied the witness.

"Has the increased cost of starch been the result of your arrangement with the wholesale trade?"

"No."

A Traveler Speaks.

James Morris, traveler for the Empire Tobacco Company, denied that he had refused to supply Mr. Curtis of Port Hope. He had declined to supply Mr. Zealand of Hamilton because his association was a combination of retailers.

In cross-examination witness admitted that now he would not supply a retailer like Mr. Curtis.

The hearing will be continuel all this week.

The hearing was continued on Thursday and Friday, full details of which will be given in next week's issue.

FURTHER PREFERENCE IN BARBADOES?

Legislature Anxious to Increase Trade With Canada.

Recent advices from Barbadoes regarding an action taken some time ago by the Legislative Council, ostensibly with a view to encouraging trade with Canada, are arousing considerable interest here. The Council at its last session adopted a new preferential tariff, providing for reduced rates on certain Canadian products on condition that Canada reduce her rates on sugar below the present preferential tariff.

While Canada is exceedingly anxious to increase her trade with the West Indies, it seems exceedingly doubtful whether any concession such as is suggested in the above report will be made here.

In the first place, the West Indies seem to be treated quite generously already so far as sugar is concerned. Their sugars come in under the British preferential tariff and also have the benefit of the German surtax, and the way these work out to their advantage is shown to a great extent by the fact that only a small percentage of raw sugars is brought in from any other source.

Considering this fact, also, it is thought that not a great deal of advantage would accrue to the West Indies through the granting of a further preference. Those who are in a position to know in Canada say the preference is quite low enough already, and that Canada is showing Barbadoes and the West Indies in general just as much favor, if not more, than is being offered in return.

For the fiscal year of 1907 Canada's exports to the British West Indies, including Barbadoes, for which no separate statistics are available, were $2,042,990, the chief item in this being fish and their products. For the same period Canadian imports from the West Indies were $2,174,392, of which sugar and molasses, with which the above is concerned, formed the major part, amounting to $1,756,859. From this it will be seen that the present tariff appears to have been quite favorable on these grounds.

The real reason Barbadoes hesitates about the proposed reduction on Canadian goods seems to be that that island, and indeed the whole of the West Indies, are so bound up in trade with the United States that they fear that if they granted Canada a preference the United States might close her markets against them. This, of course, would be a serious matter, and naturally, anything that would tend in this direction would be carefully scrutinized by interested parties.

The act above mentioned must be approved by the British and Canadian Governments and also receive the consent of the Government of Barbadoes before it can become operative, and it seems very doubtful whether it will be ultimately passed, for some time, at least.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Richard Smeall is now representing the William Paterson & Son Co., of Brantford, Ont., biscuits and confectionery, in Montreal and Quebec Province. We can tell the Wm. Paterson Co. they are lucky in getting "Dick" and believe he has been equally so.

T. Geddes Grant, of Trinidad, who represents a number of Canadian firms in the West Indies and has done a very worthy work in introducing Canadian products and developing Canadian trade in the West Indies, is at present on a visit to Canada. He was in Halifax last week and is now on his way around the provinces.

Albert Irving, for many years city representative for Salada Tea, and a number of years New York agent for the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., passed through Toronto last week on his way to the Western States. Mr. Irving is now a member of the firm of D. C. Reynolds & Co., 354 Greenwich Street, New York, one of the old established importers and dealers in cheese. Mr. Irving's abilities as a first-class salesman have always been admitted and his present venture will show what he knows about cheese. A good friend of The Canadian Grocer, we wish him success.

W. E. Bidwell, who has been with the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, for a couple of years, is now representing the Imperial Syrup Co., of Montreal, in Western Ontario. This is familiar ground Mr. Bidwell having gotten pretty well acquainted with the buyers on this ground a number of years ago, and he reported business as very encouraging. Besides the company's regular line of syrups Mr. Bidwell is carrying a new line, Ramsay's chocolates, a high grade confection, which is being favorably received. Mr. Bidwell was recently at the factory in Montreal for a few days getting thoroughly in touch with the company's goods.

WINDOW DRESSING FOR CHRISTMAS

Hints and Suggestions on Special Arrangement and Display for the Holiday Season—A Window From Elmira, Ont.

From this time on grocers all over the country should be preparing for Christmas—the big harvest-time of the year. Everything which can be done beforehand to save time and trouble during the busy season should be planned now. One of the matters which come under this head is window dressing. To help along in this work each week from now on, suggestions, either of what someone else has done or something new, will be given.

The photo reproduced this week shows a window which appeared at Christmas time last year in the store of Ruppel & Co., Elmira, and was dressed by the head clerk, Percival Ruppel.

Besides displaying goods which are specially called for at Christmas-time, this window shows a novel method of displaying canned goods. As will be seen, boxes are used to build up the background of the display, and the goods are arranged in and around these. The display is tastefully arranged and should have been effective as a trade drawer. It possesses the qualities of being attractive and at the same time giving some idea of the quality of the goods in the store. The idea used also is something not often seen.

Christmas Window Display From the Store of Ruppel & Co., Elmira, Ont.

STANDARD VS. PRIVATE BRANDS.

A good deal has been written at various times about the advantages accruing to retailers in putting up and carrying private brands of various lines of goods. While at first sight there may appear to be some advantage, it is very doubtful as to whether the ultimate result can be satisfactory.

No retailer can compete with the manufacturer in putting up goods so far as quality is concerned. In the first place, he cannot buy the raw material so advantageously nor can he be sure in most cases of getting the best goods. Again, in the process of preparation the manufacturers' methods are much superior, in many cases chemists being employed and practical tests being made to assure the excellence of the goods.

In another point, that of advertising, the proprietary article has a decided advantage over private brands. Practically all the well-known brands of grocers' sundries on the market to-day have been supported by a campaign of advertising which has made them a household word and assures a continued demand for them.

ONTARIO HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.

Interesting Display of the Province's Products in St. Lawrence Market, Toronto, This Week.

The annual exhibition of the Ontario Horticultural Association is being held this week in the St. Lawrence Market arena, Toronto, and is attracting a great deal of attention from fruit and flower growers all over the province. The exhibition was formally opened on Thanksgiving evening by Lieut-Governor Gibson, his first appearance in his new capacity, who spoke in an appreciative way of the fair as an exhibit of the province's resources.

The change this year from Massey Hall, where the exhibition was formerly held, to the St. Lawrence arena, gives opportunity for displaying both fruit and flowers on one floor, and in this feature is an improvement.

The display of fruit packed in boxes for export, always a most interesting feature, is this year very large and considerable improvement is noted. The exhibits from the various counties are also much in evidence and the showing of the Government experimental farms in different parts of the province occupies its usual place.

The features of the exhibition will be illustrated in more extended form in next week's issue.

NEVER DID RETAIL BUSINESS.

In reporting the evidence in the Wholesale Grocers' Guild case, in the issue of Oct. 30, a statement to the effect that several firms had had difficulty with the guild because they had conducted a retail counter, included the name of Baird & Peters, wholesale grocers, St. John. In regard to this we are in receipt of a letter from Baird & Peters drawing attention to the paragraph and asserting that they have never sold goods to customers nor been interested in retail business in any way. The report was made as carefully as possible and Baird & Peters' name was undoubtedly mentioned at this point in the evidence though it may not have been in the exact connection stated. We regret that any reflection seems to have been cast on them in the matter and are glad to make the above correction.

A FOLLOW UP SYSTEM.

A salesman soon becomes associated in the mind of a retailer with the firm he represents. In the same way, a firm which advertises persistently in trade newspapers soon succeeds in associating its advertising with its salesmen, in the minds of the retailers. It pleases a reader of a trade newspaper to see the advertising of a firm with which he has dealings. It tends to confirm him in the opinion that he deals with up-to-date, progressive people. When he reads the ad. he thinks of the firm's traveling representative. Thus, though personal calls may be more less infrequent, the firm which advertises in the trade press succeeds in keeping itself and its salesmen green in the memory of retailers.

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, Nov. 12, 1908.

POINTERS—
Fish—Advanced.
Cheese—Declined.
Eggs—Advanced.
Butter—Advanced.
Sugar—Steady.
Beans—Stronger.

The colder weather has had a beneficial effect upon trade, and many houses report greater volume of business. There is a general impression among business men that this improvement will continue, but it is thought that the winter will not witness any great revival of business, this movement, however, it is thought, will take place next spring upon the re-opening of navigation. Collections during the week have been fairly good. The week has not been productive of many changes in grocery lines, with the exception of a few products, among which are fish, which has gone forward slightly in price, owing to storms which have crippled the industry somewhat, and has been reflected in the higher prices. Cheese has declined, owing to the lateness of the make and inferior quality of that which is arriving. Eggs are in good demand for this time of the year, and this condition has led to an increase in prices all around. Butter is slightly stronger and in good demand. Fruits have been meeting with fair sale and vegetables have been slightly on the dull side. Feed, flour and rolled oats are unchanged, with fair trade passing. Other lines remain as last reported.

SUGAR—The sugar market has not changed during the week. Prices remain the same and the demand continues to be small.

Messrs. Czarnikow, MacDougall & Co., of New York, in their weekly circular say:

"The optimistic opinions held last week as to the value of raw sugar, and as to the future of the market, received a rude shock this week through the sudden and sharp decline in European markets. The optimism had been based on the weather reports from Europe and on the belief engendered by the rise in Continental and United Kingdon markets, that there would be a serious curtailment in the European production. But the week had hardly opened when prices abroad began to decline and the issue of the factories estimates immediately started a stampede among the bulls. These estimates gave a forecast for convention countries that was only 246,000 tons less than the estimates issued ten days earlier by F. O. Licht, and this 'less' was diminished by a 30,000 tons higher estimate for Russia, etc., which reduced the net falling off from F. O. Licht's figures to 216,000 tons. A reduction of only 3.3 per cent. on crop estimates was hardly enough to support the recent 10 per cent. rise in beet prices and half of this rise was speedily lost."

TEA—The Japan market remains practically the same as at the last report. Black lines remain unchanged also. Business locally has not been very brisk in tea lines. Advices from London regarding China Congous, state: "Business in China Congous has been without special feature. Most buyers had already secured working stocks of the new season's crop, and as the arrivals now are not quite so interesting as the first shipments were, it is not surprising that they should find the demand somewhat quieter. The export trade is dull at the moment, and the plentiful supplies of low grade Indian teas have taken the attention of the home trade off common Congou. Prices of these grades have declined fractionally, but sales are not being pressed by importers. A cable despatch from Hongkong states that the Chinese Ministers of Finance and Agriculture are at present discussing the advisability of making a reduction in the export duty on tea, with a view to recovering some of their lost trade."

DRIED FRUITS—The market is showing signs of settling down to a more solid basis. Buying has not been as heavy as is generally the case at this time of the year. Valencia raisins are somewhat easier this week. Currants are more active this week. Supplies on the spot are small. The cargo of dates by the Tabaristan is now about cleared, and a limited quantity of Hallowi, standard brands, the only grade remaining unsold of Persians, continues offering at present quotations. The quality of the Hallowi this season is unusually fine. Fards have also met with a ready sale. With more seasonable weather sales of all dates will no doubt be largely increased. The Afghanistan, the second steamer from the Persian Gulf, is due in New York within ten days. Quotations are:

Canning, N.S., has a first-class industry known as the Cornwallis Valley Vinegar Works, which are now running night and day. The tanks hold 100,000 gallons, and so great is the rush of orders that the plant will soon have to be extended.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, November 10.—Previous to Thanksgiving I made a careful round of the retail trade in order to ascertain just how far the movement of crop was being reflected in increased business and I find a very general and healthy revival, not only of trade in staples, but in luxuries also. Collections are very satisfactory and merchants one and all report that it is much easier to get money from the banks than it was even a month ago, to say nothing of last year. In fact many of the banks are now seeking investments and they are not always finding them among business men, who in not a few instances, have a sore feeling to the banks owing to the needless stricture of credit last year.

The conditions of retail trade in the West to-day are a splendid commentary on the general stability of business and the real prosperity of the country. Department houses in Winnipeg one and all report trade excellent, it is not confined to one line or one department, some departments are going better than others, but none are lagging behind. The result of the money for the crop reaching the farmers is shown specifically not only in the enormously increased mail order business, but in the number of farmers which every passing day brings into Winnipeg to trade. Some of these come from distant points in Saskatchewan. They have great wads of money; they come to the city to do fall trading, put in a week at the theatres, etc., and have a good time generally. Perhaps the most decided testimony to the increase in business is the fact that every one of the department stores in Winnipeg are to-day considering plans for the enlargement of their business premises next spring.

Another notable feature of trade is the extent to which good jewellery and watches are being bought. This applies not only to people in the city, but people in the country as well. Among the most jubilant merchants are the piano men. They claim that never in the history of their trade in the West have they had so many farmers write and ask what reduction they can have on their account, if instead of continuing instalments, they pay spot cash. They also claim a very large country inquiry for pianos for Christmas, with good offers of cash down or large cash payments on account.

Clothing men and furriers are not quite so cheerful. The clothing and fur departments of the big houses report a splendid trade, but the exclusive clothing and fur houses though encouraged by the outlook, are not finding trade quite as good as they had hoped for. As a matter of fact, there has not been any cold weather yet to make heavy clothing and furs a necessity. With the department stores their heaviest clothing business is through mail orders.

Boot and shoe trade looks good and dealers one and all expressed themselves as satisfied with present business, and more especially with the outlook. Collections are good.

Grocery houses report trade good and the trend of business in the direction of better class goods than formerly. Mail order business is good with these houses and orders from farmers are very generous. Thanksgiving trade has been very good.

It is not surprising that trade in both city and country should be good. Up to the end of October farmers had received at least $20,000,000 on their wheat alone and 75,000 head of export steers had been marketed that must have netted very close to $50 apiece to the men who raised them, many thousand head having averaged $60 and $65. In addition, there is what has already been sold of the oat, barley and flax crop, not to mention butchers' cattle and hogs.

The Canadian West has every cause to be thankful, and the West is thankful.

The wheat market has been one of exceptional strength and steadiness all week. Receipts have passed all former records and are absorbed readily. Shipments from the head of the lakes are large and even should winter shut down as early as Mr. Foster is predicting, there will be more wheat out of the Canadian West before navigation closes than there ever has been before.—H.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Declined 10 cents.
Evaporated Apples—Firmer.
Canned Goods—Selling well.
Collections—Slightly better.

Toronto, November 12, 1908.

The better conditions noted in the wholesale markets last week continue and the situation is certainly improving. There is no immediate reason for this, but the change is quite large enough to be noticeable. Wholesalers are speaking more cheerfully as is only natural with better business in sight, and the whole trade seems to carry an air of greater briskness. Buying is not confined to any special lines but is general and this confirms the idea given by one wholesaler last week, that retailers' stocks are not at all heavy.

Collections as well are reported somewhat more satisfactory and this all is an indication that money is becoming more free as the weeks go by.

The markets are beginning to assume a steadier basis and changes are not at all frequent beyond the decline in refined sugar on Friday there is little to chronicle. Canned goods are passing fairly well, and evaporated apples have a stiffer feeling, otherwise price changes are not at all in evidence.

SUGAR—A decline of 10 cents in refined on Friday, Nov. 6, came as a surprise to local dealers. The raw markets at the time were on a stiffening basis, and in the face of this the decline was rather an enigma. It could scarcely have been done, as is sometimes the case, to stimulate buying, as the season of heavy demand for sugar is over. Just why it happened nobody seems to know.

At present the market is steady with no signs of any immediate change. Prices at time of writing are as follows:

Paris lumps, in 50-lb. boxes	5 65
" in 100-lb. "	5 55
Paris lumps, 5-lb. boxes	5 25

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Syrups in pails are selling fairly well, but business in bulk goods is very quiet. Prices are unchanged.

TEA—Locally the market is quiet, with a firmer feeling in the better grades. Really good teas are quite scarce. There is some demand for fairly good Ceylons and Indians and for Japans about the usual staple call.

COFFEE—Local business continues good, with no change in prices. From primary markets an advance is noted on lower grade Rios. The world's visible supply on Nov. 1st was 16,362,071 bags, as against 15,145,943 bags at the same time last year.

DRIED FRUITS — The filling of Christmas orders is keeping business in this class of goods quite active. Prices all through continue on about the same basis though Valencia raisins, in which there has been considerable cutting for several weeks, are held a little more firmly. Apricots are selling well and demand for the new dates and figs have been very active. Less of these goods than usual was sold on future this year and the wholesale houses are now feeling the effect of this in repeated orders.

BEANS—These are being held a little firmer this week. Large quantities are being sold by the holders and the supply is coming out fast. Wholesalers are quoting as follows:

EVAPORATED APPLES—There is rather more activity in these goods this week, and they are being held a little more firmly as the stock in evaporators' hands is none too large. Wholesalers are quoting at 7½ cents for good stock.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Very fair business is passing in fruits and vegetables, rather better than usual at this time of the year.

TORONTO—Sales of fruits and vegetables continue steady and business is quite active. The fact that retailers bought less on future than usual this year is coming to light in the orders being received now. The lower prices this year seem also to have stimulated demand. Salmon is also selling steadily.

ADVERTISING PAYS.

Lillian Braythwaite Hill, the very successful writer of humorous advertisements, spoke at a businessmen's dinner in Chicago on "Fun in the Ad." Miss Hill began in this way:

"Does it pay to advertise? Well, I should say so. A man came to an editor in the town of Shelbyville one day and asked that question.

" 'Does it pay,' said the man, 'to advertise in your paper?'

" 'Does it pay to advertise in my paper? You just bet it does,' the editor replied. 'Look at Sands, the hardwareman, for instance. Sands advertised for a boy last week, and the very next day Mrs. Sands had twins — both boys.' "

British Columbia Notes

Fruit Growers Pursue Organization.—Vancouver Co-Operative Association Prospering——66-cent Eggs.

VANCOUVER.

November 7.—In making the suggestion that the fruit growers' organizations of the different local districts should form a central association, J. C. Metcalfe, one of the best known growers on the lower mainland, makes a few statements which are worthy of consideration. He says that local unions cutting prices have just as bad effects as when individuals do it, and the market should be controlled by a central body so that the best results could be obtained. One of the greatest factors regulating trade during this season was the American business, and now that British Columbia is making a determined effort to secure the business of its own territory, namely, the Northwest, United States firms are adopting sound business methods. He said he understood that a company of wholesale men were handling American fruit there, and there had been a tendency to use fruit from this Province as a catspaw in deciding prices. It's the same way with fruit as with lumber. The United States dealers have their own home market and use Canadian territory as a dumping ground. Mr. Metcalfe stated that the man who got discouraged at fruit growing was the one who dabbled at something else.

Reports presented at the semi-annual meeting of the Chilliwack Co-Operative Association showed that instead of deficits being the order of the day, there was now a profit. In two months the profit was $289. It is proposed to increase the floor space by 1,300 square feet. The following officers were elected:—President, Charles H. Evans, re-elected; Vice-President, Geo. Marrs. Advisory Board of Directors, J. C. Robertson, W. Hornby, James Bailey, George Bellrose and William Walker. Auditors, G. H. Raine and Jos. Thompson. A. J. Charlton is the manager, he having taken charge about three months ago,

M. E. Davis, of Montreal, directing head of the American Tobacco Company in Canada, was a visitor here this week along with J. McIntyre. The nature of their business was not divulged.

James Young, a grocer of Nanaimo, who is a leading Socialist, allowed his zeal to get the better of his discretion during the election campaign last week and he is now charged with criminal libel by Ralph Smith, member elect for Nanaimo. The cause of the charge is a dodger that was printed and circulated.

L. X. Truxler, who recently started a cigar factory in Vernon, finds business so good that he has had to increase his working staff and keep going night and day to attend to Christmas orders.

Trade generally is rather quiet, and retailers report that business is hardly what it should be at this time of year. Retrenchment among householders is still going on, and this is particularly noticeable in the smaller sale of those articles for which there is a call when times are particularly good.

Eggs this week are quoted at 60c by the special dealers, though they go at 55c at most stores. From now until after Christmas the price will keep high, and will soon be at the 75c mark, which is generally reached in time for the holiday trade.

Winterport Business Opened at St. John and Halifax—Prince Edward Island Starch Factory Burned—Easier Lobster Market—Montreal Notes.

MONTREAL.

November 10.—From time to time mention has been made of the petition which many of the leading merchants of this city presented to the city council regarding the carriage of freight by the street railway. In the latest deliberations of the city council the matter came up for discussion and the council seemed to be in no hurry to deal with the matter, as they have decided not to extend any further privileges to the street railway at the present time. It is felt by some of the aldermen that this departure is so much of an experiment that it is unwise to show too much haste in altering the franchise as it stands at the present time. Other members of the council feel that the street railway received its special privileges in return for its services in transporting the citizens of this city from one place to another, and it would not be keeping faith with the people to subvert its usefulness as a public utility to a specific commercial purpose. The gentlemen who favour the privilege, however, state that freight would be moved at night, when there is a comparatively small passenger traffic. In looking over the names which appear on the petition, their high standing in the community and personal integrity seems to preclude any possibility of them obtaining concessions which would result in their own personal aggrandisement to the serious disadvantage of the public.

Ovide Moreau, fish and oysters, Bonsecours Street, has removed to 223-225 St. Paul Street. The increase in Mr. Moreau's business has been so rapid that this change to larger quarters has been necessitated to accommodate its enlarged volume.

Alex. D. Fraser, president of the Fraser, Viger & Co., Limited, left early last week for a holiday trip to Victoria, B.C., over the Canadian Pacific Railway, and on his return will stop over at Calgary, Edmonton, Winnipeg and other points in the Northwest in the interest of the European houses represented in Canada by his company. Mr. Fraser expects to be away from three to four weeks.

HALIFAX.

November 7.—The local grocery markets are now well stocked and business is considered very good for the season of the year. All the jobbers now have fine large stocks of new dried fruits on hand, such as raisins, currants, figs, dates, etc. Some excellent California dried fruit is also offered for sale. The market has been bare of this class of stock for two years. Trade with the outports is expected to be brisk from now until the closing of navigation.

Butter still continues to move upwards. This tendency is very strong and has prevailed for some time. There has been no let-up in the past week or two and the indications are that the advance will continue for some time at least. With the approach of the cold weather, dairy butter is steadily advancing and many dealers look for further increases in prices. Creamery is selling at 28c for prints, and 26c for solids. Dairy butter is bringing 23c to 25c. Cheese is steady at 13½c for large and 14c for twins. Eggs (case) are selling at 22c for Island and 23c for Nova Scotia.

The apple trade is still very brisk. The local market is well stocked with choice fruit. The quality of the apples offered for sale this season is the best for years. Bishop Pippins are now coming in and also winter varieties. The pippins are clean and bright. The price of all fruit is very reasonable. The Furness line steamer Kanawha, which sailed this week, took away 22,800 barrels for the London market.

The West India line steamer Oruro, which arrived here this week from Demerara and Bermuda, landed twelve hundred tons of sugar for the Acadia Sugar Refining Company.

Graves & Company's factory, Bridgetown, N.S., is having a number of tanks built to store their cider and vinegar. The capacity of the new tanks will be about sixty thousand gallons. In addition to the former storage space, this will give a total capacity of 200,000 gallons. Work on the building is not quite completed, but gangs of workmen in two shifts, night and day, have been grinding immense quantities of apples, which are still continuing to arrive at the factory in carload lots. All the tanks are filled, and manufacturing has ceased until the new tanks are completed.

The entire stock of William Moore, the cash retail grocer, on Water Street, was damaged by water to the extent of $6,000 this week. Mr. Moore occupied the lower floor of the Cook building, and fire started on the fourth storey. Tons of water from seventeen streams poured down on Moore's stock and completely ruined it. Very little of it was removed in good condition. Mr. Moore's loss is partially covered by insurance.

The live lobster market, according to reports, does not bid fair for its usual firmness at the opening of the season this year. This is said to be due to the State of Maine stocks, which are very little diminished at present. The large catch there has been steadily maintained, with every sign of a continuance, and Maine is likely to be a powerful competitor with Nova Scotia in the future.

Prince Edward Island potatoes are coming in very slowly. Several cargoes have arrived, but they were all cleared up early. Island potatoes sold ex-vessel at 30c per bushel. Some excellent Nova Scotia potatoes are on the market, and they are selling at 50c per bushel.

The Halifax milk dealers have increased the price of milk to eight cents per quart. The consumer has registered a strong protest against the increase, but it had no effect. One result has been a very heavy decrease in consumption since the new price went into effect.

The Thanksgiving market is the best for years. Poultry is in abundant supply, and the stock offered for sale is of exceptionally fine quality. Turkeys are selling at wholesale from 18c to 20c; chickens from 75c to $1.50; geese from $1 to $1.50, and ducks from $1 to $1.50 per pair. The turkeys are large, well-fattened birds for so early in the season. Some of the dealers venture the opinion that the market is over-stocked.

ST. JOHN.

Nov. 10.—There were few changes in quotations in the local markets during the past week. Business continues good and the outlook is bright.

The winter port business opens here next week and shipments of grain are now on their way from the West to the elevators here. It is anticipated that the grain shipments this winter will be the largest in the history of the port. With the additional wharves built during the past year or two, there is now accommodation for ten or twelve large steamers at one time.

W. C. Cross of Hall & Fairweather, spent last week along the river on a business trip.

The river steamers are doing a rushing business now, as the farmers all along the river are sending their produce down before the close of navigation.

Turkeys are selling retail at 18c to 22c; chickens and fowl 60c to $1 a pair; geese, $1.10 to $1.40; black ducks, $1 to $1.25; partridge, 70c to 80c: venison, 8c to 12c; and moose meat, 10c to 16c. A moose weighing 1,000 pounds was received by S. Z. Dickson, of the country market, on Friday last.

The starch factory at Hunter River, P.E.I. was burned to the ground with all its contents on Nov. 1. The loss is about $8,000 with insurance of $4,000. The factory was built twenty-five years ago and was recently enlarged and improved. This promised to be its best season, two thousand bushels of potatoes per day being ground up. The loss of the factory will be severely felt by the farmers who had one of the biggest potato crops on record thish season.

Andrew Malcolm, wholesale grocer, on the south wharf, is building a warehouse at the corner of Water and Duke Sts. It will be a three-storey structure and will be used for storing heavy goods.

A break in the water main on Union St. on Nov. 1 caused the Welcome Soap factory and T. S. Simms & Co., brush and broom manufacturers, to shut down for the day.

BELLEVILLE.

Nov. 10.—The local grocers say that business has been quite backward for the past couple of weeks, which they claim is to some extent due to the recent elections, both here and across the line, but now that both these are over they expect business will gradually get down to its normal state, for which they will be truly thankful. It has generally been the case that during a Presidential election the grocers can notice a depression in trade—but the reason is sometimes hard to explain. Another reason, they say, for quiet trade, is the fact that the farmers are taking advantage of the fine ploughing weather and are staying home.

The grocerymen here were not very active in the recent Dominion elections. As one of them told your correspondent, they find all their time occupied in attending to business. However, Alderman Panter, a prominent grocer, has announced his candidacy for the position of mayor at the coming municipal elections and he stands a splendid chance for election. For nine years he has been an alderman and during that time has occupied all the principal offices, the last three years being chairman of public works.

The Christmas fruits are coming in freely, such as raisins, currants, peels, etc., and are of fine quality and nicely displayed in many shop windows.

The Belleville Fruit and Vinegar Company had a splendid season. Their jams and jellies are gaining a splendid reputation, especially among the dealers in this district. Some local grocers this week gave orders for 50 cases each. Vinegar and cider are two other specialties they manufacture.

Arthur Gael has opened up a handsome new grocery on West Bridge St., which is a marvel of neatness and would be a credit to any city's main street. He has a splendid stand and is doing a fine business.

Milk dealers have advanced the price of this commodity to 7 cents a quart and will not promise how long this price will last owing to poor pasture and high prices of feed.

It is your correspondent's painful duty to chronicle the death of Adam Henry, one of the oldest and best known grocers in this city, which took place last week as the result of a stroke of paralysis. A short biography of his life will no doubt be read with interest by many of The Grocer's readers: He was born in Clones, Ireland, in 1838 and was therefore in his 70th year. For 54 years he was a resident of this city, being actively engaged until three years ago in mercantile business here. He was first engaged as a clerk with the late Nathan Jones, then in business with W. W. Jones under the firm name of Jones and Henry. He was later a member of the firm of Robertson and Henry, the three firms being in the dry goods and grocery business. Mr. Henry then went into the grocery and produce business, which he conducted very successfully until he retired as above stated.

Recent travelers calling on the trade here were Mr. Holden, Canada Brokerage, Toronto; Mr. Shields, Quaker Oats, Peterboro; C. A. Drey, Schram Jars, Toronto; John Hodge, Robert Greig, Toronto; C De Carteret, of Kingston; C. Cherry, Todhunter, Mitchell, Toronto.

CHATHAM.

November 11.—Local dealers are complaining of the competition of foreign beans. "Foreign beans are being offered very freely and our beans are a little hard to sell," was the statement made by President N. H. Stevens of the Canada Flour Mills Company last week. "The foreign beans are going to swamp our markets, I'm afraid, and they are also affecting the American markets." In referring to the other markets, Mr. Stevens said that wheat was steady, oats in fair demand, and practically no change in barley. The flour trade the previous week was very good, and the company expect to keep running night and day during the present month in order to fill up all the markets of the tide ports. There is not much encouragement for export flour. Bran and shorts are in good demand. Prices remain about the same, and at present there are few indications of any change.

Chairman John McCorvie, of the Board of Education, had a busy time last week presiding at school functions. Wednesday afternoon he presented the Collegiate Institute medals, and on Friday evening he was chairman at Mc-

Keough School when the memorial portrait of the late principal, James Brackin, was unveiled. Mr. McCorvie was treasurer and an active worker on behalf of the memorial fund. Rumors are current that this highly-regarded grocer will this year be a candidate for the council, which is equivalent to election; though Mr. McCorvie himself has made no definite announcement.

David Marshall, M.P., of Aylmer, president of the Consumers Canning Company, was in the city and vicinity last week on business.

Frank E. Gerber, who recently sold his grocery business to H. G. Reed, has purchased the Jahnke bowling alley, in partnership with D. Donovan.

The numbering of the city will probably be completed in a few weeks, and Chatham will likely have a free postal delivery by Christmas. The numbering of the houses is just in time to facilitate deliveries during the Christmas rush, and will certainly prove a boon to the merchants, who were always its warm advocates.

E. R. Snook is having a cement floor placed in the rear of his grocery.

Butter and egg prices showed a slight decline on the market last Saturday, some butter selling at 23c, while eggs sold for 24c. Poultry is becoming plentiful, and prices, as a result, are reasonable. Competition in the fish business has led to a drop in prices on all lines of fish here, as well as to a larger sale and consumption of fish.

N. Pollard, who has conducted a milk route here for the past three years, has sold out to W. A. McGeachy, of the City Dairy. Mr. Pollard will move to Tilbury.

A very tasty meat window was put in last week by P. B. McQueen, of the Bradley store. The corner window of the store was used, the goods being displayed on a series of five steps or terraces. Excelsior was used as a background, giving a clean and tasty effect. The display included cooked, smoked and salt meats, bacon, hams, cheese, lard, eggs, and similar products, a very comprehensive line being displayed. A display like this means a lot of work, coupled with a certain amount of native talent, but it certainly attracts notice.

The Michigan Central Railway announces that it is prepared to accept freight for Chatham and adjoining points on the C.W. & L.E. electric road, as the result of the freight interchange recently arranged for. The points outside Chatham include Cedar Springs, Dover Centre, Electric, Mitchell's Bay and Wallaceburg.

A. L. Cummings, who recently started a grocery at the corner of Raleigh Street and Lorne Avenue, has brightened up the place considerably. Mr. Cummings styles his place "The Teddy Bear Grocery," a striking painting of childhood's favorite animal adorning the side wall.

Several "corner" grocers have a small side line in receiving orders for a local steam laundry.

With the approach of Christmas the flower season will soon be here. During the last year or two quite a number of grocers have handled flowers on commission for local and outside florists at appropriate seasons.

In connection with the Canadian Packing Company of London, which it was at one time thought would build here instead of rebuilding in the Forest City, it is now stated that Manager E. Reichnitzer will be home from the Old Country about the middle of November, when a definite announcement is anticipated. It is stated unofficially that the company will not rebuild till spring, and that its location has not yet been decided.

The Bothwell and Dresden evaporators, the latter owned by J. W. Grece & Son, last week concluded operations for the season.

The Tilbury Canning Company claim to have made a canning factory record one week recently, shipping 16 cars of canned goods to Manitoba, the Northwest and British Columbia.

The H. J. Heinz Co. will locate their Canadian branch in Leamington, the town having last Friday voted most emphatically in favor of their proposition, the vote standing 555 to 18. The town expends $10,000 on the purchase of a six-storey factory and the instalation of a sewer, and furthermore provides free water and exemption from taxes for 10 years.

Wallaceburg has a new business firm, Peter Forbes having taken in a partner. The new firm of Forbes & Simons will handle both groceries and meats. They propose shortly to erect a modern steel-cement building on the present site.

David McKenzie, of Wallaceburg, is again furnishing bread to the Sugar City, having repurchased his former business from Thos. Hook.

A Leamington despatch states that buyers are out after all the tobacco they can get, and are paying high prices. One buyer was sent out with instructions to pay 12c, and that seems to be the prevailing price. Those who held their last year crop are congratulating themselves on their foresight.

LONDON.

November 10.—Wholesalers report business fair and payments fairly good. Medium teas are advancing and coffees are steady. Raw sugars are very high and refined is unchanged. Christmas fruits are all in. They are of fine quality and the prices are reasonable.

The manager of the Canadian Packing Company is expected back from England shortly. On his return he will wait on the city council to ascertain what inducements that body is prepared to offer the company to re-erect its burned buildings here. On the result of the interview will depend whether the concern will continue here or elsewhere. Chatham and Petrolia have both made generous offers to secure the big pork factory, but the management, it is understood, would much prefer to remain in London.

Geo. Finnegan, the West London grocer, has received word of the sudden death of his only brother, James, which occurred at Vancouver, B.C., a few days ago. The deceased was known in London, where he resided for some time. His wife was in this city on her way home from a visit to Ireland when news of her husband's death reached here.

Through misunderstandings of some sort there was a general mix-up in meeting dates at Sherwood Hall on Wednesday night, four different organizations appearing on the scene at the same time. Among them were the painters, the printers and the retail grocers. The latter were last to arrive and accordingly were left out in the cold. Their meeting will be held later on.

An immense amount of poultry appeared on the market on Saturday and brought good prices. Cranberries are rather scarce, as are oranges. Grapes are practically done.

ST. THOMAS.

November 10.—Both markets Saturday were largely patronized and the heavy demand for turkeys, geese, etc., fully satisfied. Turkeys sold for 15c a lb.; geese from $1 to $1.25 each; chickens from 30c to 50c each. Dairy produce still remains high, butter 30c lb., and eggs 28c to 30c per dozen. Potatoes sold for 80c per bag; apples 20c peck or $1 per bag.

It is a puzzle to know why people are so willing to pay cash to the farmers on the market, carry their purchases home and pay more there than they would in the stores, and these same customers, when they run out of money, come to the grocers, have the goods charged and ask to have them delivered, and if the eggs are bad or broken, come back at the grocer, who meekly makes it right. Who is to blame for this condition of affairs? The grocers themselves.

There was a representative meeting of the Retail Merchants on Thursday evening, Nov. 5, in their hall. General indignation was expressed at the action of the city police magistrate in dismissing the proven charges of peddling without a license brought by Inspector Shaw, and a motion was unanimously carried that the report of Inspector Shaw be sent to Attorney-General Foy, requesting him to take some action to have the statutes properly enforced. The by-law reducing the fee to $25 was passed by the city council.

All the grocers report big business Thanksgiving Saturday, and future prospects as quite bright.

PETERBORO.

On Thursday night of last week a meeting of the retail business men was held to organize a Peterborough branch of the Retail Merchants' Association. A banquet was arranged by a special committee which was held at the Hotel National, and invitations sent out to every retail merchant in the city. About 150 were present and before the meeting closed an association was formed. The visiting speakers were: E. N. Trowern, Toronto, Dominion Secretary of the Association, and B. W. Zieman, Preston, the Provincial President. The former gave the address of the evening, pointing out the benefits to be obtained by the formation of a Retail Merchants' Association in Peterborough. The chairman was R. J. Kingan, and the directors elected were W. E. Conway, J. H. Connal, Alex. Gibson, A. H. Stratton and R. J. Kingan. J. H. Connal is a prominent grocer of the city. The secretary is Wm. Harstone.

The cheese factory season in Peterborough County has been concluded. During the season there have been 40,000 boxes boarded, which are valued approximately at $412,000.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, November 12, 1908.

The cheese market has subsided into a more tranquil mood than that displayed last week. The make is not showing good quality, owing to the lateness of the season. Prices at country boards are lower, and the general tension of the market has been relieved. The colder weather has caused a considerable number of factories to discontinue making cheese and go onto butter, which is more attractive, owing to the high prices prevailing. There seems to be considerable speculation regarding the size of stocks held in this country. Some maintain they are large whilst others contend that they are extremely small. Reports from London state that:

The bears are on top at last after a long period of waiting. They deserve to get there, for they have been a long while in the shade, and have tried hard. The demand has been so contracted that in face of a quite normal importation, stocks have accumulated until there is a respectable total in the warehouses which there is apparently no demand for. As I have often before remarked, when any commodity on the London market is pushed up to a high figure, demand slackens off and if there is no sign of any improvement from the buyer's point of view, sales are bound to drag and prices must come down, and when they do fall they are apt to come down with a crash. In the case of cheese, prices have been against the retailer all the year. He has not seen any profit in handling these goods any time since the new season opened, for whatever the wholesale price may be the shopkeepers are all anxious not to depart from the recognized counter prices and will go on sacrificing profits for a long while before they will put up their limits. When they do, there is necessarily a fall off into consumption and stagnation results. This is what has happened in the cheese market and the fall has been precipitated by highly colored advices as to the make in New Zealand. The first of the new season cannot be on the market for a month yet, but it has been advised as coming, and that has been sufficient, coupled with weak advices from Montreal, to send prices down the hill. The fall of last week did not result in any accumulation of orders, which came in very slowly, and the consequence was that prices had to be put down still further. The top figure is not more than 1s per cwt. down, but undergrades are lower by as much as 2s 6d in cases, the official price being unchanged, but sales known to be made yesterday at well below the quotations. Finest white and colored 60s, 61s to 62s being paid for deep colored. Now there are offers at 58s 6d to 60s landed for finest white and colored. Buyers are so convinced that their time has come now that they will not lay on at the quotations and c.i.f. offers of finest September are met with coldness at 60s to 60s 6d.

Receipts of cheese for the week ending Nov. 7 were 49,678 boxes against 39,806 boxes for the same period of last year. The season's receipts since May 1 up to the present are 1,814,413 boxes against 1,972,577 boxes for the same period of last year. Locally prices are quoted as follows: Easterns, 11½c to 11¾c; Westerns, 11¾c to 11⅞c.

The butter market has shown considerable strength during the week, due to advances at country points. There is considerable cable enquiry for butter, but prevailing high prices here render export trade difficult. Holders on this side of the water are not rushing sales, rather displaying a tendency to hold onto what they have. This feeling is the result of the fact that fine grades of butter are very scarce in England, Denmark, Siberia, the Argentine and Ireland have all failed to supply the necessary amount to satisfy England's requirements. The small amounts arriving from New Zealand and Australia are so unconsequential as to have exerted no influence whatever over the market. Whilst it is generally thought that these countries will supply the English market adequately there are some who are not so sure of this, and the striking delay in arrivals seems to bear out their prophecy. The conflicting reports arriving from the Antipodes convey no definite idea of the exact situation in these countries. It must be remembered, however, that one year ago, the volume of butter arriving from these countries was much larger than that now being placed by Australian and New Zealand shippers in the English market. When this possible shortage in the English market is taken into consideration, together with the fact that there have been enquiries arriving from the West, and local stocks none too large, holders are waiting for developments, and are not keen to rush sales. If the English market is short this winter of its Australian quota the probabilities are good that Canadians will pay handsomely for their butter. Another factor which will also keep the price soaring is the cold weather which always imparts considerable impetus to the market. Advices from London sum up the market as follows:

"The outlook is brighter for the seller than the buyer in the butter market. The price of all imported stuff is much higher than the buyer feels comfortable in paying as it is. But the omens point for the present to a further rise in the quotations as the mild and warm spell seems to have left us for good and the advent of wintry weather has put consumption on a higher plane. Danish has advanced to 132s in London and 133s in Manchester, and other imports have taken a rise in sympathy. Russian has fallen off considerably, and the arrivals of Australian and New Zealand are on a most limited scale. True, the advices to hand point to an enlargened quantity coming along in the not distant future, but the immediate requirements of the population have to be met and the boards are practically cleared at an all round rise of about 2s per cwt. Danish 128s to 130s and 132s here, Irish 120s to 122s, Siberian 110s to 112s, Australian 118s to 122s, Canadian 114s to 120s.

Receipts of butter for the week ending Nov. 7 were 6,666 packages, against 8,063 packages for the same period of last year. For the season since May 1 the figures stand 377,429 packages, against 372,841 packages for the corresponding period of last year. Locally prices being quoted range around 26½ to 27½ for finest creamery solids, and 28 for prints. Tubs are quoted at 20c to 24c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, November 12, 1908.

Conditions in the Canadian packing industry show little change over those reported last week. At this time of the year it is not expected that the export trade will present any very brisk features and the easy markets in Great Britain just now practically assure that the usual conditions will prevail. The Danes are shipping their regularly large supplies into England. The Irish are keeping up to their average record, and the English packers are also helping to keep the market supplied. This, with the curtailed consumption resulting from depressed labor conditions in Great Britain, keeps the market abundantly supplied and leaves little room for a demand for the Canadian product. Demand at home, however, continues fairly good and with supplying this and building up their stocks which were depleted during the late summer, the packers are being kept fairly busy.

Supplies of hogs continue to be fairly heavy at a steady price which is considerably lower than that offered a couple of months ago. $5.75, f.o.b., is the ruling figure here, and this works out at $6 to $6.10 for hogs fed and watered. The hogs coming in, packers report, are of very fair quality, though not particularly heavy.

Strong markets prevail at United States points, as is evident from the following summary from The New York Journal of Commerce:

Irrespective of the quantity of hogs now arriving and influenced almost entirely by the quality of those now arriving, lard has resisted to a large degree manipulation by the professional purchasers on the declines. Hogs for the week averaged a trifle better in weight than for the preceding week, but are still some 80 pounds under the average. The result is a growing scarcity of lard and a brightening outlook for the compound makers. Pork is also in favor, particularly for the higher grades. Statistics place the market in a stronger position than for some time past. The supplies of cut meats on November 1 were reduced to 58,505,000 lbs. against 69,441,936 lbs. on October 1. The stock of ribs declined from 19,328,301 lbs. October 1 to 2,157,000 lbs. new and 3,351,000 lbs. old on November 1. Lard stocks of 83,469 declined almost 50 per cent. for the month, being 42,920 tierces of old and 3,416 new. The world's visible supply of lard decreased in October 45,915 tierces, against 90,531 last year. The total supply November 1 was 207,843 tierces, against 253,758 October 1 and 202,336 November 1, 1907. The run of hogs for the coming week is estimated at 165,000.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—There is an easier feeling in this line owing to increased supplies of hogs. This condition, however, has not been reflected in a drop in prices of the manufactured lines, but this is looked forward to as a possibility soon. There is a fair demand for all lines.

EGGS—There is a strong feeling in the egg market and prices have increased. Dealers state that the demand is larger than usual for this time of the year. There has been some further inquiries for Canadian eggs from English firms this week, but although the offers were very good, they were hardly in keeping with the prices ruling in this market. There has been very few lots of Canadian eggs gone forward to the English market this season, the total exports this season to date only amounting to 4,155 cases.

PROVISIONS—The market still continues easy and there is a good supply. The situation in bacon and hams is easier and prices have dropped about half a cent. As the cold weather approaches the demand for smoked meats falls off and there are more inquiries for fresh meats, backs, plain and pea meal, and for poultry. Lard remains at the same figure and there is a good demand. The supply is reported scarce.

BUTTER—There is a little firmer tone in the butter market, while there has been an elevation from half a cent to two cents in creamery prints and solids. Good creamery butter is reported scarce. For separator butter and dairy prints there is a strong demand and the supply is plentiful. Although some cheese factories which have closed down for the season will make butter during the winter, this will not equal the demand for good creamery, as other creameries, which have been conducted all the season, are now suspending operations. The dealers are awaiting all the creamery product that they can lay their hands on.

EGGS—This is the off season for the Canadian hen, and for the next few weeks she will take a holiday, after a very busy season. New-laid eggs are a rarity, and dealers find it almost impossible to secure anything like an adequate supply, what are offered being 28c and 29c. Fresh stock is still going at 23c, and selects still stand at 25c to 26c.

HONEY—The demand is about the same as last week and continued cold weather would make the market a little firmer perhaps. The prices remain the same.

POULTRY—During the past week there was a big supply of fowl of all kinds—much greater than the demand. Dealers have large stocks on hand, but report that the buying was fully equal to last year, although Thanksgiving day is earlier than usual. The turkeys came in in rather bad shape, many had not been properly fed or fattened, and as a consequence the birds were immature and not up to the standard of former years. Too many farmers follow the practice of feeding turkeys liberally up to the hour they are killed, whereas the birds should be starved for at least twelve hours in order to be in the best shape. Chickens were in a fair condition, but ducks and geese gave no reason for complaint. No finer specimens have ever appeared than those offered for the Thanksgiving trade. Prices are a shade easier and, owing to the great supply, the quotations are liable to lessen rather than increase.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Prices Remain Generally Steady—Advancing Wheat Markets Do Not Affect Flour—Cereals Rather Dull.

With no changes in prices the flour and cereal markets show little of interest this week, the situation being practically the same as reported a week ago.

The grain markets have been somewhat firmer, this being particularly noticeable in wheat, which advanced 3c in Winnipeg on Tuesday and was correspondingly firm in Ontario and Quebec, but this has as yet had no effect on the price of flour which remains stationary. The advance was caused by active export demand from British buyers who seem exceedingly anxious at the present time to purchase large supplies of Manitoba wheat. Millers are not paying a great deal of attention to this as they are exceedingly well occupied with local business.

Cereal business has been a little less active during the week from the standpoint of local demand and as a result manufacturers have been devoting some attention to export business which presents very fair returns. Rolled oats and oatmeal have been going forward fairly freely.

CANADIAN FLOUR FOR MEXICO.

Robert Meighen, of Montreal, president of the Lake-of-the-Woods Milling Company, in discussing the fact that there has been a poor wheat crop in Mexico this year and that inquiries have been made of large grain firms in the West which suggests the idea that a permanent foothold might be obtained in the Southern Republic in the matter of exporting Canadian grain, said: "Interests connected with the flour trade in Canada will not be negligent of any opportunity to foster and increase their trade in Mexico. If opportunity offers our people will be found equal to it. We desire the happiest relations with the Southern Republic, and as the larger half of this continent we would be bound, in regard to any thought of competition, to come out victorious. No doubt, if there be opportunity, as the despatch says there is, for getting into the Mexican market with our grain, our people will be on the alert. We have the energy and the capacity to take opportunities by the hand."

By the collapse of a big wholesale warehouse in Edmonton, considerable damage was done. Besides Foley, Lock & Larson, whose entire stock was precipitated into the cellar and almost completely destroyed, the Oscar Brown Company's banana house was damaged considerably, and the P. D. Armour agent, F. T. Fisher, manufacturers' agent, and Nicholson & McCauley, wholesale grocers, are also heavy losers. The damage is yet unknown, but that it will be over $100,000 is almost certain.

OHIO CANNED GOODS STANDARD.

At the conference of the Western Packers' Canned Goods Association, held at Chicago recently, the matter of standards for canned goods came in for a good deal of attention. One point which came out which will be of interest to Canadian packers of canned goods was the reading of the standards called for in Ohio, by Secretary Wiley. The standards for peas were given as follows :

Fancy—Cans to be well filled ; peas covered with clear liquor ; size uniform; good flavor and absolutely tender.

Extra Standards—Cans to be well filled ; peas covered with clear liquor; reasonably tender ; size uniform and of good appearance.

Standard—Cans to be fairly well filled ; peas may be slightly hard ; fair liquor may be more or less cloudy but not thick ; size fairly uniform, and to comply with the national pure food law.

Grading as to Size—Petit pois or size No. 1, sieve 18-64 ; extra sifted or size No. 2, sieve 20-64 ; sifted or size No. 3, sieve 22-64 ; June, or size No. 4, sieve 24-64 ; marrow or size No. 5, sieve 26-64.

The corn standards were given as :

Fancy—Cans to be well filled ; must weigh not less than 23 ounces gross ; stock absolutely young and tender and of natural color ; medium moist and practically free from foreign substance, such as silk, cob and husk. Packed to conform with the national pure food law.

Standard—Cans to be well filled : must weigh not less than 23 ounces gross ; stock reasonably tender and free from hard particles ; natural color and packed to comply with national pure food law.

The tomato standards were also given as follows :

Fancy—Are to be packed from whole, red, ripe tomatoes and to weigh not less than 38 ounces gross and to contain not less than 20 ounces of fruit, exclusive of juice. Packed to comply with the national pure food law.

Standard—The gross weight of the can shall not be less than 36 ounces, and the can must contain not less than 18 ounces of ripe fruit, exclusive of juice, not necessarily all red, and to be packed in accordance with the national pure food law.

Beat it if you can.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Holiday Trade Made Fairly Good Business at the Week-end—New Mexican Oranges—Heavy Potato Shipments—Mild Weather Affects Demand for Fish.

These markets generally have shown fairly brisk business during the week, with excellent demand for most of the staple lines.

In fruits the cold weather is resulting in more active buying in fancy lines. Mexican oranges and Messina lemons are the newest arrivals and are stimulating some little interest. Early cranberries are somewhat easier as the quality turned out to be a little off.

Heavy shipments of potatoes appear to be the feature of the vegetable markets, dealers being anxious to get the supplies transferred before the cold weather brings on danger of freezing. The less hardy vegetables are rather firmer in price.

Fresh lake fish will be off the market this week in consequence of the close season. They will still be procurable frozen, however. The mild weather has been rather hard on the fish business but a cold snap will soon make itself felt.

FISH—Some lines of fresh fish are higher this week owing to a scarcity. This is the result of storms which have disrupted the industry. Season for lake fish is finished. In smoked lines haddies are scarce and demand is increasing. New bloaters are now coming in. The colder weather is having a favorable effect on the oyster market which is improving in demand. Other lines remain about the same.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The past week has been a fairly satisfactory one in the fruit line. The feature of the week is that Mexican naval oranges have reached here and there is a brisk demand for them. These oranges are nice and sweet and of good color. The early Florida oranges coming in from N. Y. are very good and there has also been a fair demand for them. Messina lemons are on hand and have been for some days. There has been a strike in the packing houses in Messina which has delayed shipments somewhat but still enough have been forwarded to meet the demand. Almeria grapes are selling well and as the cold weather comes steadily on, prices will slightly increase. Early cranberries have proved to be a little soft, and are being offered cheap in consequence. Some houses report that there has been a good demand for the Nova Scotia variety while others have not handled them at all. Late berries are of excellent variety and, as the Christmas season draws near, inquiries for them will increase. There is very little doing in bananas and shipments are not heavy. What have arrived are well ripened and of good color. In pears, while there are lots of them they are hard to sell at this season of the year. Canadian Keifers are disposed of at 25c to 30c a basket, but the demand is limited as the variety is too watery and not much sought after.

VEGETABLES—The feature of the week is the fact that, while there are plenty of potatoes in the country, the shipments during the past few days have not been heavy. This is due to the fact that, owing to the cold weather or threatened cold spell shippers do not care to take chances on the vegetables being frozen. All cars have to be lined and a fire kept up in order to prevent the possibility of potatoes being frost-bitten. The market is a little firmer this week for Ontario potatoes while for New Brunswick Delawares it is somewhat easier. Tomatoes are pretty high in price and some dealers report a scarcity of cabbage. Generally speaking there is plenty of the hardy variety of vegetables and there has been an ascent in prices in some cases.

FISH—This is the last week for lake fish fresh. They will be carried just the same but will be frozen instead of fresh or in other words, kept in cold storage. Trout, white fish and finnan haddie are the leaders. The fish market has been rather dull during the past three or four days due to the mild weather. When a good cold snap visits us the demand is very brisk as people then partake of a great deal more piscatorial food. The oyster market is fairly active, extra selects leading. Colder weather will result in a much greater demand for the bivalves as it appears inherent in human nature not to resort very largely to fish or oysters when the days are balmy.

FRUIT GROWERS IN CONVENTION

The convention of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association was held in the City Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 10 and 11. The sessions were largely attended and several matters of much interest were treated.

On Tuesday President A. W. Peart, of Burlington, in opening the convention, referred to the excessive damages done by the codlin moth during the past season, and the efforts that had been made to suppress it. Judging by the results obtained from systematic spraying there is a growing hope that it may be controlled. The speaker stated that he had seen orchards of Baldwins that had not been sprayed, where the ground was literally covered with these moths, and where all the apples were wormy.

M. Smith, of Burlington, made some rather severe comments on the apple buyers of Ontario. There were more irresponsible men, he said, among apple buyers than among any other class of business men in the country. London and Liverpool houses were now shutting down on them, thus limiting their purchasing capacity. If these firms would only shut down on them further the buyer would purchase fewer apples, but use more judgment in buying, and farmers, finding that there was not as much demand for their fruit, would have to exercise more care in growing.

E. D. Smith, of Winona, spoke of the hold Californian fruits are getting in the western markets. If Ontario growers were to hold their own in the western markets against Californian fruits, he said, they must either have a higher tariff or lower express rates. He looked for a great outlet for their fruit in the Northwest, but unless the absurd express rates on peaches and plums were lowered they would be knocked out in the Manitoba market by the Californian fruit.

Reporting on conditions in the Toronto fruit market, H. C. Fisher, of Queenston, emphasized the value of Toronto as a fruit centre. The population of the city was made up of genuine Canadians, who loved things Canadian, and were willing to pay a high price for a first-class article put up in first-class shape.

To fight the apple maggot, or railroad worm, Professor William Lochhead of Macdonald College, St. Anne de Bellevue, advocated clean, cultural methods and the destruction of all fallen fruit.

S. H. Rittenhouse, of Jordan Harbor, aroused an animated discussion by his paper on "The Handling of the Strawberry Plantation."

At the night session Prof. R. Harcourt, of the O.A.C., Guelph, and Prof. M. B. White, the pathologist of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, contributed valuable papers.

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Interesting Information for Merchants and Clerks Regarding the Goods They Are Handing Over the Counter Every Day.

Boston Beans.

In the city of Boston alone about 32,000,000 quarts of baked beans are eaten annually, to say nothing of the accompanying pork and brown bread. There are factories or bakeries which produce nothing but baked beans from one year's end to the other. One of the largest of these, which supplies restaurants wholly, bakes 14,000 quarts a week. Other bakeries furnish brown bread also while nearly every bakeshop that makes bread, pastry and pies also bakes beans several times a week.

There are bakeries with ovens that will hold 2,000 quarts each. In 1904 Boston spent about $8,247,842 for beans before they were baked. There were 68,000 barrels received in the city, or, 15,000 pounds more than were used in 1903.

Each year the consumption has been steadily increasing, and 1908 will find the bean bill of the Hub close to $10,000,000, on the basis of about 600,000 population, being an average of about thirty-seven quarts to every individual. But as infants and many others of the inhabitants do not eat baked beans, the average consumption per bean eater is, of course, much greater.

Taking the average height of a Bostonian as five feet six inches and the height of a beanpot as ten inches, one can easily figure that a Bostonian in a year eats more than two and five-sevenths times his own height in baked beans and also more than his own weight. In restaurants there are twelve plates of beans served from each pot of two quarts. Boston pays for baked beans in a year the price of two of Uncle Sam's modern battle ships.

"Boston draws its supply of beans largely from New York, Michigan and California," says a bean expert. "Very few are now raised in New England, though once they were a staple. There was a noticeable scarcity recently on the Boston produce market, because last year's crop was almost exhausted before the new crop arrived. The wholesale price went up more than a dollar a bushel, thereby greatly lowering the margin of profit on a ten cent plate.

"Imagine the horrors of a possible bean famine in the bean metropolis of the world. With all the bean crop raised in the United States it becomes necessary to draw more largely upon Europe every year. Boston imports beans largely from France, Austria and Italy, particularly when the American crop is short. Last year the American crop was considered a failure, so Boston was forced to import more than half its needed supply from Europe.

"The duty on beans is forty-five cents a bushel, and it is only when the market price rules high here that it pays to import them. It will readily be seen that the baked bean industry of Boston is a big factor in the city's activities and wealth. An army of men lives by the baked bean industry alone."

"Do other people—foreigners—learn to like them?"

"Dwellers in Little Italy and the West End take as kindly to baked beans as do the natives of New England stock," was the reply. "In fact, baked beans acquire a charm for people of all nationalities who come to live in Boston permanently, and are eaten out of curiosity by those who come temporarily. Every time a convention is held here, people from all parts of the country make a dash for the nearest restaurant and call for the baked beans of which they have heard so much. One bakery in the heart of the Italian quarter turns out one thousand quarts daily, entirely for Italian consumption."

Outside of the restaurants Saturday is the great bean day. At the latter places one can get baked beans at any time of day or night. The preparation and baking of beans is an interesting operation. In establishments where beans only are baked, it is done on a huge scale. They are put to soak and parboiled in great kettles that hold two or three bushels. Then the earthenware pots, varying in size from one quart to two gallons, are filled from the big kettles.

"We New Englanders say," said an enthusiast, "that no one outside this section really knows how to bake beans. Some New Yorkers bake them in open pans and so burn the beans on top, while the ones underneath come out white livered and without flavor. To get the real New England flavor they must be baked in earthenware. Only in large establishments is it necessary to parboil them. Home baked beans are first soaked in water over night."

The following recipe is considered to be the best:—To one quart of beans, pea beans or mediums, yellow eyes, kidney or other variety, use one pound of pork (bean pork, lean and fat in streaks, with a solid piece of fat on top), two tablespoons of molasses, salt as needed. Fill the pot of beans with hot water and bake all day, adding hot water as it evaporates from the top, keeping the top fairly well covered with water. The pork should be cut in half, one piece being placed among the beans, half way down, and the other half on top. Some people put an onion in the middle. Sometimes a little mustard is added.—New York Commercial.

Tobacco Growing in Canada

Interesting Points in the Development and Early History of the Industry—Some of the Difficulties of Preparing the Product for the Market—Growers Not Skilled in Final Processes.

By Joseph Picard, President the Rock City Tobacco Company, Quebec.

The cultivation of the tobacco plant has reached such proportions in the Dominion of Canada, that it now ranks among one of the great industries of our country. Until a comparatively recent date the cultivation of tobacco was limited to the French-Canadian farmer, who with characteristic thrift raised his own tobacco, as well as his potatoes and other agricultural products. Soon, however, the farmer's son left the parental roof for the village, town or city, to follow the life of a mechanic perhaps, or something else. Like any country boy, he may have left some of his country manners behind, but he did not leave his taste for the tobacco of his father's fields, and in this way a demand for this article sprung up in the towns and cities, and dealers were forced to keep it. Then the father commenced to raise a little more than was sufficient for his requirements, and this surplus found a ready sale.

The Pioneers of the Industry.

Thus we observe that the French-Canadian people have been the real pioneers in this industry. Of late years the Government has recognized its possibilities, and have gathered an immense amount of information relating to its cultivation, which has been distributed among the farmers of Canada. In consequence of this the country has become to some extent over-supplied with the product. In view of this fact other markets are being considered, where the possibilities of establishing a connection are not too remote.

The struggle which Canadian tobacco has had to win popular approval has been a strenuous one, but now it seems to be fairly well established in the public favor. For many years the use of French tobacco as it was called, was limited to people of this nationality. There has been a strong prejudice against the product, which has arisen not from any real defect in the product, but rather from the fact that the tobacco was raised in this country, where it was supposed its cultivation could never be successfully carried on. Many people will pay a larger price for an article if it is imported whether or not it possesses any additional merit over the domestic product. This fact, however, must be borne in mind, that Canadian tobacco will always possess a distinctive flavor just as the tobaccoes of other countries have their own peculiar qualities. This difference, however, should not be regarded as a mark of inferiority when the plant is grown under healthy conditions, and the proper measures are observed in curing it.

At the present moment if a general classification of tobaccoes is presented to our mind, we think of Havana tobacco for cigars, of Virginia for the pipe, and Turkish for the cigarette. By a process of evolution these various products have been found to be most useful for the above enumerated purposes.

Variable Climate a Difficulty.

The cultivation of tobacco is always difficult under all conditions, but particularly so in Canada, where the climate is subject to so many variations and changes. This, however, does not preclude the possibility of growing an excellent tobacco in Canada. While we do not pretend to grow as fine a quality for certain specific purposes, as for instance, the Havana product for cigars, or Virginia leaf for a certain grade of fine cut, we can say, that regarded in a general way, the Canadian product ranks favorably with all of them. If one passes through a field of Canadian tobacco and then through a field in the United States, it will be observed that our product in its external appearances is quite the equal of that grown by our neighbors to the south.

JOSEPH PICARD,
President Rock City Tobacco Co., Quebec.

Processes of Preparation.

The farmers of this country understand the cultivation of tobacco thoroughly. If the ground to be cultivated is properly ploughed and harrowed and rendered fit for the reception of the seed the crop is assured with ordinary care.

The most difficult part of the operation which renders tobacco fit for the market is the drying, sorting and proper packaging of the product, and it is in this branch of the business that the farmer assumes in a measure the duties of manufacturer as well as grower. The tobacco is cut and taken to the drying houses, where it is hung up. The method of dessication is the most difficult and it is in this process of the operation that the Canadian farmer is the most deficient. The leaves are hung up a certain distance apart on racks provided for the purpose. The distance apart, and consequently the amount of tobacco hung in each house, varies according to the variety of the tobacco and the result which it is desired to obtain. This operation extends over a couple of months and is the most difficult of all, owing to the many changes which our climate undergoes, which consequently render the possibility of keeping a constant temperature in the drying houses impossible.

The sorting, fermentation and packaging processes should be left to experts, because it cannot be supposed that the grower understands all the whims and foibles of a discriminating demand, but here in Canada these processes are carried on by the grower.

Different Processes in United States.

In the United States the grower dries his tobacco, and it goes to a middleman, who puts it through the process of "rehandling," where it is sorted, classified, fermented and properly dried and is packaged in a special way for the special purpose for which it is to be used.

From this it will be seen, tobacco rarely reaches the market until a year at least has elapsed. It has to go through a preliminary drying and fermentation process on the farm, and then a second operation of drying and fermentation, sorting and packaging for the market. All of these operations require considerable time, so it is quite easy to see how a year could be consumed in properly preparing the tobacco for the market.

The Fermentation Process.

The second process of fermentation is most important, because the ultimate value of the tobacco depends upon the success with which this operation is carried out. This secondary operation is known as the "natural process." From this it will be seen that the United States grower has a distinct advantage over his Canadian confrere because the products reach the various manufacturers in the highest state of excellence compatible with the variety, through the services of the middleman, or as he is sometimes called, a "rehandler," This personage has nothing to do with the growing of his leaf, but confines his attention to the proper treatment of the tobacco before it goes to the manufacturer.

Some Early History.

The industry in Canada can be traced back for fifty years in the Province of Quebec. The cities of Montreal and Quebec divide the honors for cultivating it first, as it was grown in the vicinity of these cities at about the same time. Among the first to see its possible sphere of usefulness beyond the small patch in the kitchen garden for home requirements were W. Lemesurier and B.

Make a Permanent Customer with Every Sale

You can do it if you handle "Sealshipt" Oysters. The lover of good oysters never forgets their piquant half-shell flavor—so fresh, distinctive and suggestive of the briny ocean depths.

"Sealshipt" Oysters

have this delicious flavor because immediately they come out of the sea, they are put into sealed cans with ice around the cans but not touching the oysters. They keep fresh, wholesome, natural sized—no water to bloat them—no ice to bruise them with its jagged edges. No dust or germs can get to them.

"Sealshipt" Oysters will give you increased trade among the class of customers you most desire to have come into your store.

IT PAYS to sell "Sealshipts." Write for particulars, how to become an agent.

Houde & Co. To W. Lemesurier, it is said, belongs the honor of first manufacturing Canadian tobacco. The Chevalier Brocher, of Quebec, was another pioneer of the industry in Quebec. In Montreal Sir William McDonald, who is sometimes called the King of Tobacco, early recognized the possibilities of the native leaf. The industry reached such proportions that Sir John Macdonald included it in his National Policy as a national asset which required protection from the foreign producers. This immediately gave the industry an increased impetus and from then till now it has made gratifying progress.

While this statement is true of the entire history of the tobacco industry taken together, some phases of its cultivation have not been so satisfactory as might have been expected. After Sir John accorded the industry the protection which has been mentioned, naturally the foreign leaf became more expensive and from economic reasons many commenced the use of Canadian tobacco. It was at this time that the weak spots in its production were discovered. When the limelight was turned full on it was found that the intermediary stage in the total process was the weak point. It will be seen, however, that this is not beyond remedy, as it depends almost entirely on the skill of those who treat the tobacco and prepare it for the market. We now appreciate the fact that there is no natural element in our soil which would render its growth impossible or mediocre, but rather, we have every reason to believe that it reaches a most luxuriant development here. The struggle of the American Tobacco Co. for supremacy in this field of activity, the possibilities of which they were early to recognize, is a matter of current history.

Taking all things into consideration, it is obvious that the cultivation of tobacco will prove of immense value to Canada from a hygienic, as well as an economic, viewpoint.

SPECIALTY MANUFACTURERS ARE COMPLETING ORGANIZATION.

The American Association of Specialty Manufacturers, which was formed at New York a few weeks ago, was further perfected in its organization and set into permanent activity at a meeting of the executive committee held on Saturday, Nov. 7, at the rooms of the New York Association of Manufacturers' Representatives.

The board furthered the organization by the choice of the following officers, the president to be chosen later:—First Vice President, Andrew Ross; Second Vice President, Louis Runkel; Third Vice President, A. J. Porter, of the Shredded Wheat Company, Niagara Falls; Secretary, J. T. Austin, of New York.

Since the former meeting, when twenty members were enrolled, there have been added to the membership about as many more, and others are in communication with the secretary regarding joining. It is proposed to confine the activities at first to recruiting members till the association is representative and has strength to carry out the plans which will then ensue. Meetings will be held in various of the larger cities in the efforts to recruit the members. The dues will be $100 a year, with $50 as the initiation fee.

ALGIE'S MILLS AT ALTON, BURNED.

Members of the Travelers' Snack Club and other drummers who visit Alton will regret to learn of the burning of the Algie Woolen Mills on Friday. The fire broke out shortly after seven o'clock and owing to a high wind the flames spread rapidly and for a time threatened the town. The main building of the mill was burned and several adjoining houses suffered to a slight extent. About fifty hands will be out of employment. Wm. Algie, the owner of the business, was in Toronto at the time of the fire.

RETAIL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION NOTES.

James Eadie, provincial organizer for Ontario of the Retail Merchants' Association, is in Port Hope this week where he is interviewing the merchants and organizing a branch of the association.

On Wednesday evening of this week E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, spoke at a largely attended meeting in Guelph. B. W. Ziemann, of Preston, president of the Provincial Board of Ontario, also delivered a stirring and interesting address. The business men of the Royal City gathered around the festive table and after enjoying dinner, a most profitable time was spent in matters of mutual interest.

P. C. Larkin, of the Salada Tea Company, Toronto, who has been on a visit to the New York, Boston and Montreal branches of the company, returned home last week. He found business in a promising condition across the border and the feeling hopeful as the result of the Presidential election.

The Canadian Grocer's Christmas Competitions

Window Dressing Contest

With a view to helping our subscribers and to show what may be done along the lines of special Christmas Display, The Canadian Grocer again this year, offers prizes for a Window Dressing Contest.

Following last year's precedent, which proved so successful, contestants will be divided into two classes:

1. Grocers and Grocery Clerks in city stores.
2. Grocers and Grocery Clerks in the country districts.

Prizes of $7.00 and $3.00

First and Second, respectively, are offered in each class, $20 in all.

All that is necessary to enter the contest is to send a fair-sized photo of one or more of your Christmas windows, with a description of it and name of the person who is responsible for the display, to us. The contest will close on December 31st.

Address the photo to "Editor, Canadian Grocer" and mark it "Christmas Window Dressing Contest."

Advertising Contest

A regular department in this paper is devoted to advertising for grocers, telling them how to advertise and emphasizing the fact that their local newspapers are the best medium for this purpose. To find out what effect these articles have had and to further stimulate the use of this method, which we consider most important for grocers, a Christmas advertisement contest has been arranged.

Prize of $5.00

Most up-to-date grocers, even some who use newspaper space at no other time of the year, do so at the Christmas season with a view to booming holiday trade. We want to get copies of these advertisements. The advertisement submitted should be about groceries, confectionery, etc., for the holiday season. All that is necessary is to forward one or more clippings from your local paper to us, with the name of the writer of the advertisement. The award will be made by an advertising specialist and will be announced, with a reproduction of the prize ad., shortly after the close of the contest. The last day for receipt of ads. is December 31st.

Address advertisements to "Editor, Canadian Grocer," marked "Advertising Contest."

QUOTATIONS FOR PROPRIETARY ARTICLES

Quotations on staple articles, prepared by our own staff, will be found in the market reports in the centre of the paper. The following are prices of proprietary articles which are supplied by the manufacturers or their agents, who alone are responsible for their accuracy. For charges for inserting quotations in this department apply to Advertising Manager, The Canadian Grocer, at our nearest office.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

SODA CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

The Turned-Down Corners

Here and there in the Ledger of Life you have turned-down the corner of a page for remembrance sake—you'd forget something if the turned-down corner wasn't there.

¶ To-day turn down a corner deep and wide to remember this one sure fact "quality is remembered long after price is forgotten." Every time you come to that particular page—remember, every time you try to sell inferior quality, think of the turned-down corner. What it stands for and what it really means to your success.

No! They'll run you into bankruptcy in a jiffy if you'll let them. And still you can't get too independent with this class of trade—it is good money when it does come.

ALLISON COUPON BOOKS

point the way to safety. They guard against loss, they hold the credit customer in check, save time, money and trouble.

How They Work

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

Canadian Canners, Limited, Hamilton

Purity is an absolute essential in canned fruits and vegetables. The public have been pretty thoroughly educated up to a full appreciation of the harm that may come to them through the use of impure canned goods. Thus, there is a well-defined demand for goods that a grocer is willing to guarantee absolutely pure.

Profit is a natural outcome of handling pure goods. The best trade of your locality is bound to flock your way if you take pains to secure a reputation as a "pure food" grocer. One of your biggest staple lines is canned goods and we can prove to you that is the brand of absolute purity. Our stock is selected by experts, and none but the finest class of fruits and vegetables ever pass their rigid inspection. Our factory is all that could be desired—clean, sanitary, up-to-date, well-manned by clean, efficient people. Be on the safe side—ask your jobber for Old Homestead Brand.

TIRED OF SUCH POOR 25c. TEA

She Went to His Competitor for Something Better

Do you know that while you are hunting for some kind of a tea to sell at 25c.—anything that "will do"—you are slowly but surely driving your trade into your wide-awake, up-to-date competitor's store? If you have no complaints, don't be too sure your customers are satisfied. It is easier to try another store.

A prominent grocer told the writer a short time ago that Mrs.——— (his competitor's customer) came to his store and said she did not like the 25c. tea she was getting from her grocer. He realized his opportunity and sold her a 30c. tea, and has sold her ever since.

Her grocer was anxious to please her by selling her a 25c. tea, even when he knew it was very inferior to what he had sold her in the past, and his competitor got his customer.

WHY DON'T YOU SELL A BETTER TEA?

Be honest with your customers--explain the advance in price—talk quality instead of price, and don't let your competitor sell your customers their tea.

When recommending Red Rose Tea or Estabrooks' Bulk Blends to your customers you can depend on them being the same high quality as in the past.

Just write a Post Card to-day for a case of tea or samples of any grade.

Evidence Completed in the Guild Case

The Argument Will Be Heard at Osgoode Hall in About Two Weeks' Time—Last Thursday and Friday Saw Important Development in Case for Defence—Prominent Witnesses Explain Statements Made in Crown's Evidence—Mr. Beckett Denies Charges of Indictment in Toto.

The whole story, or all that is likely to be, is told. With the close of the cross-examination of H. C. Beckett, chief witness for the defence, on Friday afternoon last, the evidence in the Guild case was complete. All that remains now is the argument and the judgment, and this will probably come in the course of a couple of weeks.

In last week's issue the evidence of the defence witnesses up to Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 11, was given. Thursday and Friday were most interesting and important days in the case, from the fact that the chief witnesses for the defence were put in the box and again, because statements made by crown witnesses in the early days of the trial, which looked rather damaging for the defendants, were in almost every case either explained or denied.

Thursday saw the examination of W. H. Rowley, president of the E. B. Eddy Co., Hull; R. L. Innes, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Canners; E. M. Trowern, Dominion secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association; Col. John I. Davidson, of Davidson-Hay, Toronto, A. H. Thompson, of the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal; H. N. Kittson, of W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, and Thos. Kinnear, of T. Kinnear & Co., Toronto. On Friday H. C. Beckett was put in the box at the opening of the morning sitting and his examination continued until he was given up in despair by Mr. Blackstock at about the middle of the afternoon.

Mr. Beckett's evidence was most interesting, throwing a great deal of light on the inner history of the Guild, and the way its work has been carried out and denying, practically in toto, all the charges in the indictment.

The Eddy Co. and the Guild.

W. H. Rowley, president of the E. B. Eddy Co., Hull, was the first witness on Thursday morning. He told of the advantages the company gained by distributing their product through the wholesale trade, and said that they found that system to be much more economical. Examined by Mr. Osborne, he told of certain "loyalty price lists," under which the company sold to the wholesale trade.

"Are these selling conditions the result of negotiations with the Guild?"

"No. I suppose I am the father of the system. It was done 20 years ago at the act of our own company."

Examined by Mr. Washington.

"Have you had any negotiations with the Guild?"

"Not directly."

"Do you know of the price committee?"

"Yes."

Continuing, Mr. Rowley said: "Our arrangements have not been with Guild at all. We have had one with each individual customer, what we call "privilege customers'."

"Did the Guild negotiate with you as to cutting retailers off?"

"No!"

"Have you had any negotiations with Mr. Beckett?"

"Yes. but not as a member of the Guild."

"Did he ever ask you to strike retailers off?"

"I'm not quite sure."

"Is the policy you are pursuing now the same as you initiated twenty years ago?"

"Substantially so."

The Canners' Arrangements.

R. L. Innes, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Canners, Hamilton, explained why it was to the advantage of that company to do business through the wholesale trade, because it obviated the necessity for employing a staff of travelers and the machinery of distribution.

"Did you ever try travelers?"

"Not since the present organization has been made."

Mr. Innes explained that the company could not do business with retailers because of the business system involved.

"What would be the effect to the consumer?"

"Higher cost."

The witness told something of the composition of the company and of the number of canning factories it represented.

"You are then in a position to dictate the prices of goods?"

"Practically so."

After telling of an arrangement made with the wholesale trade by which the Canners agreed to pay a discount to the house handling only their goods, Mr. Washington asked:

"Had the Guild anything to do with this arrangement?"

"No, it was our own."

Continuing, Mr. Innes said: "There is no reason why any member of the trade should not have bought anyone else's goods."

"How did you hold them to the agreement?"

"A declaration was secured from the trade to the effect that the arrangement was being carried out."

"You entered into an agreement with the Guild?"—exhibiting an agreement alleged to be with the price committee.

"Not exactly."

"What did the price committee want?"

"I expect they wanted a fair profit on the goods they were handling."

"Were you in a position to deal independently of the Guild in the matter?"

"Yes, and we did so act."

Questioned further along this line Mr. Innes said: "We never knew who were members of the Guild. The test was that the firm was strictly wholesale."

"Did you sell to any retailers?"

"Yes, to one; but discontinued this about four years ago."

"The retailers objected?"

London Grocers Step In.

A letter was read from Harry Ranahan, president of the London Retail Grocers' Association, complaining that the Canadian Canners were selling to retailers in that city and threatening trouble if the practice were continued.

"What effect would it have if sales were made to the retailers?"

"It would demoralize the business."

"Were you carrying on the same business methods since 1904-5?"

"Since the incorporation of the company."

"The price of canned goods depends on the price of raw materials?"

"Very largely."

"You find combines or arrangements among farmers from whom you buy?"

"Yes."

witness explained in answer to a query, that the company did not interfere with competition in any way.

"Do you create the demand for the goods?"

"Only by lowering the prices when the prices of raw materials permit."

Examined by Mr. Washington, Mr. Innes said that the company was organized in 1903, and the policy has continued the same since.

"How does it come that you sold to the Grocers' Wholesale Co. for some time and then stopped?"

"We found they were a combination of retailers, and therefore discontinued."

"How did you hear of them? From Mr. Beckett?"

"Perhaps."

"You sold to them till Mr. Beckett interfered?"

"Mr. Beckett did not interfere."

"But he told you of them?"

"He may have done so."

"The wholesalers objected to you selling to this company and other retailers?"

"They did."

'And you stopped?"

"Yes."

"Previous to this time did you sell to any other concerns such as the Grocers' Wholesale Co., the Canada Brokerage Co,, etc.?"

"Never."

"Is the policy selling to wholesalers continued in regard to all your products?"

"Yes, except in some specialty lines which we might let go to retailers."

"How about vegetables? Did you sell them to retailers?"

"Not standard lines of vegetables. We did sell sauces, chutney, etc., which came under the head of specialties."

"Had you one policy for vegetables and another for sauces?"

The question seemed to be rather a peculiar one to the witness, who finally answered: "This is true in one sense."

An agreement was read, supposed to be between the Canners' Co. and the wholesale grocers.

"In 1905 you had how many of the wholesale grocers of Canada tied up to your agreement?"

"Possibly 90 per cent."

The case of R. Graham, of the Owen Sound Canning Co., who testified earlier in the trial that he could not dispose of his goods in this year was referred to.

"How could Graham sell under this agreement?"

"We did a good stroke of business," said Mr. Innes. "Why didn't he get out and make a similar arrangement? If we were a little cleverer, that was our business."

"If any of these grocers would buy Graham's you would fine him the rebate?"

Mr. Washington—"Happy lookout!"

Mr. Johnston—"The same lookout as the man who buys Cobalt stocks today?"

"Yes."

Speaking regarding the Zealand case, the witness said he would have taken the same action without any influence from Mr. Beckett.

Questioned by His Lordship, "Do you fix a price at which goods are sold to the consumer?"

"No; to the retailer."

Speaking for the Retailers.

E. M. Trowern, Dominion secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, said he had taken a prominent part in both the retail and wholesale business in Canada. He had made a special study of the relations between manufacturer, middleman and consumer.

"What do you say as to conditions of trade now?"

"We find that the logical condition for distribution is from manufacturer to the wholesaler, wholesaler to retailer, retailer to consumer."

"What is the reason for this?"

Mr. Trowern answered by explaining as a sample case how a retailer could not keep 40 cases of cereals in his cellar advantageously and without deterioration.

"What about the cost of travelers, as compared with the margin of profit going to wholesalers?"

"The wholesale system is the cheapest method."

"If goods were bought directly by retailers what would be the effect?"

A Crack at the Departmentals.

Mr. Trowern waxed enthusiastic at this point and launched out into the evils of the departmental stores, as an instance of the conditions cited in the question. "Why," he said, "the departmental store is a gamble game. They have taken practically the whole dry goods trade of Toronto. They charge enormous prices for dry goods and throw a few baits in the way of canned goods and cereals in order to catch the people. Departmental stores are an unnatural development of a natural law."

"What do you say about fixing prices?"

"We have wanted the Government to take that question up. The manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer, need to get together on that point, but this miserable law has prevented us, and tied our hands."

Mr. Trowern has a refreshing belief in the power of the R.M.A. "You can let the wholesalers and manufacturers combine as much as you like," he said, when questioned as to the Guild's effect on the retailer. "We'll settle them if you free our hands."

"What is the effect of the manufacturer naming his own prices on his own goods?"

"Well," said Mr. Trowern, "shredded wheat is a good example of that. They first fixed the price at 15c per box. The association considered it and recommended to the manufacturer that the price be reduced to 12½c, two boxes for a quarter. The company ultimately agreed to do this, and it worked out fine."

"You have no way of saying to the manufacturer what his price shall be?"

"No."

"What keeps down the price of manufactured article in manufacturers' hands?"

"Staple articles are regulated by common competition."

Questioned as to whether the association had had anything to do with the Guild, Mr. Trowern said that a committee of the association met with a committee from the Guild on several matters; for instance, on cereals and trading stamps. "The Guild helped us in putting this miserable fraud out of business," he said.

"We met again regarding tomato catsup, a lot of which is not fit to eat," he said, "and again on the question of discounts. We found their side of the story and were pretty well satisfied. We met again on the Co-operation Act, in which they helped us."

Mr. Trowern at this point made some reference to the articles which the Toronto Daily Star has been running lately on the combines.

"It shows a lamentable condition of public affairs," said Mr. Johnston, "when such things are allowed."

Prices Less Than 25 Years Ago.

"Can you say whether the actions of Guild have in any way advanced prices of goods?" was the next question.

"We called a meeting of retail grocers in Toronto and invited them to submit any grievances they might have against the Guild. The meeting was largely attended, and after a full discussion we came to the conclusion that if it was the object of the Guild to boost prices they had met with miserable failure. Prices on groceries and profits were less than they had been for 25 years."

Mr. Trowern went on to refer in scornful terms to the co-operative establishments springing up. "This," he said, "is the same old trading stamp over again, but put in a legitimate way. The prices are higher to the consumer than through legitimate channels."

"Would you call the Hamilton establishment a wholesale concern?"

"No."

"Is it a fact that retailers are carried by wholesalers all over Canada?"

"Yes, largely."

Cross-examined by Mr. Washington, Mr. Trowern explained his duties as secretary of the association.

"You went to Ottawa with the Guild to amend the criminal code?"

"No."

"Oh?"

"No, the Guild went with us."

Want Fixed Prices.

"What did you want done with it?"

"We wanted the same privilege as the trades unions."

"You want the right to boycott?"

"We want our hands free."

"Your complaint is that you're not allowed to combine?"

"That's our trouble."

"You want the same rights as the wholesalers?"

"No, that's a poor thing. We want a better thing than that."

"Do you know whether the wholesalers' profits all round have been increased in 25 years?"

"I don't know. I claim to know retailers' questions, not wholesalers' or manufacturers'."

"Then the retailer to-day is bearing all this increase?"

"Yes, they are foolish enough to do so."

"What is to prevent you behind the counter charging me 3 cents more on any article?"

"Nothing."

"Why don't you do it?"

"The other man would get the business."

"Do you believe in competition?"

"Fair competition."

"Do you understand the equalized rates system?"

"Don't know anything about it."

"You want a law amended so that you can combine to fix prices among the retailers?"

"Yes; fair prices among ourselves, just as the law society has done."

Re-examined by Mr. Johnston, the witness explained that the retailers want the privilege of getting together to arrange a fair profit, without being indictable, all this to be under the supervision of the Government.

Evolution of the Trade.

M. Moyer, treasurer of the Ontario Board of the Retail Merchants' Association, told of being in the retail business in Toronto for 18 years. He remembered the time people bought ten pounds of granulated sugar for a dollar. He believed there was no cheaper system than the present wholesale and retail system.

Examined by Mr. Washington, the witness told of the development of the business till it had become largely one of package goods.

"Do you think there should be fixed prices among retailers?"

"Yes."

Mr. Johnston—"Subject to whose supervision?"

"The Government."

Col. Davidson's Story.

Col. John I. Davidson, of Davidson-Hay, Toronto, was the next witness. He said he had been in business in Toronto for about 30 years, doing a general wholesale business.

"You are familiar with relations in trade?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"Yes."

"What is the cheapest method of conducting the grocery business?"

"The wholesale system."

"Is there any difference since the Guild was organized?"

"None."

"Has there always been same system of selling through wholesalers only?"

"Always."

"Was the Guild founded with the idea of enhancing prices to consumer ?"

"Not at all."

Explaining further, Col. Davidson said that before the Guild was formed, 20 or 30 years ago, retailers were selling sugar at 8 lbs. for a dollar, now it is 18 to 20, and it has been 25 lbs.

Referring to starch, canned goods, sugar, etc, the articles mentioned in the indictment, Mr. Johnston asked :

"Have you any control over prices ?"

"None."

A Corner in Canned Goods.

"Have you ever attempted to control them ?"

"Well," said the Colonel, "that includes a little history. One year I bought the canned goods up and the price went to $1,45 a dozen and then dropped."

"A little corner in canned goods ?"

"Yes."

"Have you interfered as a member of the Guild or a wholesaler with the manufacturer ?"

"No."

"Have you tried to get lower prices?"

"Yes."

"Successful ?"

"In a few cases."

"What was the object of the Guild's organization ?"

In answer to this question, Col. Davidson told some early history. In 1883 Mr. Blain and he went to Montreal in regard to tobacco. They were charging 42c when it cost 40½c. Others sold at 39c, a straight loss. They succeeded in getting the Montreal people to sell at 42c. This was the beginning. After this they had several meetings.

"What was the object of these ?"

"To control the demoralization of the grocery business by reason of poor fines."

Col. Davidson explained that failures at the time were frequent and this tended to demoralize the trade.

"Did the Guild at any time attempt to make more than a fair profit ?"

"We don't get a profit at all. The object was to prevent selling at a loss."

"Was there any understanding at any time to prevent retailers buying goods?"

"No."

A Hundred Million in Groceries.

Questioned regarding the extent of the wholesale grocery business, Col. Davidson said that an approximate aggregate capital of one hundred million dollars was invested in Canada. The warehouses were almost altogether situated in the wholesale districts and were not suitable for retail business.

If the retailer bought direct from the manufacturer, Col. Davidson said, both he and the consumer would be in worse position than they are now.

"Our trouble was not with the retailers," Col. Davidson continued. "It was with the wholesalers cutting prices. To prevent this was the object of forming the association. We simply got together first and had no constitution nor by-laws."

Illustrating the prevailing conditions by the tobacco trade, Col. Davidson said : "In 1883 trade was demoralized. We were selling at an absolute loss. This necessitated selling other goods above to make up the profit. We then entered into an arrangement to sell at 42c. Then the duties on tobaccoes altered and the profit did not change the same. We are now making 5c a pound. At 42c this left a good profit to the retailer, who has never suffered. Sir Wm. Macdonald fixes his own prices entirely."

"You took some action as to his customers ?"

"There was some discussion, but nothing done."

"So long as terms are kept it makes no difference to you who they sell to?"

"Not the slightest."

"What you do object to is a man buying Macdonald's goods and then having him sell to your customers ?"

"Yes."

"What about starch, cereals, Cross & Blackwell's goods, etc.?" continued Mr. Johnston.

"They were on the same basis."

"Did you ever try to dictate to the manufacturer as to what his profits should be ?"

"Never."

"Coming to canned goods, who did the buying of them ?"

"Nobody. I can buy, but don't get the rebate if I buy other goods."

Losing on Sugar, Etc.

"What is the average profit on these goods mentioned in the indictment ?"

Col. Davidson said that these make up about 40 per cent. of the business done. He had actually lost 1½ per cent. on these goods. This is made up on other articles, 200 to 400 other lines.

He explained that the result must be the same in other businesses, such as Mr. Kinnear's and Mr. Beckett's.

"What the retailers complain of is that they can't get goods from the manufacturer at the same price as you?"

"Yes."

"You couldn't carry on business if they could ?"

"No."

"You take the manufacturer's price and the rebate. Does this represent all the profit, or does this come from the retailer ?"

"No, this is all."

Who is a Wholesaler?

"The question of who is a wholesaler is well defined in the trade ?"

"Yes."

"What is your idea of it ?"

"The man who sells to another seller is a wholesaler, otherwise he is a retailer."

Cross-examined at the afternoon session :

"What do you say as to the truth of the charges in the indictment ?"

"There is nothing in them."

"You say you made no attempt to coerce the manufacturers ?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you approve of cutting anybody off the list of sugar buyers ?"

"Retailers, yes, sir."

"Did you know the Western Brokerage Co. ?"

"Yes. I was president of it."

Mr. Washington read a letter of March 1895, from Col. Davidson to J. Stanley Cook, telling of a firm in Toronto they wanted to keep out of the Guild if legally possible.

Col. Davidson could not remember the name of the firm.

After reading a letter regarding the securing of a satisfactory profit on Appetizo with the American Cereal Co., Mr. Washington asked :

"Do you still persist in saying that you did not try to coerce manufacturers ?"

"Yes. I had a right to buy and sell as I pleased."

Mr. Johnston, referring again to the Appetizo and Crosse & Blackwell matter, Col. Davidson explained that the goods were being cut down and sold at a loss. They wished to remedy this condition.

The Refiners Represented.

Alfred H. Thompson, manager of the sales department of the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal, explained that the method of selling sugar through the wholesalers was materially the best one. If sold direct to retailers the refiners would have to put travelers on the road, pay additional freight rates and other factors which would tend to bring up the price.

"What is the object of the equalized rates system ?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"To make sugar a uniform price at all points."

"What percentage do you give the wholesalers for handling your goods ?"

"Four per cent., and the wholesalers take the risks of the trade."

"Do all refiners have the same prices ?"

"No, they vary."

"How does Canadian sugar stand with imported sugars ?"

"It is supposed to be much superior."

"Who fixes the price ?"

"We do."

"How ?"

"By reason of the raw markets and competition."

"Had the Guild anything to do with fixing your customers ?"

"No."

Mr. Thompson explained that through the equalized rates, reduced prices were secured to retailers for the system absorbed freight and other considerations.

Manufacturers Fix Equalized Rates.

"Have you anything to do with the fixing of the equalized rates ?"

"Those are our rates, we fix them twice a year. These are considerably less on the average than the freight rates generally because we are absorbing the overhead charges."

"Has Mr. Beckett anything to do with fixing these rates ?"

"Nothing at all."

"Do you know A. McLean, of Kingston ?"

"I have seen him."

"What did you tell him ?"

"I told him we would be pleased to sell him at list prices."

"Did you ever refuse to sell him ?"

"No."

Referring to the evidence of H. W. Zealand, of the Grocers' Wholesale Co., who said that he "had had a chat with Thompson," Mr. Thompson explained that the Thompson in question was another man, a city representative, who had no authority to discuss the matter.

"Had the Guild anything to do with whom to sell or not to sell ?"

"That was entirely our business."

Questioned regarding his identification of wholesalers, Mr. Thompson said : "We accept the fact that a man is a member of the Guild as an evidence that he is a wholesaler."

"What about those not in the Guild?"

"We might make enquiries regarding their standing from a Guild member."

"What about the margin of profit to the wholesalers ?"

"We are told this does not cover expenses."

"Have the wholesalers tried to get any better profit.?"

"Only indirectly."

"What is your idea of the profits ?"

"We have no knowledge of that."

Cross-examined by Mr. Blackstock.

"Are you parties to what is called the sugar agreement ?"

"I don't know of such a thing."

"Notwithstanding all we hear about it ?"

"No arrangement ?"

"No."

"Understanding ?"

"I think you might say there is an understanding."

"Of what nature ?"

"That wholesalers shall sell our goods at the prices we fix."

"Is it the spirit of the agreement that you sell to one wholesaler at one price and another at another ?"

"Yes."

"Do you treat them all alike ?"

"In practice, yes."

"That is your representation to the trade ?"

"I don't think so. We fix the price for the retail trade. Four per cent. of this price is the price paid to us by the wholesalers."

"You inform Mr. Beckett by wire of the changes in prices ?"

"Yes."

"Who requested you to do this, the Guild ?"

"I don't know."

"You know that Mr. Beckett takes charge of it ?"

"Yes."

"For whom ?"

"The wholesale houses."

"Are the other refiners parties to the same system ?"

"I presume so."

"You all act together on the same system ?"

"Yes."

"And on the same agreement ?"

"I don't think so."

"The equalized rates arrangement resulted from the operations of the Guild ?"

"I don't think so."

To Meet Foreign Competition.

Questioned further regarding the equalized rates system, Mr. Thompson explained that under it the rate on sugar to Toronto was 10 cents, whereas the regular freight rate was 14 cents. The rate on sugar to Toronto is made lower to compete with the rate from Liverpool, which is 23 cents to Montreal and only 25½ cents to Toronto. The rate to Port Hope, Mr. Thompson explained, was governed by the rate to Belleville. This only applied to the central points, principally wholesale centres.

"If a man applied, saying he was a wholesaler but not a member of the guild, you would have to make further inquiries?" asked Mr. Blackstock.

"Yes."

"Have you knowledge of the guild asking you to cut anyone from your lists?"

"No."

"Have the wholesalers?"

"Not to my knowledge."

Mr. Blackstock read a letter from the Maritime Provinces Guild to the effect that they had agreed to the payment of rebate to Turcotte & Co., of Quebec.

Mr. Thompson said he had no knowledge of this as it would be handled by the late Mr. Watson.

"Do you deny that it occurred?"

"No."

Mr. Blackstock asked if the company had in their possession any correspondence with the guild or its members, and demanded that if such were procurable they should be produced.

In explaining his answer regarding the keeping out of foreign sugars, Mr. Thompson mentioned several reasons why it was advisable to do so. In the first place it gave employment to Canadian workmen and again kept a better quality of sugar before the retailers.

"You wanted to exclude the competition of foreign sugar from your own?"

"Not altogether."

"Your object was to make your own output as large as possible?"

"Yes."

Re-examined by Mr. Johnston:

Equalized Rates Before Guild Formed.

"How long were there equalized rates in force before the guild came into existence?"

"About ten years."

"Has the price of suggr advanced?"

"I remember selling sugar at 9½ cents. It is 4½ cents to-day."

"Have you been asked to produce any correspondence in connection with these matters?"

"Not until to-day."

The witness explained that when he wired advice of changes in the price of sugar to Mr. Beckett it was done as a matter of courtesy. The companies' agents were also informed at the same time.

"There has been a good deal done by the Government to build up the sugar industry?"

"Yes; considerable."

"What would be the effect if inferior foreign sugars were allowed to come in?"

"It would kill the industry."

Mr. Johnston, referring to the correspondence regarding the Turcotte matter: "Had this anything to do with the Ontario people?"

"I don't think so."

"This guild (Ontario) had nothing to do with it?"

"No; it was attended to by Mr. Watson."

Mr. Kittson Speaks.

H. N. Kittson, of W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, explained that he had been head accountant of that firm till '84, and had been a partner since.

Questioned by Mr. Johnston:

"Is the business system the same now as thirty years ago?"

"The same except that in some cases manufacturers now allow us a trade discount."

"Why was the guild organized?"

"The members of the trade came together for mutual benefit, for securing better legislation, for consulting one another on customers, and for raising the standard of the trade."

"When the guild was organized, did you see manufacturers re getting better profits?"

"I believe my partners did. Our whole efforts were to induce the manufacturers to pay us an adequate rebate or trade discount for handling the goods."

"Could you do this cheaper than the retailers?"

"Obviously so. It would cost the manufacturers more than the profit he paid us to deliver his goods to the retail trade."

"Have you any record of the cost of doing business?"

"Yes; I have reckoned it at from 7.6 to over 10 per cent."

"Practically all the goods included in the inquiry are sold at a loss?"

"Yes; this is made up on the other goods."

Mr. Kittson explained the effect of departmental stores buying direct from the manufacturers was to demoralize trade. The public, while it may get one article cheaper, pays more for others in the end.

"What ought you to make in gross percentage to make a reasonable profit?"

"At least 12½ per cent. to give us 2½ per cent. net profit."

"The average profits of our business for ten years," Mr. Kittson went on, "have been less than 1 per cent net profit." Explaining the amount of business done, Mr. Kittson said the turnover on $100,000 would be, in a well managed business, probably $800,000.

Mr. Kittson is a member of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, a fact which gave Mr. Washington an excuse for remarking:

"But you have a Government job now which should help you out."

"Mr. Washington and Mr. Kittson are brothers in that respect," remarked Mr. Johnston.

Mr. Kinnear's Evidence.

T. Kinnear, of T. Kinnear & Co., Toronto, said that he had been in the wholesale grocery business 28 years. Questioned regarding the difference in principle and methods of carrying on business before the time of the guild and now, he said there was not much difference in principle and methods, but profits were less now than before the forming of the guild. The cost of doing business in his establishment last year had been 7.35. On tobacco this meant a loss of 5 per cent., on sugar 3 per cent. The profit on starch is better than they had been getting.

"Have you made an estimate of the loss on these goods discussed?"

"Yes; I have studied the matter very carefully. About 1½ per cent., fully $6,000 last year in my business."

"You make this up on other goods?"

"Yes, and consider this unfair."

"What was the object of seeing the manufacturers?"

"We wanted to be able to handle their goods without a loss, to get a large enough percentage of profit to enable us to deliver the goods.

"Anything to do with fixing the price of sugar?"

"Nothing."

"What do you say of the present system of distributing goods?"

"I think it steadies business. It is better in every way. It helps the weaker man."

"There haven't been so many failures of late years as formerly?"

"Perhaps not so many. A better class of men are getting into grocery business."

"How about the price to the consumer?"

"I think it is cheaper under the present system."

"If you could fix list prices on these goods how would this affect the consumer?"

"The individual article would be dearer but other goods would be cheaper and it would generalize evenly, having practically no effect on the consumer."

"If retailers were put on same basis as wholesalers, what would happen?"

"We would be forced out of business. If manufacturers sold direct to retailers it would cost them far more than the profits they now give us."

"Who is a wholesaler according to the trade meaning?"

"One who sells to the retail trade and hasn't a retail counter."

Referring to the departmental store question, Mr. Kinnear said that their buying direct would have the effect of putting the smaller men out of business.

"What about the prices on these goods to the public?"

"I think they are fair prices. You couldn't have otherwise with the present competition."

"What about list prices affecting competition?"

"I don't think there ever was keener competition than we have to-day."

"Do you know wholesalers in Toronto who are getting goods at wholesale prices who are not members of the guild?"

"Yes; Jas. Lumbers, Warren Bros. and Fred. Homphrey."

Less Money With the Guild.

Mr. Kinnear made a statement that will be surprising to many when he said' "I think I could make more money now if the guild were out of existence."

"Why is this?" asked Mr. Blackstock.

"I found I was losing thousands of dollars by following the system."

"You are tied up by these agreements?"

"We have agreements, yes."

"Do not these depress individual effort, acumen, etc.?"

"I don't think so."

"You have constant infractions of these agreements?"

"From time to time, yes."

"Doesn't it expose the ordinary man in the trade to do business in an underhand way?"

"It tends that way."

"If you lose on these goods spoken of, why do you continue handling them?"

"The aim of the guild was to enhance the profits on these goods."

"Yes."

"For this it was advisable that the business should be kept as far as possible within your own association?"

"Of the wholesale trade, yes."

"Then part of your policy was to exclude other persons (retailers) from this business?"

"Yes."

Mr. Johnston—"Who determined whether these men were wholesalers or not?"

"The manufacturer; we have nothing to do with that."

On Friday morning H. C. Beckett, of W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, a former Guild president, one of its most active members and the formulator of the much-discussed equalized rates systen, was placed in the box in the interests of the defence. Mr. Beckett was a most interesting witness.

His examination by Mr. Johnston occupied the whole morning, and his evidence was practically a resume of the whole case as previously covered by the crown. Almost without exception the statements made by crown witnesses which seemed to be damaging to the Guild's case were either denied outright or explained in some way or another by Mr. Beckett. It has been somewhat of a question by those interested in the case as to how Mr. Beckett would stand the fire of the crown counsels' examination, but he was evidently well prepared for the expected ordeal and was quite ready to answer anything Mr. Blackstock asked. Several times, however, he and Mr. Blackstock disagreed as to how certain questions should be answered, but in the end Mr. Beckett usually got his way and was allowed to explain his affirmation or denial in such a way as to qualify it considerably.

Mr. Beckett in the Box.

Mr. Johnston began his examination by a series of questions regarding the organization of the Guild.

"The Guild was formed to prevent demoralization of trade?"

"Surely the manufacturers were selling direct to the retailers at the same price that they sold to us. When our travelers quoted prices to the retailers, they showed quotations from the manufacturers' travelers, which represented the cost price of our goods."

"Was there any regular organization at first?"

"It was a go-as-you-please affair. Many of the wholesalers took little interest. We did not have even a list of the members, nor any by-laws till 1903. No member knew who the other members were. In 1903 we called a meeting of the wholesalers of the Dominion."

"Any idea of regulating prices?"

"No."

Questioned regarding changes in the conditions of trade in recent years, Mr. Beckett explained that 20 years ago there were practically no proprietary goods. Package goods have gradually come to be an enormous factor and it became necessary for the manufacturers to fix selling prices for these.

"Was this for the protection of the manufacturer?"

"Yes, not for the wholesaler."

"Does a fixed list price affect the consumer?"

"Makes absolutely no difference to him; but a great difference to the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer."

"In what way?"

"If the manufacturer did not fix his price, unscrupulous dealers would cut prices and the wholesaler would take no interest in the goods. This, however, would not affect the consumer."

"What was the purpose of drawing up these several agreements?"

"When we organized we appointed several committees, one of which was a price committee. The members of this committee were to place before manufacturers the condition of trade. In cases where the margin was not sufficient to allow the wholesalers and retailers a fair profit, this committee was to induce the manufacturers to give us a reduction."

Price Committee a Misnomer.

"I may explain," said Mr. Beckett, turning aside to Chief Justice Falconbridge, "that the name, price committee, is a misnomer. It was merely a body negotiating with the manufacturers."

"How many wholesalers are Guild members?"

"About 95 per cent."

"Did you want all of them?"

"Yes."

"What would be the effect of five or six wholesalers staying out?"

"It would be to injure the manufacturers."

Referring to early dealings in tobacco Mr. Beckett said that at this time he had been a traveler for W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, and remembered selling tobacco at cost and less. Other firms selling cigars were selling Macdonald's tobacco at less than they paid for it as a bait for their other goods. "We wanted a margin, and some of the members of the trade made an effort to induce as many wholesalers as possible to sell at an advance over cost, and some of them did. These only represented about 30 per cent., not including the cigar men, etc. These were asked by Sir Wm. Macdonald to sell at a decent margin. We finally got him to see our side of the matter, and he influenced these other dealers. They started to sell at 2½ cents margin, and ultimately this advanced to 4 cents."

"What is the percentage of profit now?"

"On Macdonald's tobacco, less than 5 per cent."

"And the selling cost?"

"Eight to nine per cent."

In answering one of Mr. Johnston's questions, Mr. Beckett said he would have to go back to the beginning and sketch the history of the Guild in order to make his meaning plain. Turning to Sir Glenholm Falconbridge, Mr. Beckett said, "I would like your Lordship to understand this, too."

The Chief Justice turned on him and said, rather pointedly: "I try to understand all that is said here."

Mr. Beckett saw the point at once and said, "I beg your pardon."

The Guild and the Canners.

He went on to explain the relations of the Guild with the Canadian Canners.

"Prior to the formation of the Canadian Canners," he said, "all factories did their business independently. They had an association, but the law prevented them from agreeing on prices. Many of them failed and as a result the Canadian Canners was formed, buying out many of them, some at 50c on the dollar. This firm then included about 50 per cent. of the factories, naturally they had an enormous pack and they realized they must get the help of the wholesale trade to sell, so they adopted a loyalty rebate system, that is, fixed the selling price of the goods. One of the conditions was that no wholesaler should sell at less than list prices. They would only give discount to a wholesale house if they sold at these list prices. They would sell them all right, but give no discount if the terms were not adhered to. Then followed an effort to get all the trade of the wholesalers. If you'll sell our goods exclusively, we'll give an extra discount of 5 per cent., they said. It was optional whether they accepted or not. Some did not. Whether they were Guild members or not made no difference."

"Are these methods common in business?"

"Yes, a common thing."

Asked to name some members of the Guild who didn't handle the Canadian Canners' goods, Mr. Beckett mentioned Randall & Roos, Berlin; Geo. Watt & Son, Brantford; John Garvey, London; W. G. Craig and Fenwick, Henry & Co., Kingston.

"Had the Guild anything to do with these terms?"

"Nothing whatever."

Mr. Beckett explained that the arrangement didn't affect either the retailer or the consumer. Canadian Canners' goods were sold to the retailer just as cheaply as any other canned goods.

Questioned regarding the charges made by W. J. Graham, the crown witness, during the earlier sessions of the trial, Mr. Beckett said they were absolutely without foundation. "At the time Graham referred to," Mr. Beckett said, "the Canadian Canners were not in existence."

"I don't say it disrespectfully." Mr. Beckett went on, "but Mr. Graham is a man utterly ignorant of business knowledge. That is why he did not make a success of his business."

The Dominion Syndicate.

Next came a bit of evidence which will be information to many members of the trade.

"Do you know of the Dominion Syndicate?"

"This is a matter," answered Mr. Beckett, "which has never before been divulged. W. H. Gillard & Co. were the Dominion Syndicate, and no one outside the company was interested in any way. We bought all the goods of the Simcoe Canning Co., and made arrangements to sell through a firm of brokers. Orders to be supplied are accepted without reference to us. The Simcoe people had no interest in it. The brokers of the Simcoe Canning Co. called on Zealand, of the Grocers' Wholesale Co., and sold him a car of goods. I immediately notified them that we would not fill the order, since we would only sell to legitimate wholesalers."

"The Dominion Syndicate," further explained Mr. Beckett, "started in 1901. In that year we bought 95 per cent. of the pack, the purchase amounting to a million and a half. One of the Canners who refused to sell to us was Mr. Graham."

In reply to a question, Mr. Beckett said: "We bought for 65c and sold for 75c. We did a little better than Col. Davidson."

"Who did all the business for the Syndicate?"

"I did. They left me to run it and I ran it."

Crosse & Blackwell.

Referring to the Crosse & Blackwell matters touched on earlier in the trial, Mr. Beckett went into a lengthy explanation.

"They have a peculiar way of doing business. They will sell to anybody at the same price. They make no distinction in trade. If you buy 100 pounds sterling they give you 2½ per cent. discount. They stored little stocks in Toronto, Montreal, Windsor. Retailers could go to their agents and get little stocks at the same price as the wholesaler. The conditions were so bad that the price committee talked with the Canadian agents, who agreed to discontinue doing it. Three months after Crosse & Blackwell notified the agents to sell to the retailers as before. As a result the wholesalers gradually stopped selling the goods, and in three or four months they had lost a large percentage of their trade.

When the firm saw things going thus they sent out Mr. Wyatt. I saw him with the committee. He said: "I don't care what the wholesale trade want. We will do business as we please."

We said we would be foolish to handle stuff under these conditions. He agreed to stay here for a couple of months and to study conditions. Finally he said he found that to do business as economically as the wholesale trade he would have to have a series of distributing stations in Canada, and agreed that under these conditions they must do business with the wholesalers. He said this was a boycott and said they would build a wholesale house in Toronto. We said: 'Go ahead, all right.' Finally, he prepared a memoranda like the agreement in the book and did his business through the wholesalers. Then he wrote the retailers telling them he had been boycotted and couldn't sell to them any more."

"Do you handle their goods now?"

"Not to any great extent. We make no profit on them, but we try to oblige our customers. We are very good at obliging people."

"Yes, very good," rumbled Mr. Blackstock.

Questioned regarding starch, Mr. Beckett said the same conditions prevailed in this, though in not so intensified a form.

"In cereals?"

"The cereal men always has a fixed price. The starch men had a set of conditions for the wholesale house, which were observed. The starch people decided that business conditions made it absolutely necessary to have a price on 10-box lots delivered. After a year's negotiations we got 10 and 5."

"Did this affect the consumer?"

"Not at all."

"How many starch factories were there at the time?"

"Four."

"How many now?"

"Two, and conditions will soon force them into one."

"Our fight with the cereal men," Mr. Beckett continued, "was to get 15 per cent. In some cases we did get it. When we didn't we wouldn't sell their goods."

Changes in Sugar.

Mr. Beckett then went on to tell of the changes which had taken place in the sugar industry. Twenty-five years ago the sugar was largely imported and the wholesalers were making good profits. One and one and three-quarters cents a pound or 8 to 10 per cent. As time went on the tariff was changed to afford protection for the local industry. Local sugars got into competition with the foreign article and the price became lower and the margin of profit smaller. To-day's price is not due to competition. It is due to a reduction in the price of raw material.

"Is sugar dearer to-day than 20 years ago?"

"Nonsense. It is about one-third of the price. The consumer gets 18 to 25 lbs. to-day. Before he got 8 to 9 for $1."

"We felt we were being made tools of," continued Mr. Beckett, "and things got so bad we decided to talk it over with the refiners. I, Mr. Blain, Col. Davidson, Mr. Ince, Mr. Gillard and Mr. McPherson went to see them. Only by frequent meetings were they brought to realize the situation, and as a final result the equalized rates system was adopted."

"Was there any agreement with the sugar refiners?"

"None."

"Any verbal understanding?"

"Only this, that the rules for selling were laid down in the equalized rates book."

"Who gets up this equalized rates book?"

"So far as the actual work is concerned, I do, though it is subject to the refiners."

The Equalized Rates System.

Mr. Beckett then went on and explained very thoroughly and comprehensively the equalized rates system.

The rate on sugar from Liverpool to Toronto, he explained, is only 3 cents per 100 lbs. more than from Liverpool to Montreal, while the regular freight rate from Montreal to Toronto is 14 cents. The effect of the system, for instance, to retailers in a circle of 60 miles around Toronto is to give them a price on sugar of probably 6 cents per 100 lbs. less than if they bought directly from the refiners and paid freight and cartage.

Another book, containing the actual freight rates to various points in Canada was entered as exhibit 105.

"Who makes up this?"

"Mr. Porter, of the G.T.R. in Hamilton, is paid by me to do the work."

Mr. Beckett then cited some instances of the working out of the equalized rates system. From Montreal to Port Hope the actual freight rate on carload lots is 13 cents, and with 2 cents additional for cartage, this reaches 15 cents. On barrels of sugar the tare would also be about $1.05, and this would make the actual freight on the car lot $16.05. By the equalized rates system the rate was 16 cents in car lots, thus making an actual saving of 5c per carload by the system.

Referring to the statement made by John Curtis, of Port Hope, a crown witness, to the effect that he bought sugar at the same price as the Toronto people. Mr. Beckett said Curtis didn't tell you he bought the sugar in Toronto and paid the freight himself."

Giving some further examples, Mr. Beckett showed that the actual freight rate, Montreal to Hamilton, was 19 cents per 100. Sugar was delivered for 11 cents. The regular rate, with cartage to York, is 17.12 cents. Under the equalized rates sugar comes in at 13 cents, a saving of 4.12 cents in car lots.

Means Reduced Cost.

"Do you know of any instances where the rate is increased?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"Not an instance."

"Some places it is reduced?"

"About 70 per cent. of the places."

Referring to Mr. Zealand's statement that he could get a rate of 14 cents to Fort William, while the equalized rates were 36, Mr. Beckett said:

"The fact is, the actual freight rate to Fort William is 34.24, and the equalized rate is 24 cents, so the refiners lose a little over 10 cents per 100."

"In summer the equalized rates are lower," Mr. Beckett explained, "because of the cheaper rates by boat."

Port Arthur was quoted as another example. The freight rates here from Montreal is 55 cents, while the equalized rates work out at 33 cents.

The Trouble With Robertson.

Turning aside to explain the statements of B. W. Robertson, Kingston, another Crown witness, Mr. Beckett said:

"Prior to the adoption of the equal rates system a lot of sugar came to Canada. A lot of it was awful stuff and smelt like a glue factory. We didn't want to handle it. Robertson is a peculiar man who would not look into the new system. He wanted the refiners to deliver to him under the system and allow him to sell at any price he liked so as to get the business of the other wholesalers. The refiners said no. The letters of Mr. Gillard and myself show efforts to get him to look into this, but he wouldn't. He made an appointment to meet other wholesalers in regard to it, but got out of town before they came."

Mr. Robertson, while giving evidence, quoted from the thirteenth chapter of Revelations, "And no man may buy or sell unless he bear the mark of the beast, etc." In recalling this incident, Mr. Beckett said: "Mr. Robertson made a mistake. It was I who got the revelations, and they were furnished by his business methods."

In this connection is a peculiar incident, for had Mr. Robertson continued his quotation into the next verse he would have read: "Here is wisdom."

"Was anything said about striking him off the list?" said Mr. Johnston, resuming the examination, referring to one of the letters read by the Crown.

"Well, these words do not mean to refuse to sell him, but only strike off so far as wholesale discount is concerned. We never asked any manufacturer to strike a man off the list literally."

"If a man continued to do this it would mean ruinous trade conditions?"

"Yes."

"Who got up the agreements in the guild books?"

"Those memoranda in the books are the results of conversations which we have had with manufacturers. Besides creating a better feeling between wholesalers and manufacturers it was a kind of assurance to the wholesale houses."

The Departmentals Snubbed.

In referring to relations between wholesalers and retailers, Mr. Beckett referred rather reflectingly to the departmental stores. "They cut prices," he said, "until the retailer cannot handle the goods and they get control and then boost them. That's the way they do. They cut prices till they drive the retailers out and then they soak the public all they can."

Coming back more immediately to the case, Mr. Johnston asked:

"What object was there in printing the agreements and lists?"

"To promote a better feeling between wholesalers and manufacturers. Lots of the wholesalers never saw the manufacturers. We wanted them to get better acquainted."

"Which is greater, the cost of handling goods through the wholesaler or from the manufacturer direct to the retailer?"

"The manufacturers save from 4 to 25 per cent. by the wholesale system?"

"How about the consumer?"

"The present method reduces the cost to the consumer."

"Any negotiations with manufacturers regarding dishonest firms or retailers?"

"Simply placing our views before the manufacturers. We never asked them to do anything."

"Was anyone struck off the list in this sense?"

"There was one case, I believe."

The King of Tobacco Business.

"In regard to Sir Wm. Macdonald; he is the autocrat of the tobacco business?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"He is—the king of his business. He is in complete control of it, and he ought to be admired by everybody."

"He is not moved by the guild?"

"Not in the least."

"Nor by his customers?"

"No."

Mr. Johnston filed as an exhibit a list of Sir Wm. Macdonald's customers in Montreal and Ontario.

His Lordship directed Mr. Beckett to go over the list and mark the retailers on it.

Mr. Johnston: "Do you know whether Sir William has refused to sell to certain members of the guild?"

"He has."

"And do the sugar refiners refuse to sell to certain guild members?"

"I don't know."

"Were there any funds in possession of the guild prior to 1903?"

"Not that I know of."

"Fees?"

"No."

"Who paid Mr. Gillard?"

"No one, when we went to Montreal to see the refiners we all paid our own expenses."

"Since then, fees?"

"Usually $10 a year. Of course we'll have to have a larger one now." (Laughter.)

"Was Mr. Gillard authorized to write letters?"

"Not officially."

The Crown Witnesses.

"Do you know McLean?"

"I had heard of him. He is rated in Bradstreets at $150,000 and is said to be worth twice that."

"Did you know Curtis?"

"I never saw him till he appeared in the Hamilton police court."

"Never?"

"I didn't know he was on the earth."

"What about Clancy?"

"He applied for membership in the guild and went out of business a week afterward. Business couldn't be done under the principles they adopted."

"Did the guild interfere with him at all?"

"Never."

"We have been accused of doing all sorts of things we never did," said Mr. Beckett. "They imagine these things."

Requires Big Turnover.

In answer to questions regarding the volume of business in a wholesale house, Mr. Beckett said a wholesaler must have a turn-over of $400,000 per year to break even, and even then he would have to be mighty careful.

"And with a turn-over of $100,000 what would happen?"

"He wouldn't be in it for a minute."

"He would need $100,000 capital for $400,000 turn-over?"

"Undoubtedly."

"In ordinary business, is the cash system general?"

"No, we are trying to get it there. We have to get money from the bank to carry us along on retailers' accounts and frequently lose on these."

Taking up the indictment, Mr. Johnston asked the witness if the guild had interfered in any way with the production or manufacture of any of the articles mentioned.

"In any case, have you limited the manufacture of these articles?"

"In no case."

"Any article could be gotten by retailer or wholesaler in any quantity at any time?"

"He could get more than he wanted."

A Troublesome Witness.

Mr. Blackstock then took the witness.

"Do I understand you to assume responsibility for the letters read here?"

"For the meaning of the letters, yes. I didn't write them."

"Do you decline to be bound by what he did?"

"I'm indifferent about it. I agree with what he did."

"The same system has prevailed all three years?"

"Practically the same."

"The guild never attempted to have anyone put off the list in sense of stopping the sale of goods?"

"Not to my knowledge."

Mr. Washington read a letter to Mr. Watson in Montreal saying, "If the machinery of the refiners is brought to bear Robertson could be brought into line."

"Did you desire him to be brought in?"

"I desired it so personally."

"There was a time when you had no combinations?"

"None now as I know it."

"Were they bound then by trade agreements?"

"Not bound by any now."

"Do you believe these answers to be candid," asked Mr. Blackstock, evidently rather annoyed at the witness' attitude.

"From a business point of view I do."

"From a moral point of view?"

"I do."

"The difficulties in trade at the time led to the organization of the guild?"

"Yes."

"By reason of certain changes in trade you were not making the profit you thought you ought to?"

"No."

"As I understand it you were losing money on certain of these goods?"

Made Money by Speculating.

"We wanted to do business in a legitimate way. We had to make our money by speculating on the market and we didn't want to do this. With the assistance of the speculative element we manage to break about even."

"And with a profit?"

"Sometimes we make a profit. Generally we make a small profit."

"On what class of goods do you make profits?"

"All goods not sold under proprietary brands are those which vary more or less in the market. Prunes, raisins, currants, figs, nuts, rice, oatmeal, cheese, etc., perhaps a hundred different lines."

"It facilitates your business in these lines to do it in staples?"

"Yes. We handle these goods because we were driven into it by present conditions."

"You do it in your own interest?"

"Yes."

Denies Charges.

"Do you consider these arrangements a restraint of trade?"

"None whatever."

"You thought it appropriate to enter into an agreement to exclude foreign sugar from local markets?"

"We didn't enter into any agreement."

"Did you prevent competition of foreign sugars with Canadian sugars?"

"Yes; the equalized rates system promotes the interest of local sugars."

"I understand the common representation of all of you here is that the cheapest way of distributing products is through the wholesale trade?"

"That is it."

"Where is the necessity for combination that the wholesaler may distribute his products?"

"There is no combination."

"There is no necessity and no combination?"

"Certainly not."

Questioning regarding his former statements as to the way business was carried on:

"You're gambling?"

"Yes, that's how we make a living."

"What are all these protests issued by the guild from time to time?"

"Protests against dishonesty."

"Were these agreements made to prevent lower rates?"

"No, that developed afterwards."

"Are you willing to have matters run along untramelled or to be controlled by agreements?"

"The trade cannot be conducted in proprietary lines without agreements."

"These agreements are made to avert disorder in trade?"

"Certainly."

"Then the action of somebody or other is controlled by them?"

"No?"

"Is it true that you tried to influence Crosse & Blackwell to change their methods of doing business?"

To this question Mr. Blackstock was unable to get a reply to satisfy him. Indeed, all through his examination Mr. Beckett's answers were obviously so

CHANGES IN ESSEX CANNING CO.

Toronto Office Closed and Business Will Be Done From Essex.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Essex Canning and Preserving Co. was held in Toronto on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at which several changes were made in the composition of the company. R. W. Ball, who has for some time acted as manager and secretary, has resigned, as he is desirous of devoting more time and attention to another company in which he is largely interested. Mr. Ball is retaining an interest in the company and still holds a place on the Board of Directors. It has been arranged also that the Toronto office will be discontinued and in future the business will be entirely conducted from Essex, where the factory is situated. As a result of last week's meeting also, the factory output will be increased and the field of operations extended.

The accompanying illustration shows a portion of the company's works, namely, the front view of the main building, which is 240 feet long, 40 feet wide and three storeys high. There are several additions and wings attached to this building, also other buildings, and two large storage warehouses on the property. The factory is equipped with all the latest automatic machinery and every provision made for packing the goods under the most approved sanitary arrangements.

Factory of the Essex Canning Company at Essex, Ont.

"There is necessity for co-operation, but not for combination."

"Were all these agreements necessary?"

"They were necessary to keep us in business. You must have some head to your business and not run it in a wigglidy-pigglidy way. We try to bring system out of chaos and conduct business in its natural channels."

"Is it true that you were trying to get all the wholesalers into the guild?"

"No."

"Did you try to get the refiners to take certain retailers off the lists who were old customers?"

"No; they are selling them yet."

"Your idea was that the wholesalers should receive the commodity at the same price?"

"There is no arrangement to that effect?"

"Were you bound to sell to the retail trade?"

"Yes, at manufacturers' prices."

"At the same price?"

"We were to sell at manufacturer's price on the day, which varied."

"You don't call this combination?"

far from what he desired that the Crown counsel had exhibited a good deal of indignation. At this point he threw up his hands saying, "That will do."

Mr. Johnston then proceeded with a few questions.

"What percentage of your business do these articles under discussion represent?"

"In most houses 70 to 80 per cent."

"In your own case?"

"About 60 per cent."

The Examination Ended.

This ended the examination and after a conference with his Lordship it was announced that the argument would be held at Osgoode Hall in about two weeks' time.

Mr. Blackstock intimated that possibly he might have some further evidence to bring in, but in any event it would be brief.

The hearing of the argument promises to be exceedingly interesting, and it is likely a large representation of the trade will be present.

E. D. Marceau, Montreal, has returned from a business trip to Quebec.

Enoch Morgan & Sons, New York, the manufacturers of Sapolio, have just issued a novel combination of chess and checker board, with chessmen and checkers attached, which is at once an interesting and thoroughly practical advertisement. The board is made of heavy fibre paper and the chessmen and checkers are interchangeable. The set has been issued exclusively for the grocery trade and would be well worth any grocer sending for. Undoubtedly if the name of this paper is mentioned as a matter of good faith, the article will be sent on request from the manufacturers.

Practical Features of Horticultural Show

Points of Interest From the Big Exhibition Held in Toronto Last Week—Fine Display of Export Apples Shows Continued Improvement—How the Counties Are Building up the Industry—New Departures in Canadian Vegetables.

From the standpoint of improvement in fruit-growing and in methods of packing, the exhibition of the Ontario Horticultural Association is becoming a more important factor each year.

The exhibition held in the St. Lawrence Arena from Monday to Saturday, Nov. 9 to 14, was from many standpoints the best yet held. The exhibition has developed from the old chrysanthemum show, for years one of the annual events in Toronto, into a show of wider interest and much greater practical commercial value. In former years the exhibition was held in Massey Hall, where the floral display was placed upstairs, and the fruit and vegetables almost altogether downstairs. The move to the St. Lawrence Arena has proven itself a successful one, so far as the exhibition was concerned. Here the displays were all on one floor, allowing of a much more satisfactory arrangement and giving a much better general effect.

While the floral display is not of so much interest to grocers as the fruit, to those who have a flower department it would be of considerable help. The accompanying engraving gives an excellent idea of this department, and also of the splendid decorations which transformed the market building into a bower of beauty.

The Floral Display.

While the floral display was comprehensive and excellent in point of quality, it did not seem to be so large as in former years. Chrysanthemums, the seasonable flower, of course, held the place of honor by numbers, with roses and carnations a good second, and the various other varieties in lesser profusion.

One of the most attractive features of this department every year is the display of florally-decorated dinner tables. This year the space on an aisle just inside the doorway, was given up to this, and though the tables were not put in till the middle of the week, they proved very interesting, and many a housewife, and possibly some grocer-florists, got some hints on dainty arrangement.

The special sections showing presentation baskets, bouquets for special purposes and funeral designs, were only fairly well represented in numbers, though everything shown was very fine.

One of the most striking features of the floral display was the built-up partitions between the various sections of the exhibition, which were built up with palms, ferns and potted plants to make a very effective screen. The rustic idea was carried out to the full in the exhibition, even the cleverly-devised chandeliers being inverted cedar trees filled with incandescent lamps, and the stone railings were cedar limbs fresh from the woods.

Fine Showing of Apples.

From a practical standpoint perhaps the most valuable feature of the whole exhibition is the display of apples for export, packed in boxes and barrels. It is from this department that the exhibition has derived a great deal of its influence and the results accomplished even in this week of display are very material. The exhibit in this section was, of course, very large. Almost the whole of one side of the exhibition was lined with barrels of apples, and the entries of apples in boxes were even more in evidence.

This exhibit is gradually becoming to show a great deal of improvement, as farmers and others inform themselves of the proper methods of packing. One noticeable improvement this year was the barrel itself, there being only one exception to the double-hooped barrel recommended by the Department. The packing, too, was more generally uniform and less glaring examples of bad methods were in evidence.

The exhibit of apples in boxes also showed considerable improvement. A better type of box seemed to be in use this year, and the tendency to help out the packing with paper and rags, once rather common, was scarcely in evidence. The best exhibits in this class were made by the Fruit Growers' Associations from four districts, namely, Oshawa, Norfolk, St. Catharines and Chatham. These exhibits show the benefit of organized work along modern and correct lines.

The apples as a whole did not show the improvement as a whole which some expected. The early varieties were generally better, but the long dry spell left its effect on the winter varieties, which are, of course, mostly shown. From the splendid quality of fruit shown, however, no one but an expert would be able to realize that there was much lacking in Ontario apples.

County Exhibits.

The county exhibits this year occupied rather a less prominent place by reason of the fact that they were with one or two exceptions grouped together in front of the boxes on one side of the arena above the main display. The apple-growing counties were, however, fairly well represented, and this department merited a good deal of study.

Norfolk, whose exhibit is shown in one of the accompanying engravings, carries off the honors in this section by a wide margin. Norfolk was not heard of four years ago as an apple centre. Since then, chiefly through the efforts of Jas. C. Johnson, secretary and manager of the county association, and a thoroughly enthusiastic fruit grower, it has come to be, through spraying, cutivation and pruning, one of the foremost apple-growing counties of which the splendid exhibit at the show was an evidence.

Essex was also fairly well represented with a display of standard winter varieties. It also is coming to be important.

Victoria County, though not a recognized apple centre, was represented with a very good display.

Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry, the home of the McIntosh, had a united exhibit devoted largely to this splendid apple.

The display from Prince Edward was not so large as last year. Interest seems to be waning a little in that section by reason of serious inroads of insect pests.

Ontario was well represented.

Lincoln County is going out of apples, the growers getting better returns from other fruit.

Halton had a splendid display of the standard winter varieties. This county is also coming to the fore as an apple grower.

Brant had a fair exhibit and Leeds and Grenville showed largely the scarlet pippin for which the counties are noted.

York's orchards suffer from lack of spraying and the exhibit was only fair.

Oxford's exhibit showed evidence of a new spirit. The old orchards are being renewed and the industry brought back to a paying basis.

An interesting exhibit beside these was that from the O. A. College, Guelph, in the form of a collection of insect pests which prey on fruit and vegetables.

One feature which was not so largely developed this year as last was the exhibits from the Government experimental stations. Six of the twelve stations were represented, chiefly by the earlier varieties of fruit in glass, as follows. Jordan, Walkerton, Simcoe, Maitland, Algoma, and Ottawa, and an exhibit of onions and potatoes from Pt. Pelee.

The Vegetable Department.

The vegetable department of the exhibition has not as yet been so well developed as the other sections, but a first-class showing, so far as quality was concerned, occupied the lower end of the arena. The general lines carried by market gardeners were well represented, but the displays which perhaps attracted most attention were in a class for collections of vegetables in which arrangement was a marked feature. The object of this class was to develop the tasteful display of these goods by gardeners and dealers with a view to better attracting the public. This is a class which deserves encouragement and should be developed in future.

One exhibit which everyone didn't see, but which deserved a good deal of attention, was that made by the Chatham Association, of onions, tomatoes and potatoes. Among the onions were excellent samples of the "prizetaker" variety, which is a duplicate of the Spanish onions so much in demand here. A considerable quantity of these were grown at Leamington this season, and the variety promises to develop into considerable commercial value. Among the potatoes were a few varieties of sweet potatoes from the same locality, where, it is stated, they can be grown without difficulty. The tubers compare exceedingly well with the imported article, and should also be developed to occupy a place in Canadian markets.

Honey Well Represented.

The honey section of the Exhibition was about as well filled as in previous years, though the display was rather better arranged, the facilities offered for this being superior to former years. Special features which attracted interest were exhibits of honey in packages ready for immediate sale, and another, articles of food containing honey.

The Exhibition this year was without doubt the most successful in its history.

ONTARIO HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of Apples from Norfolk County.

The various Association meetings held in the city at the same time attracted a large number of flower and fruit growers and beekeepers from all parts of the Province, and these, with the large crowds of visitors from the city district, assured a success.

PROPOSED LEGISLATIVE CHANGES.

Questions of Interest to Grocers to Be Brought Before Government.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada will ask for legislation on some important matters at the forthcoming session of the Federal Parliament, while certain matters will also be brought to the attention of the Ontario Legislature.

The legislation, which will be asked of the Dominion Government, is in brief as follows :

That the legal weight of a bag of potatoes all over Canada shall be 75 lbs. It might be explained that 80 lbs. is now the legal weight for a bag in Quebec, while in other provinces the customary weight is 90 lbs.

That officers of a corporation should be responsible under the law, the same as individual members or a private firm, and that the officers be liable for the acts of a corporation. E. M. Trowern, Dominion secretary, explained that, when a retailer committed an alleged offence, he could be prosecuted in the police court, but, in the case of an officer of the company, he could be dealt with only through a grand jury. It is desired by the association that all corporation officials and private individuals be placed on the same footing under the law.

An act will also be sought making it a criminal offence for any individual or firm to falsely or dishonestly advertise any article, goods, etc.

That the Criminal Act be amended giving the association the same rights as working men to meet together and arrange their own business affairs without the intervention of the law of the land. As it is now, when three branches of any trade meet together the members may be indicted on a criminal charge, and it is proposed to ask that the Government establish a committee of commerce, to the members of which all agreements and questions settled by the association may be submitted before becoming effective.

That the Government fees for the inspection of weights and measures now imposed on storekeepers and others be abolished. The retailers hold that such fees are for the benefit and protection of the public rather than their own.

From the Ontario Legislature the programme of legislation is not a very extensive one, but among the matters, to which attention is desired, is an amendment to the Peddlers' and Transient Traders' Act, so that traders and peddlers shall pay a fair share to each municipality for doing business ; as in many instances now the tax is very light and transient merchants escape without bearing their just burden.

An amendment is also desired to the Division Court Act of the province, making it a simpler process to collect small debts.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY GROWING.

The Ontario Horticultural Association held its annual meeting in Toronto on Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 10 and 11, at which several profitable papers were read, officers elected and other business transacted.

President Snelgrove, of Cobourg, read the report of the directors, which, among other things, recommended that the Department of Agriculture increase the Legislative grant to the Horticultural Association by at least $2,000, in view of the fact that the membership of the societies has increased by over a third during the year.

The association decided to affiliate with the American Civic Improvement Association, the annual convention of which is being held in Pittsburg this week. The delegates from the Ontario Horticultural Association are J. Lockie Wilson, secretary, and Prof. Hutt, of the O.A.C., Guelph.

Among the papers read were "Scientific Plant Breeding," by H. H. Groff, of Simcoe ; "Window Boxes, Baskets and Rustic Stands," by Prof. Hutt, of the O.A.C., Guelph ; "The Best Method of Keeping Summer Bulbs and Tuberous Plants," by J. McPherson Ross, of Toronto ; "The Ministry of Beauty," by President Snelgrove ; "The Best Half-hardy tub Plants for Ornamentation of Grounds in Summer and How to Keep Them in Winter," by Roderick Cameron, of Toronto ; "Perennial Borders," by Prof. Macoun, of Ottawa ; "Labor-saving Tools for Garden Work," by H. Simmers, Toronto ; "Some Notes on New Flowers," by R. B. Whyte, of Ottawa ; "The Necessity of an Increased Legislation Grant," by W. B. Burgoyne, St. Catharines, and "Increasing Membership," by J. F. Watson, of Ottawa.

The Superintendent of Horticultural Societies, J. Lockie Wilson, presented his report, which, owing to a change in the act, covered only nine months. Reports received from the societies showed an advance in the work done, a large increase in membership and in the amounts expended. Three new societies were organized during the year—Amherstburg, Sault Ste. Marie and Walkerville—all three with memberships of over one hundred. When all returns were in there would probably be a membership all over the province of some 9,000. Especially good work had been done by St. Catharines and Ottawa, the former having a membership of 701 and Ottawa of 1,010. The superintendent referred to the changes in the act by which, among others, the annual meetings must now be held during the first week of November.

The following officers were elected :—President, Major H. J. Snelgrove, Cobourg, (re-elected) ; 1st vice-president, A. R. Whyte, Ottawa (re-elected) ; 2nd vice-president, Roderick Cameron, Toronto, (re-elected) ; secretary, J. Lockie Wilson, Toronto ; treasurer, H. B. Cowan, Peterboro ; honorary directors, W. B. Burgoyne, St. Catharines ; Professor Hutt, O. A. College, Guelph ; Professor W. T. Macoun, C.E.F., Ottawa ; active directors, Rev. A. H. Scott, Perth ; W. Jeffers Diamond, of Belleville ; Miss Blacklock, Toronto ; A. Alexander, Hamilton ; James Mitchell, Goderich ; G. W. Tebbs, Hespeler, and John S. Pearce, London.

DO GROCERS BUY POOR CHEESE?

Dairy Commissioner J. A. Ruddick Explains Why it is Difficult to Get Good Cheese in Canada—Hints for Grocers in the Buying and Handling of the Article.

Some weeks ago in one of his trips through the cheese producing district, J. A. Ruddick, Canadian Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, made a statement to a local newspaper that Canadian grocers generally handled inferior cheese. The statement was questioned rather seriously in several districts, and a good deal of discussion was aroused. To get at the facts in the case, Mr. Ruddick was requested to explain his statement for the benefit of the grocers. In reply, the following letter has been forwarded, which not only thoroughly explains the former statement, but also gives hints on the buying and handling of cheese, which should be of great value to Canadian grocers.—Editor.

Editor The Canadian Grocer.

"I am constantly being asked the question, Why is it so difficult to procure good cheese in this country? Moreover, my own experience as a traveler and family man compels me to admit that the difficulty is a real one. Unless I take advantage of my intimate acquaintance with the cheese business, instead of depending on the ordinary channels of trade, I find it very hard indeed to secure cheese of first quality or in proper condition for home consumption.

"Before proceeding to give some of the reasons, which, in my opinion, are responsible for this condition of things, I wish to make it clear that my references are of a general character, and that I admit there are exceptions which are said to prove the rule.

"There are a few grocers who have given this question some study and attention, and who are succeeding in supplying their customers with a really good article, and, as a result, have built up a large trade in cheese. There are some hotels and restaurants where the same care and attention enable them to supply their patrons with an article fit to eat, but I am bound to say that the great majority of those who cater in cheese to the public of Canada have not studied the business sufficiently to enable them to handle it intelligently I am prepared to endorse the statement that the people of Canada are required to eat much of the cheese which is rejected by the exporters as not being up to the mark for the trade in Great Britain. This cheese is not by any means worthless, but it lacks the necessary quality to insure of its being eaten in large quantities. A cheese may be just a little too dry, leathery, or a little acidy, crumbly or slightly off in flavor, but not sufficiently faulty in any of these particulars to be classed strictly as a cull, but more properly as a second-grade cheese. The difference between a really first-class cheese and a second-grade cheese is so slight that the inexperienced man does not detect the difference on casual inspection. Now, the average grocer gets the "culls"—using the term in the sense already mentioned—because the cheese factory manager knows that he can induce him to buy at full prices many cheese which are rejected by the exporter. It is common knowledge among cheese men that this sort of thing happens every day. I do not mean to say that the grocer deliberately buys the culls, or that he gets all of them. He very often thinks he is buying cheese of the highest quality and really desires to procure that grade.

The Contention Proved.

"The following incident will serve to illustrate the point. Some months ago the writer was visiting one of the leading cheese districts of Ontario, and, being interviewed on this question by the representative of a local paper, I made a reference to the purchase of inferior cheese by the grocers. One of the city grocers was rather indignant at the suggestion and wrote a letter to the paper attempting to prove that I was wrong in my inference, and stating that he sold a large number of cheese (I have forgotten the number) annually, and that he never bought culls, etc. He further stated that he did not believe there were fifty culls in the district in a year. This is the sort of thing which proves my contention. Here is a grocer who, according to his own figures, does much more than an average trade in cheese and yet he knows so little about the general quality of cheese as to say that there are not more than fifty inferior cheese in a large district in a whole year. Any cheeseman knows how far wrong he is.

Some Hints on Buying.

"I would offer this word of advice to grocers. Never buy cheese which are peddled by a cheese manufacturer. There is always some reason for offering cheese in that way, because there is no difficulty about selling cheese of good quality in the export market. It has been a not uncommon practice to offer the cheese made at the tail-end of the season for local consumption. Cheese made in the latter days of October or November are not usually as clean in flavor as those made earlier in the season, and owing to the low temperature which usually prevails, the ripening process proceeds very slowly and the cheese take a longer time to reach proper maturity. Even September cheese, which are supposed to be better than those made in other months of the year, but which are not if the others are properly made and properly ripened, are not in a condition to be consumed during the early part of the following winter. September cheese should not be offered to the public under six months old. And now we come to the principal weakness in the whole business of selling cheese in Canada. Tons of cheese are cut on the counters and given to the public, only to cause dissatisfaction, owing to the fact that they are not sufficiently matured to have developed a real cheesy flavor or to have acquired that meatiness of texture which is so desirable. Moreover, such cheese is to most people indigestible and cannot be eaten in any quantity. These same cheese, if held at suitable temperatures a few months longer, acquire a difference in value from the consumer's standpoint which is most marked.

"If I were in the business of supplying the public of Canada with cheese, I should try to lay in my stock from the June make and buy only from factories provided with cool curing rooms. I would keep the cheese in a temperature not over 60 degrees for at least five or six months before cutting. To save loss in weight, I should have these cheese coated with paraffin wax when they were about two weeks old. This will also prevent mould. Such cheese, if properly made, will have a rich, meaty texture and a real cheesy flavour, both of which characteristics promote a large consumption of cheese and create a desire for more."

J. A. RUDDICK,
Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner.

U.S. WHOLESALERS WANT SUGAR AGREEMENT.

It is said by the New York Journal of Commerce that wholesale grocers in the United States have recently been in communication with the refiners for the purpose of starting negotiations for an exclusive selling agreement. The grocers desire an agreement that will enforce at least a selling price of sugar that will pay the cost of distributing sugar. Nothing whatever has been arranged, however, and practically no progress has been made. "It seems impossible," said a refiner, "to arrive at any definite basis that would stand the test of time. I think all refiners would only be too glad to help their customers, the grocers, to make a profit in distributing sugar. The grocers, however, must be prepared to present a practical and definite proposition. The trouble is they cannot agree among themselves what they want or what they will do. It seems that they all want to be individually the only men to get special discounts and to use those discounts in order to pass them along to their customers in order to show they can sell goods cheaper than their immediate competitors."

Mr. Spreckles, of the Federal Sugar Refinery, denied emphatically that his people were making any cuts below the official quotations. "We have been officially making lower prices than our competitors because we wanted to treat all our customers alike," he continued. "We are doing in the open what others are doing under cover; and we are treating everybody fairly and will continue to do so."

Frank Magor & Co., Montreal, importers of grocers' and confectioners' sundries, have just opened a new office at 34 Church Street, Toronto, in order to better look after their growing business in Ontario.

MOVING TOWARD EARLY-CLOSING

The early-closing movement has taken firm hold in Western Ontario, especially in the smaller centres. This has been brought about more by example than by precept. The day of the early-closing by-law, by which a merchant was compelled to close his store, perhaps against his will, appears to have passed by, and the rule to close the store following in the wake of some leader who was not afraid to lose a few dollars by inaugurating the innovation has taken its place. That this rule of example will accomplish more than the law of force is admitted by all. In the first place, a man does not like to be forced, even though it be along the line of his desires but let a man come to him and appeal to his reason and a friend has been gained who will later on be a follower and upholder of any good movement that may be inaugurated.

When the merchants' associations in various centres found that sometimes they were contravening the law by trying to "enforce" early-closing by-laws, and when they went no further than "recommending" that members of the association show a good example by closing early, they made a distinct advance; they made the move popular in the eyes of the general public.

There are advantages to be gained, too, by early-closing, especially in a store where clerks are employed. The clerks get a needed rest; a little time for recreation. They are thus made better employes—better in health and more loyal. The movement has the sympathy of the public. No doubt at first some little inconveniences are felt, but these are eradicated in a short time, and the buying public will soon accustom itself to the change. The stores need not necessarily be dark at night. Rather the other way round. The windows could be lighted, and in this way besides being a public benefactor in the way of brightening up an otherwise dark street, publicity could be had by drawing attention to the window and store display.

The early-closing movement is now working on proper lines. It is a good movement and should be followed up.

THE IMPORTANCE OF STORE SYSTEM.

If every grocer realized the value of the advice contained in the old maxim "a place for everything and everything in its place," and put the precept into practice, a great difference would be made in the selling power of many stores throughout the country. Success in business does not hang upon one prominent commercial attribute alone. The perception that buys stock at the right time and in the right quantity; the genius for salesmanship that often forces a sale; the faculty for figures that rigidly accounts for every cent involved; the talent for organization that conducts everything on the most systematic lines; individually employed cannot bring success to a business. The merchant who depends upon the one commercial quality alone will find the non-employment of the others counteracting the advantages of the predominant force.

Of course it is not essential to success that a man should possess equal powers in all these four great business assets. If so we are afraid that success would only attend the few. But it is essential, if full measure of profit is to be derived from a merchant's labors that although he may be a better salesman than buyer, a better accountant than organizer he should not minimize the value of the points on which he is weak, and is, therefore, inclined to underrate.

Probably of these four factors which are so important, the one of system is most commonly neglected, especially in the country and suburban districts. This is largely due to the conservatism that dies harder in quiet centres than in more busy ones. It may be that the merchant's father kept his stock in a mixed up fashion, and the son therefore never thinks that an alteration is necessary; while in other cases the absence of keen competition, or the lack of pointers that an observant man in busy centres can glean from the various businesses around them, fails to impress upon the merchant the benefit of system.

If dealers who pay little heed to the neatness of their store realized the extent to which they were retarding their progress by the confusion of their stock, they would assuredly lose no time in putting things in order. The very appearance of a store will tell whether system is employed there or not. The merchant, familiarized with the look of the place will not observe anything wrong, but the customer, who has probably visited other stores, is bound to make disparaging observations. The business run on system and method is clean and prosperous looking, the other one is just the reverse. In the former everything is in its place, there is no delay when certain articles are wanted; in the latter the goods are so mixed up and confused that the dealer himself is often in difficulties in finding what he wants. Customers like to be served promptly. They naturally object to wait while certain articles are unearthed from under a pile of miscellaneous goods. Besides, in the confusion the dealer is often unable to tell whether he has the article wanted in stock or not. All these petty delays and annoyances tell their inevitable tale in the long run. Customers refuse to be subjected to them, and a dealer, although he may be a good salesman across the counter; have a keen judgment in buying his goods; finds in the end to his astonishment that his store is losing trade, while his competitor, who may not possess half his ability, is reaping the benefit.

DO NOT NEGLECT COLLECTIONS.

Conditions this season are favorable to merchants who are desirous of cleaning up outstanding accounts and making the plunge into the cash system of doing business. Crops generally have been good and farm products are commanding good prices. Farmers, too, are realizing on much of their produce early.

Retailers owe it to themselves to take advantage of every opportunity of making early collections and repay any accommodations granted by jobbers during the recent depression. Further, with many making a success of doing business for cash only the wise dealer will take advantage of the opportunity to clean up their books and begin on a cash basis. Retailers should discontinue loaning their capital (in the form of goods) without interest to farmers or workingmen who probably have deposits in the savings banks.

An energetic collection policy or a lack of it on the part of a retail merchant is more or less of a habit.

Some retailers have the habit of pushing collections and the habit of keeping their balances on jobbers' books down to the lowest possible point. The credit of such retailers is always good.

Other retailers have the other habit. They are easy on collections, slow about reducing balances at the jobbing houses and naturally their credit is not always good.

This is a good time to acquire the right habit. There is money floating in the community and the grocer should get to it first.

EXCELLENT CANADIAN PICKLES.

A bulletin just issued from the department of Inland Revenue, the first contribution to the study of pickles as found on Canadian markets, pays rather a pleasing tribute to Canadian pickle manufacturers. Out of 149 samples collected from the various inspectoral districts of Canada in July and August only two were found to be in unsatisfactory condition. 24 of the samples only contained any trace of preservative other than the vinegar and in some of these it was exceedingly slight. The samples were also tested for alum, which is said to be sometimes used for the purpose of hardening the vegetables. This was present in 25 samples, but as the analyst points out, may be in some cases where the trace is slight, due to the fact that particles of clay are taken up by the cucumber as it lies prone on the ground, and this by contact with the acetic acid, may form the alumina.

Altogether, thus the first test of pickles manufactured in Canada seems to point to pretty satisfactory conditions of manufacture. While, as yet there is no Canadian standard defined for this article, the samples will apparently easily conform to other standards.

NEW CANADIAN VEGETABLES.

One or two features among the vegetable exhibits at the Horticultural Exhibition in Toronto last week deserve special mention and show at once the possibility of development of Canada's agricultural products, one of these was a display of two or three varieties of sweet potatoes, shown by the Chatham Growers' Association and grown near Leamington. The samples of tubers were excellent and would compare in every way with the imported varieties. The potatoes were grown this season, it is understood, as an experiment, and no considerable quantity was produced. The experiment, however, turned out so satisfactory that considerably more attention will be given to them next year and it is believed they will become a rival of the imported sweet potato on Canadian markets.

Another somewhat similar display was a showing of large, mild, onions of the same strain and variety as the Spanish onions so largely imported. The quality of these was excellent, and this vegetable also promises to become prominent on Canadian markets.

If these vegetables can be grown in Canada to successfully compete with the imported goods and from the experiments made this year this seems entirely possible, their production should be encouraged in every possible way. This is simply another instance of how Canada's field of production may be widened and the place of imported articles taken in our markets by home-grown products.

PREPARING POULTRY FOR MARKET.

Education is making rapid strides. The effects of enlightened methods are in evidence in many directions, but in other classes advancement appears to be painfully slow. An instance of the latter is furnished by a tour of the wholesale produce firms in Toronto who buy poultry in large quantities from the farmers of neighboring townships. Of late years there has been some improvement but progress is tardy.

The question naturally arises who is at fault? It is not the dealers but the farm producers. The latter have been told time and time again how to properly kill and prepare fowl so as to market it to the greatest advantage, yet many go on in the same old careless way and accept in the end a smaller figure for their birds than they would realize if they attended to some simple instructions.

The shape in which thousands of Thanksgiving turkeys were received was deplorable, not to make use of a much stronger term. The birds were immature, ill-fed or over-fed, and in a number of cases scalded in order that their feathers might be more easily plucked. In the face of advice tendered by weekly papers, agricultural journals, speakers at farmers' institutes and directions sent out by produce firms, little improvement is noticeable. The poultry, more especially turkeys, was not up to the average standard and as a consequence sales were rather backward. The attitude of the farmers, dealers say, is attributable to either of two causes and not due to want of education or lack of instruction. These are carelessness or avarice and in the majority of cases, the men who purchase the birds, are of the opinion that the unsatisfactory state of affairs is due to indifference. All domestic fowl should be starved at least twelve hours, if not twenty-four, before being slaughtered, the latter being preferable. The bird looks its worst when its crop is full, as in a short time fermentation and putrification sets in and the appearance of the fowl is anything but inviting. It is necessary for the proper preservation of the bird that its stomach should not be distended by a liberal allowance of feed, and, when it is fed right up to the hour it is killed, the buyer at once makes a deduction far more than any extra advantage gained by the seller from the weight of so much grain. If the farmer thinks that by giving a turkey or goose a generous quantity of cereals he is going to get so much more out of the dealer or commission house by disposing of the contents of the stomach along with the carcass at twelve or thirteen cents a pound he is sadly mistaken, for the purchaser is no tyro at the business and cannot be deceived.

All fowl should be starved for several hours before slaying, and birds that are too young and have not been adequately fed for some weeks had better not be offered if the farmer would consult his own best interest. Good turkeys will bring a fair price at any time and it is not necessary to hasten their end in order to put them on the market at Thanksgiving season. Standard, well-preserved turkeys, properly raised, killed and prepared for the consumer, will always command the highest price and be given the preference every time. It is a short-sighted policy to adopt any other course.

Another matter, that may be mentioned, is that, under no circumstances should the dressed fowl be scalded in order that its feathers may be removed a little more easily. The scalded fowl is soon discolored and presents anything but a tempting appearance with its torn skin and mottled carcass. All feathers should be plucked without resorting to the hot water method and, if geese, for instance, are killed at the proper season there is no need whatever for the too common practice of scalding. Neither should they be killed at a time when their bodies leave every evidence of pin feathers, for such bodies bring only the lowest consideration and dealers are glad to get rid of them at any figure, especially when offerings are large and the demand limited.

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, November 19, 1908.

Fish—Advanced.
Fruit—Declined.
Eggs—Advanced.
Cheese—Advanced.
Butter—Dairy lines firmer.

It is a gratifying indication of returning good times to note the optimistic tone which reports from all over Canada seem to convey. Traveling men are reporting a better tone in business circles. A very material evidence of this is the fact that many dealers are paying more promptly than for a long time. Wholesale houses report orders of larger volume and a smaller number of orders of the hand to mouth variety, which have characterized trade for a long time. Locally, fruits are a little easier this week. Fish are slightly more firm. As is generally the case at this season of the year, eggs have gone a little higher and are in good demand. Cheese is firm, likewise butter. Honey prices have been fully maintained under a fair demand only. Beans are less active than they have been lately. Other lines are practically unchanged or so little so as to deserve no comment.

SUGAR—The demand has been if anything a little better during the week and prices have been maintained. The surplus crop of this year, which it was estimated would be about 200,000 tons more than last year, will receive considerable modification owing to continued drought in Germany and Austria-Hungary. The cane crop is estimated to be also in excess of last season's.

From Denia, 75,463 half boxes raisins, 6,000 one-eighth boxes raisins, 2,562 quarter boxes raisins, 800 mats figs. From Malaga 1,912 half boxes raisins, 1,651 quarter boxes raisins, 170 cases raisins, 60 half raisins. Currants are only in fair demand and chiefly in small lots and the tone of the market is steady. Advices from Greece are to the effect that the demand for currants is somewhat below normal, but in the absence of pressure to sell the market is steady. Persian dates of the new crop are closely cleaned up on the spot and there is a good demand for stock to arrive on the second tide steamer, Afghanistan, due to arrive in New York about the 12th inst.

TEA—Locally the Japan tea market is a little quiet. Prices are well maintained, especially in Japan, owing to a large shortage. This shortage is being more keenly felt perhaps in the United States than here. Blacks are somewhat dull also, with no changes in quotations.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Steady.
NUTS—New Tarrogona almonds in.
Raisins—Firmer.
Canned Goods—Passing off well.

Toronto, November 19, 1908.

The renewed activity noted in the wholesale market last week continues. There is little buying in large lots but the orders are coming steadier and oftener and indicate a healthier condition of affairs. Christmas goods, of course, are now being largely stocked and the fact that these are being bought just as heavily as usual is an evidence of the retailers' faith in the situation. Dried fruits are in good demand, figs, dates and the better lines of raisins selling well. Filberts and Tarragona almonds are in and the Grenoble walnuts are on the way. Valencia raisins, which have been cut down pretty low by several local firms for the past month, are being held a little more firmly and a firmer feeling may also be anticipated when new stocks arrive, probably next week. Money is coming in fairly well though some houses freely admit that the retailers have not pushed their accounts particularly and in consequence are not any too well supplied with ready cash.

SUGAR—The local refined market is steady with no indication of any change in the immediate future. The raw markets generally seem slightly firmer, though there has not been much change either way. Sharp competition in the United States is responsible for some moves in the market there which are hard to understand. American and Howell interests officially advanced 10 points on Tuesday, though they still continued to accept business at old rates. Following this another company declined on the same day. While this will have no direct effect on Canadian refined markets it shows the tendency across the line.

TEA—The local market is comparatively quiet, with a firmer feeling in all grades, but particularly the higher ones, in Ceylons and Indians. Reviewing the general situation, Thompson Bros., London, say in their latest report: "With useful prices and sales not unduly heavy, the market during the past week has fully maintained its own, except, perhaps, for the commonest kinds which remain flat. The highest grades as before have been in best demand and have sold dearer in many cases, while medium grades also have found ready buyers at late rates. Notwithstanding the duty payments, which for October only amounted to 28,990,903 lbs., against 30,173,243 lbs. in 1907, there is a good trade doing, and the moderate values now ruling have no doubt encouraged buyers to take in some little stock in excess of their immediate requirements, and on this basis they are satisfied to wait events. The shipments from India to date, as cabled, look heavy it is true, but it should be borne in mind that of late years the tendency on all sides has been to press forward for quick sale. Judging from cabled outturns to the end of last month, the total crop should not be very much in excess of that of 1907, for while some districts show an increase, others barely exceed the output of last season and some are even short. Ceylon shipments for October are wired as 7,534,900 lbs., against 7,111,700 lbs. last year. Since January 1st, 1908, 93,001,900 lbs.; 1907, 92,694,000 lbs.

COFFEE—The local market continues steady with no change in prices and good business being done. Notwithstanding recent operations in Sao Paulo, which have practically meant the downfall of the Brazilian valorization scheme, local markets are as yet unaffected, and dealers say any change in consequence will not be material.

DRIED FRUITS—Demand for most lines of these goods is fairly heavy in anticipation of Christmas buying. Business is steady, however. The very close prices on Valencia raisins which most of the houses have been quoting for some weeks continues, though the tone of the market is a little steadier this week, and with new stocks due to arrive nekt week, which are held more firmly, it seems probable prices will be higher. A shipment of new Hallowee dates is also expected shortly. Beyond this the dried fruit lines are fairly steady at prices quoted:

CANNED GOODS

CANNED GOODS—The demand continues steady, fruits, vegetables and salmon and goods are passing out briskly. The fact that less buying on future than usual was done in these goods this year is evident in the steady business now being done. One wholesaler said this week that he did not remember of so good business being done in some lines at the same season before. The low prices this season are evidently causing an increase in consumption.

VEGETABLE GROWERS' CONVENTION.

Matters of Interest Discussed at Meeting in Toronto Last Thursday.

The Association of Ontario Vegetable Growers, who held their annual meeting in Toronto last Thursday, Nov. 12, were addressed by Hon. J. S. Duff, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, and W. O. Sealey, M.P., for Wentworth.

Hon. Mr. Duff spoke of the importance of the association and the excellent outlook for vegetable growers caused by the great growth of the city and urban populations. He said that he had been an interested spectator of the agitation for protection and was glad to learn that the measure of protection given by the Dominion Government had proved of such great benefit to vegetable and fruit growers.

W. O. Sealey, M.P., urged the vegetable growers to follow the example of the manufacturers and join themselves with a confederation of all the agricultural interests for the purpose of making a united demand on the Federal Government for more protection.

Prof. Macoun, of Ottawa, read a valuable paper on "Irrigation for vegetables and small fruits." He described a home-made irrigation plant on Mr. Geo. A. Mitchell's farm at Pinelands, N.J., erected at a cost of $329. The cost of irrigation was $2.50 per acre and resulted in the cabbage crop increasing in value by $20 per acre, sweet potatoes increasing in yield 76 per cent., white potatoes 36 per cent., and melons 34 per cent.

Several other educative papers were read during the session.

NO CHANGE IN COCOA DUTIES.

Rumor Circulated Regarding This Proved Foundationless.

A rumor to the effect that the Dominion Government intended to place a duty of two cents per pound on the cocoa beans which are imported into Canada from the British West Indies was circulated in Toronto a few days ago. This report gained such currency that it caused some alarm to the manufacturers of chocolate and cocoa in the city. Learning that Hon. Wm. Paterson, Minister of Customs, was in the city, they accordingly waited upon him on Friday, Nov. 13, at the Customs House. The minister informed the deputation that he knew nothing of the proposed duty and the deputation went away in a rather happy frame of mind. The report in several of the Toronto dailies that the members went to secure a preference for certain products used in the manufacture of chocolate and cocoa is without foundation.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg has been counting up her efforts in the building line for the past year and finds that they are decidedly satisfactory. The sum total is not so large as that of 1907 though; it is somewhat less than a million dollars behind. The gratifying feature, however, is that whereas in 1907 from July onward the building permits steadily decreased in volume and value, during 1908 from July onward the permits increased both in number and value. The number of permits for October, 1908, being 144, and of a value of $429,600, against 95 of a value of $134,000 in 1907, it is quite probable that the months of November and December will go far to removing the balance to the side of 1908.

Two costly buildings erected by the Federal Government during the year are indications of the growing importance of Winnipeg. One of these is a $60,000 branch post office. This is situated in the north end of Winnipeg on the corner of Magnus and Main Streets, a spot that five years ago was considered a remote suburb. The most important building, however, attempted by the Federal Government, as well as one of the most costly to be erected this year, is the new examining warehouse. Reference was made to this a couple of weeks ago in connection with the large amount of structural steel used. The building will cost when complete close upon $300,000. It is 81x225 feet, four storeys and basement. The first floor is 20 feet high, the second and third 17 feet and the fourth 16 feet. It is built entirely of red brick, with steel frame and cement floors and is as perfectly fireproof as anything can be made. The extent of this warehouse and the speed with which it is being rushed to completion is a concrete evidence of the development of Winnipeg, and for that matter the West generally, for much of the freight that is examined at Winnipeg is for western points as well as for the city itself

A factory that has been added this year supplies a long-felt want for the West, and that is the tar paper factory just complated by the Merrick, Anderson Co. The plant includes the factory proper, a warehouse and tar tank, all situated in Winnipeg's new suburb of Elmwood. The cost was $65,000. The factory building is of reinforced concrete and fireproof. The tank, which is of the same material, has a capacity of 8,000 gallons. The consumption of tar paper in the west is enormous and the untarred paper is cheaper and easier to bring in than when tarred, so that the erection of this factory is one more step in the direction of facilitating building operations in the West.

The Prairie Oil Co. suffered a very heavy loss through fire during the week. their warehouse and plant and one of the large oil tanks was completely destroyed the loss being estimated at $40,000, with only partial insurance. Four tanks of oil and three cars standing on the track were saved by the firemen. The stock carried was heavy at this time of the year, both in oils and coal tar. Very great sympathy is expressed for the company among business men, owing to the fact that they were burned out in Norwood two years ago and their loss then was a heavy one. The men composing the company are young and plucky and already they announce that the plant will be replaced as speedily as possible. There is no clue to the origin of the fire.

The Royal Crown Soap Co., of Winnipeg, and the Royal Soap Company, Limited, which is really a branch of the same concern, have bought out the assets of the Standard Soap Co., of Calgary, and the Calgary business will be under the direct management of M. Bull, who at present is president of both the Winnipeg and Vancouver companies. There will be a new company formed for the Calgary business, however, and the men who will compose it are all well known in the West, in fact, they are all western men, A. N. Nanton, G. R. Crowe, W. R. Allan, W. A. Black, of Winnipeg; J. A. Mitchell, of Victoria, formerly of Winnipeg; F. T. Schooley, of Vancouver, and Pat Burns, of Calgary.

It is less than 25 years since the Royal Crown Soap Co., of Winnipeg, was formed, and commenced operation in the most primitive way, and many were the wise heads shaken at the idea that any manufacturing business could be successfully carried on in Winnipeg, and compete in price and quality with goods brought from the East. M. Bull, who had the courage to start, went on his way quietly, producing a first-class article and one that wherever it was used was called for again. To-day the Winnipeg factory of this company is one of the largest and best equipped soap factories in Canada. The one at Vancouver that has been in operation for some years is also an excellent factory, and now the Standard Soap Works, of Calgary, with their large plant, has passed under the same successful management. Every sleeping car on the Canadian Pacific and every one of their steamers on the lakes and also their steamers crossing to the Orient help to advertise the Royal Crown Soap, for their famous Witch Hazel brand is put up in tiny cakes especially for this trade. The Royal Crown Soap Co. is one of the things of which westerners are intensely proud, because it has been built up almost exclusively by western pluck and with western capital. This new extension will be welcomed with interest by the trade everywhere.

One of the events of November will be the holding of the annual municipal convention at Brandon. This convention is a matter of quite recent growth, but it is taking hold of municipal problems with both zeal and discretion and already much good has been accomplished. This year among the important measures to be discussed is that of municipal fire protection, a general revision of the municipal acts and municipal hail insurance. These are very live topics in the West at the present time.

The wheat situation has changed little during the week. The receipts have passed all records, as have the outward shipments from the head of the lakes. In face of these receipts prices have been very firm and again it is possible to report an advance for the entire week, though there have been periods of slight reaction.

A little snow has fallen during the week and should Foster's big storm come about the 16th, as predicted, it will no doubt delay things. Otherwise conditions look good for 50,000,000 bushels being got to the lake front before navigation closes.

There has been rather more interest in coarse grains during the week and the price for oats has advanced, but flax has made quite a phenomenal market, jumping 2c and 3c a day. Receipts of flax to date have been very much in excess of 1907, to the same date, in fact, nearly three times as much, yet the market soaks them up like a sponge. The cause of the advance in flax is generally attributed to the damage done by frost in the Argentine, and an only fair to middling crop in the United States. The average of the United States for the past six years has only been 9.7 per acre, and though the Government places the yield this year at 9.5, well-posted authorities state that this is entirely too high and that it will not go over 8.5, which would give a total crop of a little over 24,000,000 bushels. The crop of the Canadian West is not a large one, but if present prices are maintained, it is likely to be quite a factor in the aggregate income of the West.—H.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, November 19, 1908.)

The arrival of cold weather is a reminder that navigation on the great lakes will close almost immediately, but the railways have handled the grain shipments so satisfactorily this fall that the West is in good shape at the close of navigation and there is little grumbling. The satisfactory way in which the grain has been handled has had its effect upon shipments from the East. As the railways do not care to haul empties, the shipments from the East were handled quickly in the returning grain cars.

Crop money is getting into circulation quite freely now and the effect is being felt on general business. The outlook is good.

PEANUTS COMING DOWN?

Large Crop in Virginia May Lower Price on Local Market.

A despatch from Tennessee intimates that the peanut association of that State has reduced the price from $1 to 85c per bushel, and that the decrease will continue for 30 days. It has been the custom of late for certain peanut men to sell very much below the prices of the association, in order to satisfy their financial obligations. The association, has, therefore, lowered the price in order to keep all members in line.

Local dealers in nuts, etc., when interviewed regarding the possibility of the reduction being felt in Canada, stated that very few Tennessee peanuts were handled or sold in Toronto. The largest number come from Virginia, and some from Japan. Shipments of the new crop of peanuts from Virginia are on the way to Toronto, and will arrive next week. The harvest is reported to be an abundant one, the yield in peanuts in Virginia being one of the largest on record. It is expected, owing to the big crop, that there will be a reduction in the price of peanuts per lb. What that amount will be cannot be definitely stated until the new nuts are placed on the market. Dealers report that there is never much money in handling peanuts, as after roasting the shrinkage is very great, sometimes as much as 15 per cent. Jumbos are now quoted at 13c per lb., and the trade is anxiously awaiting the arrival of the new fruit in order to ascertain at what figure wholesalers will dispose of it.

RETAIL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION NOTES.

The Grocers' Section of the Toronto branch of the Retail Merchants' Association will meet on Monday evening next.

James Eadie, Provincial Organizer, is spending this week in Oshawa and Whitby, where branches of the association will be formed.

Several branches throughout the Province have adopted the plan of employing permanent secretaries who are paid a liberal salary to look after the affairs of the various branches within each county. This plan has been adopted by the associations at Peterboro, Guelph and other places and splendid results are expected from such an undertaking. The paid secretaries are active and aggressive, visit the different branches in each county and are at all times available to further the work, to assist in the adjustment of grievances or to advance propositions for the attention of the Provincial Boards or the Dominion Boards.

ADVERTISING PERSISTENTLY.

The important fact in the management of a store is that it is open for business regularly on all business days. This fact makes it important that the pulling power, the influence of the advertising should be as steady as the service of clerks. There is no day on which the advertising can be suspended without doing injury to the store—just as sure and positive injury as would be done by suspending any other function of the store for a day or two now and then.

For advertising has come to be a "function" of every live store—a part of the "service" it renders to the public. Advertising information is calculated to save the time and money of the store patrons—and there is no good time to suspend such a function as this.

THE FARMER AND THE BUSINESS MAN

C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Points Out the Mutual Interests and Interdependence of the Classes—How the Farm's Output May Be Increased.

The citizen and the farmer have mutual interests, and as those interests are undertaken and developed in a right spirit, a country makes solid and steadfast progress. The interdependence of the business man and the farmer, of the resident of the urban centre as well as the rural, the part which each should play, and how the material wealth of the Province could be increased by all acting in a spirit of co-operation and sympathy, were strikingly brought out in an intensely interesting address before the Canadian Club, Toronto, on Monday last when C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Province, spoke on "Agricultural Problems of Ontario."

It may be remarked that no more progressive and wide-awake officer is in the service of the Provincial Government than Mr. James. He is a thinker, an originator, a builder. To recount the excellent work he has done would be to repeat a tale that is familiar as the multiplication table. He is the man who is the father of teaching agriculture in the schools, and, in many other lines, he has blazed the way for the amelioration of the condition and comfort of the great farming community as well as pointed to numerous paths that have led to improvement in the many sources of revenue from the farm.

Mr. James is a man of big ideas, animated by lofty purpose, and possesses executive and initiative ability of a high order. He is no dreamer, no theorist, but is eminently practical in all that he undertakes. His splendid services in the great cause of agricultural science cannot be appraised too highly. Mr. James emphasized that the city man should be interested in the farmers' work because agriculture is the greatest national industry. In the Province of Ontario alone there are 175,000 farms, representing an investment of over $1,200,000,000, and an annual product of $200,000,000, and yet out of the total number of representatives recently elected to Parliament, only seven were farmers. He pointed out that only a ten per cent. increase from each farm would result in a gain to the Province annually of $20,000,000, and believed it easily possible to increase the output, not by ten per cent., but by twenty or thirty, if only the farmers of the country could put into operation the best methods known.

To Increase Output.

It was a comparatively easy thing to add $100 annually to the income of a farmer, and in any district around a rural town with 200 farms adjacent, this meant $20,000 a year more to spend in it. It will thus be seen how vital should be the interest of the average citizen to assist the farmer to an increased earning power from his farm. The mutual interests of the civic and rural resident were so co-related and associated that what benefits one is of great assistance to the other, and with the advent of the telephone, rural mail delivery, electric railways and other elements working out a change in country life, it will soon be difficult to draw the line between town and country. What will result from the introduction of cheap electric power in manufacturing lines it is impossible to foretell.

Buying for Cash.

The farmer is now buying and selling for cash. The business man is more than ever concerned in his progress and welfare. The farmer also deserves attention from the city merchant as he is the controller of the food products and a producer of surplus cash. Banks are being opened everywhere to accommodate the farmer, and as a result, savings deposits are largely increasing. The farmer had a moral effect or influence upon the country. A source of great danger to a nation is its congested districts and the development of a strong, healthy, active rural life is one of the most important assets in the future of any people.

Many Educative Agencies.

Among other forceful facts brought out by Mr. James were that the Government had nine agencies at work in the education and development of the farm. The head office looked after statistics, issued reports, did special work and represented generally. The agricultural and horticultural societies had been at work for 116 years, the longest established organizations outside the Legislature. The live stock branch directed cattle and poultry shows and looked after these interests. The farmers' institute work brought the latest word to the farmer about his business. The dairy branch, with 40 odd instructors in cheese factories and creameries, also went into the homes of the farmers to improve dairy conditions there. The first branch had recently been active in the city and raised the standard of packing and marketing. The colonization bureau was occupied with bringing the right sort of immigrants to the farming communities and in supplying labor to the farmer. The Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph was well-known and the veterinary college was the latest addition to the Government's work.

On these lines they were trying to touch the farmer on some point at least, if not in all, upon which he was interested.

Could they increase the number of farmers, or increase the capital invested, or increase the output? He asserted that the protection might be doubled.

Drainage Department.

A drainage department was in its infancy, having only been in existence for three or four years. A scheme for dealing with lands which were deforested and unfit for farming is being considered to buy back the lands from those who now only eked out a miserable existence, and turn the lands back to the forest reserves.

In the rear rocky townships of many counties, where the pine had all been removed, and the people were tied down, unable to get away and sinking lower and lower in the scale, some scheme should be possible for taking these people away and placing them on the clay belt, where there are 15 million acres, and the northern limit of which is the same parallel as Winnipeg.

If the improved seeds developed by the agricultural society were used by farmers all over the country, 25 per cent. increase would be quite possible. In ten years the live stock trade had increased from 30 to 60 millions.

An Inviting Investment.

Mr. James suggested that if a prospectus were prepared of the farm industry of Ontario, showing the investment and present revenue, and estimating the possible increases, ten per cent. on live stock, ten per cent. in dairying, ten per cent. in fruit, ten per cent. in each department, doubling the revenue, it would attract attention.

"Put a prospectus of that sort beside the most glowing Cobalt prospectus ever seen, and which would you prefer?"

That more had not been done was partly because of the want of the men, partly because of the want of money. The Government was giving all the assistance the revenue would permit. He could only hope the revenue would increase.

The Northwest had drained Ontario of its young men. Everywhere the farmer was crying out that he was crippled and could not get his work done. The labor problem was acute.

To Stir the Indifferent.

The indifferent farmer was a decided obstacle. The question was how to get his attention. The farmers' institutes had done a great deal, and the women's institutes were gradually inaugurating a revolution in the conditions of farm life.

The result of opening of branch offices in the country towns, with live young men representing the Government departments, has been most encouraging, and if this new missionary movement could be started in 30 or 40 centres it would bring a solution of the problem to be met.

R. J. Sharp has returned to Montreal, after a very successful trip through western Ontario, in the interests of W. P. Downey, the maker of White Dove cocoanut and almond paste. Mr. Sharp generally brings in a good bunch of orders when he gets out for a few weeks.

Travelers Nominate New Officers

Dominion Association Met in Montreal and Canadian Association in Toronto on Saturday, Nov. 14.—S. J. Mathewson, of Mathewson's Sons, Wholesale Grocers, Montreal, Elected President of Dominion Body—And J. B. Giles, Sales Manager of the Radnor Co., Vice-President.

A quarterly meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association was held in the Board of Trade Building, Montreal, last Saturday evening, when nominations for officers for the coming year were made.

Samuel J. Mathewson, of Mathewson's Sons, Montreal, was elected President by acclamation, while J. Bevans Giles was made Vice-President in the same manner, and Max Murdock was re-elected Treasurer.

Nine nominations were handed in to fill the vacancies which will occur on the board of ten directors on the occasion of the retirement of five gentlemen at present in office. Those nominated were:—Harold H. Hughes, Louis Decelles, John T. McBride, Charles of Mathewson's Sons, Montreal, President-Elect of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

S. J. MATHEWSON,

Roberts, F. N. Picard, G. W. Prescott, C. D. O'Brien, H. M. Levin, A. J. Brown.

A committee composed of the following was appointed to arrange the date and place for the annual dinner of the association:—A. A. Freedman, E. E. Guilbault, F. S. Cote, H. M. Levin, D. M. Lefebvre, R. C. Wilkins, E. D. Marceau, Max Murdock, J. B. Giles, F. N. Picard, S. J. Mathewson, Ald. Jas. Robinson, Jno. Paterson, T. L. Paton, L. Decelles, J. Gravel, Geo. A. Mann, Jas. Shaw, J. F. L. Dubreuil, J. T. McBride, A. G. Gardner, Chas. Roberts and R. Dionne.

The annual meeting will take place December 12, when it is expected that very satisfactory reports for the year will be presented.

S. J. Mathewson spoke very highly of the splendid services rendered the association by the retiring president, W. J. Egan, during his year in office. His work was to be strongly commended. J. Bevans Giles and Max Murdock also said a few words, and they too were given a small ovation on arising.

The president referred in feeling terms to the recent death of J. H. Morin, one of the fourth vice-presidents, and the secretary was requested to convey to the family of the deceased the association's expression of sincere sympathy.

DOMINION TRAVELERS' NEW PRESIDENT.

S. J. Mathewson, of Mathewson's Sons, Montreal, the new president of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, was born in Montreal, July 3, 1861. At the age of 15 he entered his father's business, and with his brother was made a member of the firm in 1884, the new company being known as J. A. Mathewson & Co. It will be seen from this that he has been in the grocery business all his life, and he is therefore a worthy exponent of the old adage, "doing one thing and doing it well." Ireland is the land, though four generations remote, from which he springs, and his family, as well as thousands of others, has contributed its share to the sound commercial growth of this country.

Fifteen years spent actually on the road and occasional journeyings at present now renders him eligible for the post which he is in every respect qualified to fill. Mr. Mathewson is the father of ten children, the eldest of which, a boy, is an undergraduate of McGill University in the Faculty of Law.

"Sam," as all his friends know him, is a busy man of affairs, but finds time to indulge in a little duck shooting every autumn, and many a duck has regretted lingering within range of his gun. Mr. Mathewson has a splendid summer place at Metis, of which he has good reason to be proud. While his career may be distinguished by doing the ordinary extraordinary well, rather than doing the extraordinary, an account of his life would be incomplete without the mention of a predominant characteristic which impresses everyone who comes in contact with him. This is his pride in the growth of his native city, and his patriotism to his country. To some this is an empty bauble and is indulged in because it is the prevailing vogue. Not so, however, with S. J. Mathewson, who has manifested this interest in ways which have proved the genuine nature of his feelings beyond mere words, and those who know him learn that his motto, "Boost; don't knock," is what sets the wheels of progress in motion and lubricates their operation.

The affairs of the association could not be in better hands and the boys will naturally expect big things of "S. J."

They will not be disappointed.

CANADIAN ASSICIATION'S OFFICERS.

At a general meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada, held in Toronto on Saturday night last, one or two surprises developed.

John Kenney asked if it was the intention of the association to admit women members, which question called forth a lively discussion in which a few

J. BEVAN GILES,
Elected Vice-President of the Dominion Travelers' Association.

travelers championed the cause of the fair drummers, while others stoutly maintained that traveling was not a suitable job for women. They contended that it was neither a desirable nor proper avocation for the female.

The proposition was finally left over for definite action at the annual meeting, as the gathering on Saturday night was called only for the nomination of officers. It is said that lady members have been admitted to the Dominion Travelers' Association, with headquarters at Montreal and London.

A letter read from the transportation companies to the association was quoted as saying that the railways did not see how they could help giving equal privileges to the women if they complied with all the rules and regulations.

Lewis A. Howard, retiring president, presided, and stated that owing to business engagements it would be impossible for him to accept a third term. He congratulated the meeting on the continued prosperity of the association, as during the current year the roll showed an increase in membership with no increase of expenses. The payments for mortuary benefits were the largest in the history of the association, yet notwithstanding the same a satisfactory balance would be carried to the permanent reserve fund.

The nominations were:—President, John Gibson, elected by acclamation; First Vice-President, Robert Gemmell, elected by acclamation; Second Vice-President, S. M. Sterling, elected by acclamation; Treasurer, E. Fielding, John H. Kenney, one to be elected.

Directors of Toronto Board—J. G. Gane, Harry Ellis, W. M. Fielding, James H. Lumbers, W. J. Micks, Geo. W. Moore, A. C. Rogers, W. H. Scott, C. J. Tuthill, J. H. Wildfong, nine to be elected.

Hamilton Board—First Vice-President, E. J. Fenwick, R. M. Stuart, one to be elected; Second Vice-President, John Stoneman, elected by acclamation. Directors, Hamilton Board, W. H. Dean, Arthur F. Hatch, Fred. W. Jarvis, Geo. A. Mathewson, S. Male, George M. McGregor, P. A. Sommerville, C. C. Smye, H. G. Wright, E. O. Zimmerman, six to be elected.

Berlin Board—Fred. Doering, W. J. Moody.

Kingston Board—W. H. Graham, W. S. R. Murch.

Guelph Board—Adam Taylor, Vice-President; C. Kloepfer, Director.

Brantford Board—J. S. Hamilton, D. J. Waterous.

Montreal Board—S. O. Shorey, Vice-President; Wm. Cauldwell, Director.

Winnipeg Board—H. Miller, Vice-President; A. C. Merrett, Director.

Vancouver Board—Fred Buscombe, Robert Stewart.

Ottawa Board—John Everett, Director.

Brockville Board—M. Moore, Director.

The annual meeting and election will be held on Wednesday, December 23rd.

THE RIVAL DRUMMERS.

It was two rival drummers
The merits that did blow
Of safes were in St. Louis made
And safes from Chic-ag-o.

They chanced upon a merchant
Who fain a safe would buy,
And in the praise of the houses' wares
The drummers twain did vie,
Each striving to see which could construct
The most colossal lie.

Out spake the St. Louis drummer,
"Once a man a cat did take,
And locked the animal in a safe
Of our superior make.

"They made a bonfire around the safe
With tar and kerosene,
And for four-and-twenty hours it blazed
With raging heat, I ween.

"The fire went out, the safe was cooled
And I will forfeit five Hundred good dollars if that cat
Did not come out alive."

Then mild upspake and answered him
The Chic-ag-o safe-agent:
"With our safe one day we did assay
The same experiment.

"We placed the safe selected on
Of coals a fiery bed,
And pitch pine we heaped in coal oil steeped
Till the iron glowed bright red;
And in forty-eight hours we ope'd the safe,
And, alas! the cat was dead."

"Was dead! Aha!" his rival cried,
With a triumphant breath;
But the Chicago man replied:
"Yes, the cat was frozen to death!"

No word that St. Louis drummer spoke,
But silent he stood and wan,
While the Kansas merchant an order gave
To the Chicago man.

REGISTRATION OF SECURITIES.

If the decision of the Court of Appeal in the action of Mrs. J. R. Johnston vs. Osler Wade, a case arising out of the failure of the Poole Publishing Co., Limited, Toronto, of which Mr. Wade was assignee, is allowed to stand, it may seriously affect business credit, especially of joint stock companies. The circumstances connected with the suit are interesting. It appears the solicitors of the plaintiff devised a form of security known as a floating security, which in reality is as effective as a chattel mortgage and has many of the attributes of such a document. This particular form or charge does not need to be registered, in fact may be absolutely secret and yet cannot be set aside.

When an assignment was made by the Poole Publishing Company, Mrs. Johnston claimed preference over other creditors because of this unregistered security or blanket mortgage, so to speak. They contested the legality of the security, but Mr. Justice McMahon decided against them.

As this deprived the other creditors of a share in the Poole Publishing Company's estate, they appealed the judgment and carried it to the Court of Appeal.

The case was argued last March and has been under deliberation by the court ever since. Four of the judges of the Court of Appeal handed out judgments in the matter dismissing the creditors' appeal, Mr. Justice Garrow dissenting from the majority of the court. It is understood that the creditors will not take the matter to the Supreme Court, so that the law may now be regarded as settled on that point.

This case is one of the most important and far reaching in its effects that has come before the courts in recent years and may unsettle for the time being commercial credits which are based largely upon the necessity for registration and consequent publicity in case of mortgages, transfers, etc., on goods and chattels.

Osler Wade, assignee of the Poole Co., states that if this decision is allowed to stand, and a precedent is thereby established in the case of joint stock companies, who may issue bonds to raise money, or effect a floating unregistered security, there is great danger. Mr. Wade says that he will take immediate steps in the interests of the mercantile world to bring the matter to the notice of the Attorney-General's Department, with the object of securing an amendment to the Bill of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, and requiring the registration of all documents of this character, or any charges or liens of the nature referred to.

The great danger lies in the fact that one creditor desiring to obtain security without the knowledge of other creditors can do so. Joint stock concerns could practically hypothecate their assets to any creditor without registration of the document, which is the only protection and safeguard that others have.

In the case of Mrs. Johnston, it is said she was practically a silent partner in the Poole Company. She periodically supplied them with capital and in return the company assigned all their assets to her. The amount of indebtedness fluctuated from time to time and when the concern went under she stepped in and said, "The whole belongs to me, it was my money that ran it."

Mr. A. F. Lobb, K.C., asked about the recent decision, said law was developed by a process of evolution and that new points were cropping up and defects being discovered, which were remedied from time to time. Legislation could not be framed too far in advance, otherwise it might be pernicious in character.

Some years ago it was enacted that all chattel mortgages, bills of sale, etc., should be registered. This looked like some protection for all creditors. In a year or two the Act was got around or side-stepped by a purchaser of goods or a borrower of money not giving a chattel mortgage as security, but merely signing an agreement to give such a mortgage when required. Of course, this agreement held good so far as the parties signing it were concerned, without registration, as it was not within the Act, but what about other creditors, men who sold goods to the storekeeper, who advanced money, etc.? The Act was then further amended for the safeguarding of all parties by requiring that any agreements to give a bill of sale or chattel mortgage should be registered.

What is wanted now is the insertion of such a clause in the statutes covering all cases of joint stock companies, their chattels, etc. It is likely that, as this point has been brought to light, the necessary legislation will be granted next session to make the securities valid in any and every case which may arise like that of Johnston vs. Wade, (Poole Publishing Co.).

TO POLISH THE WINDOW.

Nothing serves to attract as much attention as a highly polished show window, and the dealer having one has no trouble in drawing a crowd to his window display. The following mixture, which is in the form of a paste, when applied with a soft rag and rubbed off with another soft, dry rag and used properly, will make the window as clear as day. To make it, it is necessary to take nine ounces prepared chalk, one-half ounce jewelers' rouge, five ounces water, three ounces alcohol, and stir thoroughly.

Western Canada Notes

New Canning Companies Organized in British Columbia—Business in Vancouver up to Last Year—What Saskatoon Merchants Say.

VANCOUVER.

November 14.—Business generally is not up to what has been expected. Of course, if the retailer found it better, it would be better for the wholesaler, but with careful buying on the part of the consumer, stocks are sorted up without very heavy buying. The volume of business on the average is about the same as that of last year at this time, though there was an increase a couple of months ago. Trade is not poor, and as the holiday season is coming on, it should be good, and after the holiday season will come what is confidently expected by all to be the real start after the depression of a year ago, the after-effects of which are now being felt.

Local representatives of the T. A. Lytle Co., Toronto, are placing a carload of this company's pickles this week. The Sterling brand is known to many of the dealers, but a special effort is being made, and this line will now be a feature on grocery shelves.

The Empress Manufacturing Company, of Vancouver, have a good brand of jam, in 20-oz. bottles, which is gaining a reputation for excellence.

The Cromwell, Ormsby Co. are opening this week at 608 Granville Street, in meats, groceries and fruits. Mr. Cromwell is formerly of Portland, Ore., and is well known in British Columbia, owning a ranch near Ashcroft, and being interested in land and timber here. Mr. Ormsby at one time resided in this city, but is latterly of Seattle, where he was with the Frye-Bruhn Co. The company will handle the products of the new Swift packing house at Edmonton, and make a specialty of Government-inspected meats. It has installed its own cold storage plant, and will cater to all classes of trade.

A visitor here this week was Alex D. Fraser, president of the Fraser. Viger Co., Ltd., Montreal. He is making a business trip through the West, making arrangements with local wholesale houses in the interests of the European firms represented by his concern.

W. J. Pendray, of Victoria, has returned from a trip to Europe, on which he was accompanied by his wife. Mr. Pendray is a large manufacturer of paints, soaps, etc., and the principal object of his trip was to secure the latest ideas in his special line of business. As a result, considerable new machinery will be installed. Mr. Pendray, who is assisted by his sons, has lately increased the capacity of his soap plant.

New canning companies are steadily coming to the fore in the interior of the province, now that the fruit industry is developing. The latest talked of is at Nelson, in the Kootenay, and local men have the project in hand. Nothing definite has been decided yet, but it is proposed if anything is done at all, that both fruit and vegetables will be handled.

The Trites-Wood Company, which has a large general store at Fernie, is erecting a store 40x100 feet in New Michel, another town on the Crow's Nest line of railway.

SASKATOON.

November 14.—Now that the Christmas trade is approaching your correspondent interviewed several of the merchants in town to get their views, both as regards the past year's trade and prospects for the future. All were very optimistic.

"Our retail trade," said J. F. Cairns, "has been very heavy this year and the turnover is far in advance of last, although expenses have been very heavy. We find that customers come in by train, and, consequently a large amount of goods are shipped out long distances. The new towns springing up all round do not seem to affect the business as much as was expected. Gauging the fall trade from present conditions, it is going to be very good and will undoubtedly be greater than last year. At the first of the month the cash system was adopted and this may affect the fall business to a slight extent, but we intend to stick by it at all events.

"Regarding the Western Grocers, Ltd., of which I am president, and which was opened for business on the first of October, we are getting all the business we can handle. There are three travelers on the road going out over the three railway systems as far as Humboldt and Lloydminster on the C.N.R., east as far as Lockwood on the C.P.R., and Watrous on the G.T.P. The western lines of the C.P.R. and G.T.P. are covered as far as the steel goes. On the latter line there are piles of business to be had."

D. F. McLay, of the A. McDonald Company's big wholesale grocery establishment, said that prospects were bright for next year. The increase in the business over last year was large, it being about 150 per cent. over what was done last fall. An increase of 50 per cent. is looked for next year owing to the new country being opened up west. New stock is being handled in the new building, although it is not yet quite finished. The manager expects to have all the old stock moved out of the old building next week.

P. H. Currie, said: "Business is in excess of last year, and we find that money is easier. We delayed the fall buying, being a little timid as to the future, but trade conditions since have warranted us placing the bulk of the orders. The crop conditions we find have no direct bearing on the business, as we have done a cash trade for the past two years and each year the business has grown. The fall trade is right on now and prospects for the Xmas trade are bright, judging from present conditions."

Jas. Clinkskill also had an encouraging report. "Business," he said, "is ahead of last year. The fall trade opened up well a week or two ago."

W. H. MacBeth said: "At the present time things are improving as cash is more plentiful. Taking everything into consideration, trade is good and a considerable increase is anticipated in December."

F. M. Waldron, local manager of the Rogers Fruit Co., in reply to an inquiry as to business conditions, said: "We hope to largely increase our trade next year when we get into our new warehouse. We will be better equipped in every way to handle the requirements of the district in the fruit trade. The new warehouse will be ready by about the end of the month."

LEARNS SOMETHING EVERY WEEK.

The following is a paragraph from a bright letter from one of our subscribers sent in when renewing his subscription recently:

"I find The Grocer full of interesting information. There seems to be something to be learned from it every week. Please extend to it my best wishes for many happy returns of its recent birthday."

NEW LOOSE-LEAF COMPANY.

A new loose leaf company has recently started business in Ottawa, the Lowe-Martin Company, 12 Albert Street. The new concern has just completed the instalation of an up-to-date plant for the manufacture of loose-leaf systems, and the conducting of a printing business, and they are now doing all kinds of general printing and book-binding, as well as turning out some very fine loose leaf systems. E. D. Lowe, one of the partners, has been in the printing business for 26 years, while T. H. Martin is a practical bookbinder of 27 years' experience. Both gentlemen were connected with the Rolla L. Crain Co., Ottawa, the former for four and a half years as sales manager, and the latter for five and a half years as superintendent of their factory. Both are popular and their friends will be glad to see them go ahead.

MONTREAL.

November 17.—Encouraging statements have been made by many dealers and wholesalers in this city regarding the prospects of better times. Business has brightened up wonderfully during the week. Especially is this condition reflected in the promptness with which obligations are being met in the West. Some are paying on 15 day drafts. City collections are showing much improvement, obligations being met with much greater promptness. The result of the magnificent crop in the Northwest is being felt here at the present moment. Navigation is about at an end after a season which can only be described as fair. The total of imports and exports shows the financial depression which has been prevalent, but it must be said, taking all conditions into consideration, the season has been fairly good. The latter part especially, showed some remarkable jumps in exports owing to the large amount of grain passing through this port. This impetus which came at the latter end of the season was not sufficient to make the totals large, however.

The Borden Condensed Milk Co., represented by Wm. H. Dunn, St. Paul Street, has contributed many attractive photographs to a series of illustrations running in The Montreal Standard. Each week The Standard publishes in its illustrated supplement a half page of Canadian babies, photographs of which are supplied by the Borden Co.

W. H. Leach who for many years has been with the Stoddard Bedding Co., St. Catherine St., has accepted a position with the Domestic Specialty Co., of Hamilton. He will cover the Province of Quebec. If "Bill" can sell polishes as well as he can sell beds he will have a brilliant future in his new sphere of activity.

Fraser, Viger & Co. are showing a window display of newly arrived figs this week. Amongst the many different packages which may be seen there, those in the glass jars present a most attractive appearance. In addition to these the many sized boxes are arranged in an artistic manner, which demonstrates the fact that even as unattractive things as fig boxes in themselves, when arranged properly together will produce a pleasing effect.

Tuesday evening the Association of Butchers elected the following officers: President, Auguste Prevost; M. N. Paiean, Vice-President; George Fischer, 2nd Vice-President; M. W. Sauve, Secretary; M. A. T. Gariepy, Assistant Secretary; Hermas Poitras, Treasurer; Henri Geoffrion, Correspondent; Louis Montpelit, Henri Beausejour and Maxime Lesage, Auditors. After the election the president-elect addressed the meeting, thanking them cordially for their kindness in re-electing him, and the evidences which they had shown of continued confidence in his administration of the affairs of the association.

Charles Goodwin, of Manchester, England, passed through the city some days ago on his way to Alberta, where he has a son engaged in ranching. Mr. Goodwin, who has reached a ripe old age, has been engaged in the grocery business all his life, and naturally was much interested in the trade in this country. He drew some comparisons between the conditions existing here and in England. He also told of the old days when everything was shipped in bulk and one had to tackle a box of currants with an axe, when it took almost a pile driver to dislodge the contents of a sugar barrel. These, he said, were great disadvantages, but now most of them had disappeared. On the other hand, though, the profits which grocers obtained now were not as large as in the old days. Mr. Goodwin added also that he thought there should be a better organization of the grocers, thereby rendering it possible to look after their interests to greater advantage.

J. H. Semple, long known in the wholesale grocery trade, died on Sunday, Nov. 15, after a brief illness, in his 74th year. Mr. Semple was born in Quebec City but established himself in business in Montreal, retiring about 15 years ago. He was a member of the Catholic School Commission from 1887 to 1892, and again from 1907 until his death. Mr. Semple was well known for his numerous benefactions to various institutions of the Roman Catholic Church.

SHERBROOKE.

November 16.—Trade here, although good, has not been above the average this week. The farmers, and through them, the retailers have felt the scarcity of rain this fall. As a result, butter has already risen to 28c to 30c, our usual mid-winter price, and at that the supply does not fully meet the demand.

Eggs are also scarce, prices ranging from 40c to 45c. This is a higher price than local dealers have ever had to ask, and from the present outlook it will be next to impossible to get them at any price by the New Year.

The supply of vegetables is very good, and the prices are about the same. Potatoes, 60c to 75c bushel; cabbage, doz., 30c to 50c; radishes, parsnips and celery, per bunch, 5c.

The demand for apples is good, one local firm handling as much as two cars per week. The surrounding orchards yielded a very scant crop this year, and our present supply is mostly shipped in from Western Ontario. Prices are: No. 1, $4 bbl.; No. 2, $3.50.

The fact of lemons not coming in for a short time yet causes a scarcity, and, consequently a raise in prices, but they will resume their natural level in a week or so.

Wheat and barley are much the same, but the strong demand for oats has caused the price to advance slightly. Local dealers are handling from 4,000 to 5,000 bushels weekly. Prices quoted are: Car lots, 46½c; retail, 50c per bushel. This supply is derived almost entirely from the West.

The price of beef is as usual. Pork has advanced two cents, owing to the brisk demand.

ST. JOHN.

November 16.—Business continues brisk, but there is little change in prices. In the produce line there is an easier feeling in butter, but the dealers say there is little prospect of lower prices.

After a long and honorable business career in St. John, David O'Keefe died on Sunday, Nov. 8, at his home, 15 Clarence Street. Though in poor health for the last three years, Mr. O'Keefe had been confined to his bed only three weeks. He was in his 69th year and for many years had been engaged as wholesale butcher in the country market.

E. Mitchell, of Barbadoes, a merchant, engaged in the export of molasses, was in St. John last week. The sugar crop, he said, was finished for the year and had fallen short of expectations. Business would be rather flat until the new crop came in about February or March. The island, he added, was free from yellow fever and small pox and the conditions as regards health were very good.

St. Stephen citizens have formed an agricultural society with the view of holding annual exhibitions in that town.

HALIFAX.

November 16.—Record arrivals of produce reached here last week from Prince Edward Island. Fifteen schooners were tied up at the wharves here with their holds filled to the hatches with potatoes, turnips and oats. Their combined cargoes will total about fifty thousand bushels of potatoes, twenty thousand of oats, and ten thousand of turnips.

The commission men are now busy laying in supplies for the winter, and business along the waterfront is brisk. Potatoes are selling from 30c to 32c per bushel ex-vessel. There is also a good supply of Nova Scotia potatoes on the market. They are quoted at 40c to 45c per bushel.

Business, generally speaking, is in good condition throughout the province. Prices are steady, failures few and collections are up to the average.

The export trade is quite brisk and large quantities of potatoes are being sent to Havana, while every boat for Liverpool and London is taking large shipments of apples. The price of eggs is very firm and it is likely to go higher as soon as the real cold weather sets in. Fresh-laid stock sold in the green market this week for 40c per dozen.

William Moore, grocer, Halifax, whose stock was damaged by fire and water last week, has been allowed the full amount of his insurance. All the stock has been removed from the store and sent to auction. He will stock up at once with new goods and resume business at the old stand as soon as the building is repaired.

The annual statement of the Acadia Sugar Refining Company, has just been issued, and the business during the year was most successful. The report shows that in spite of the general depression in trade during the year, the net trading profit has increased $5,049, amounting this year to $158,087.88. Out of this interest has been paid on debentures and loans, amounting to $15,672.93, directors' remunerations, bad debts, etc., amounting to $8,072.38, a 6 per cent. dividend on the preferred stock, $81,760, and further dividends on the common stock of 3 per cent. for the whole year 1907, and an interim dividend of 2 per cent. for the first half-year of 1908. The Acadia Sugar Refining Company has proven that a manufacturing industry properly operated can be carried on here as successfully as at any other point in Canada.

Stewart Raymond, for some years a salesman with H. G. Turnbull, at the South End Grocery, Digby, has decided to open up business for himself. He is now having the foundation put in for a business block at the corner of Warwick and Queen Streets, Digby, His past experience in the grocery line, and his attention in looking after the wants of customers, should insure him a good share of the public patronage.

KINGSTON.

November 17.—The elections are over and Hon. Wm. Harty is returned to represent us for another term. Mr. Harty was in the grocery and liquor business in 1878. He is now owner of the locomotive works, employing over 750 hands. He has been representing the city for 15 years and has yet to meet defeat.

We expected after the elections to settle down to business, but alas, a smallpox scare is on and Drs. Bell and Bell, old ringers in the alarm business, declare that all must be vaccinated. The doctors have their war paint on and tatooing is in force. Business is paralyzed. Boarding houses, hotels, colleges and schools are in quarantine, with guards walking up and down. Well, I hope it will give them ravenous appetites, so the grocers will get their chance. False rumors are the order of the day, much to the injury of several stores. "I am glad to see you in your store looking so well," said a good-looking lady to Jim, the Grocer, "I heard you were sent to the fort, and that your store was quarantined."

Why the siege of Derry isn't in it. Large stocks are being collared by the grocers, who look for big advances in butter and eggs. Enough Gurds' ginger ale came in this week to build a fence around a ten-acre field. Apples are very scarce, and what crowns all, well, they look as if they had been vaccinated ten days.

James Crawford has just placed in his store a Berkel meat-cutting machine, made in Holland. The agent is placing quite a few in Ontario. They are certainly labor-savers.

Sending your representative to the different towns is a good move. I read the result of the visit to Brantford and was delighted. Why, I thought they were all Indians there, making baskets at every corner, under willow trees. Now I see my mistake. Well, come to Kingston and you will see something, and if you are not vaccinated you will likely get a ride in an ambulance, especially if you are freckled.

Plans in plaster paris molds of a proposed mammoth hotel are on exhibition here in one of our vacant stores, also an oil painting of the exterior and interior. They want the best sites in our city, and I hope they get it. It is to cost half a million.

R. J. Carson, wholesale grocer and an ex-mayor, intends putting up a handsome cement block near his warehouses.

Talk of a wholesale house going into a stock company is in the air.

Robertson, Nickle & Co. are starting a branch at Smith's Falls. You can depend on straight lines and good treatment from them. They have one fault. They don't advertise in The Grocer.

If I ran a wholesale business I would have a whole page for life in such a trade paper as The Grocer. I could then speak to 20,000 retailers, and surely I could get a share to pay handsome dividends for such investment, and it's dividends we are all after.

B. W. Robertson and A. Maclean are home safe again and none the worse for court proceedings at the Guild trial in Toronto.

Most of us got stung in buying canned goods ahead this time. Last year we made a hit. Can't expect to win always. The Canada Brokerage Co. did the square thing last year and we don't forget it.

The sale of Demerara and raw sugars is very limited here and perhaps it is just as well, as they are not so clean to handle as the Canadian product.

Jack Marshall, who put in five years' faithful work on Gilbert's grocery wagon, is now in the employ of the T. F. Harrison Co.

Richard James, an Englishman, and one of the best window dressers Kingston has yet seen, has gone from our midst. Good stock keepers and window dressers are scarce.

OTTAWA.

November 17.—An important meeting of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association took place Wednesday evening, November 11. Second Vice-President Duncan Bell, the energetic manager of Bryson, Graham & Co.'s grocery department, was in the chair, in the absence of President York. Two timely questions were given much consideration. One of these, the peddler nuisance, called forth some strong remarks from different grocers present. It appears that the hawkers, who are so numerous on the streets of Ottawa, are not compelled to take out a license, and they interfere with legitimate grocers in their trade. This question deserves all the publicity it can get. It is not at all fair that the grocer should pay rent, taxes, business and water; license for his delivery wagons, and numerous other expenses incidental to the transaction of his business, and have to compete against the peddler on the street, who pays not a cent to the city for anything, and very frequently lives outside of the city limits.

Another phase of the same question, but one which opens also another grievance, is that these peddlers can buy on the local markets at any hour they wish while the grocers are compelled, by the city by-laws, to refrain from purchasing until half-past eight. Anyone will see the unfairness of this proposition.

The question of restricting grocers in market buying was discussed at some length. Alderman Farmer, a member of the city council, and a very prominent retail grocer, quite agreed that the city should repeal this by-law, or at least amend it in such a way as to give the grocers a fair show. F. W. Forde also spoke freely upon the subject, while Messrs. Johnson, Cochrane, Prevost and Bell also expressed their views.

A committee was appointed to look into these two questions and to consult legal advisers, if necessary.

The unsanitary condition of the local market was criticized.

Art. Johnson, secretary of the association, was voted $125 for his services in connection with the recent Pure Food Show held during the week of the Central Canada Exhibition by the grocers of Ottawa. Art acted as secretary and undoubtedly deserves all the praise and credit his fellow-grocers can bestow upon him for his untiring efforts in making the show a success, as all admit it was. Fred Forde, (Saint?), was presented with $75, and J. G. Prevost was made the recipient of $50 for similar services. These grocers also worked, officially, like Trojans, in the interests of the association on this occasion, and even such rewards are small recompense for the loss of time to their private affairs.

President York, of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association, was in Boston recently, called thither by the serious illness of his daughter.

Walter Walby, proprietor of the Cecil Hotel, has secured a fine set of sample rooms, and is now getting a fine share of the travelers' trade.

GALT.

November 17.—The Christmas trade is already making itself felt in the grocery business in Galt. The stores are taking on a holiday appearance. The new nuts are in and before the end of the month the oranges are expected. Already a number of Galt housewives have manufactured their mincemeat, at least they have purchased the material. The condition of affairs in Galt is exceptionally satisfactory at present. The Bell Telephone Co. have decided to place a certain part of their wires underground. Every man applying has been given employment, and as a result there are no unemployed in Galt to-day, a most enviable position. As the work will last until after Christmas the prospects are for one of the best seasons ever in all lines. During the last fortnight the grocers have been exceptionally busy and trade has been in excess of that during the same period last year. In fact, business in all lines has picked up wonderfully during the month of September and the first two weeks in November and appearances point to a continuance of brisk business through the holiday season.

The S. H. Knox Co. will open their Galt branch on Saturday next. They will not interfere with the grocers except in the candy line, and as the grocers handle this line merely as a matter of courtesy to customers the difference will not be noticeable. Other stores in Galt handling novelties and such like will not fare so well.

The market on Saturday was a big one. Eggs brought 30c per dozen and butter 28c per pound. Potatoes were 70c per bag.

Contrary to the wishes of the Retail Merchants' Association the town council has decided to reduce the license of vegetable and fruit hawkers from $50 per year to 10 cents per day.

Hugh Walker, of the Red Front, has been elected honorary president of the Galt hockey club. Mr. Walker has always taken a keen interest in the game and has helped previous teams on to victory. Wm. Jamieson, confectioner, was appointed a member of the executive committee.

Galt grocers, at least two of them, promise the public something unique in Christmas windows.

"Yes, we will have our usual supply of calendars this year," said a local grocer to your correspondent. "But it is just questionable whether we gain anything on the transaction. Of course our regular customers are pleased to receive the slight remembrance, but on the other hand there are those who are not regular customers, and who feel that a five cent purchase should entitle them to a calendar, which costs us more than five cents. I am afraid that we make enemies through our Christmas calendars, but perhaps they are offset by the good will of others. At any rate we will be on deck with something artistic in this line."

Do Galt grocers pay sufficient attention to local advertising, is a question which might be the basis of an interesting debate. Not more than one-third of the grocers advertise, and these use small spaces with a change about twice weekly. One dry goods man in a day uses as much space as the combined grocers would in a week, and yet it seems that the grocer has just as much to offer as his neighbor.

It may not be generally known, but it is a fact that more business is transacted in Galt by telephone than in any other way. Enquiry among the grocers revealed the fact that fully three-quarters of the orders received were taken over the 'phone, and this is borne out by the statement that for its size Galt has more telephones than any other town in Canada. With a population of 9,000 it has 650 'phones, exclusive of the private exchanges in the large industries. The telephone company also state that Galt is the best supplied telephone town in Ontario.

LONDON.

November 17.—Brokers report trade fair though wholesalers continue to buy sparingly. Payments are also fair. Fine teas keep high and mediums are ¼d to ½d. up. Fruits for Christmas are moving freely. Cereals are unchanged.

Local retailers find business rather quiet. They are, however, expecting a boom at any time and are prepared for it with good stocks of new Christmas goods of all kinds.

An incident in which a well known wholesale grocer figured largely and which formed the chief topic of discussion in the streets for two or three days occurred on Carling Street on Thursday morning last. From time immemorable the south side of that street has been used as a sort of back yard or shipping place for merchants on the north side of Dundas street, west of Richmond. Many of these merchants' back doors come plumb up to the Carling Street sidewalk, making it an easy matter to load and unload lorries and other vehicles. Recently the property owners went to the expense of having a permanent pavement laid on the street on the local improvement plan, and those whose premises front on the north side came to the conclusion that the street could never become a respectable one so long as their neighbors opposite used it as had been their custom. There is a by-law prohibiting driving across sidewalks which everyone of the southsiders was daily violating. The city council has been appealed to on the one hand to have the by-law enforced, on the other to have it repealed. Meanwhile the police had been urged by the aggrieved ones to enforce the by-law, and the teamsters were warned that if they drove on the sidewalk to unload they would be arrested. The effect of this warning was seen on Thursday morning when a railway team was driven up to the curb outside of the wholesale grocery of John Garvey and was there halted. Mr. Garvey asked the teamster why he did not drive up to the door to unload, and the man answered that he was afraid of the police. Mr. Garvey mounted the load and in spite of the warnings of a policeman who was on the scene, proceeded to drive over the sidewalk. No sooner had the wheels touched the sidewalk than the policeman sprang onto the wagon and laid hold of Mr. Garvey, subsequently taking him to the police station near by. The police magistrate ordered the release of the merchant, refusing to issue a warrant until the council had dealt with the application for the rescinding of the by-law. Mr. Garvey thereupon returned to the scene of hostilities and amidst the cheers of a big crowd which had assembled finished his drive. Since then John Garvey has been receiving his goods and sending out orders in the same old way.

A contest at bowling took place on Thursday night between the boss grocers and the clerks, in which the latter scored a victory, the following being the scores:

President Shaw and Treasurer Ryan of the Retail Grocers' Association waited on the manager of the London Street Railway a day or two ago and received a handsome cheque in settlement of amounts in connection with the association's Springbank outing.

E. J. Reid, formerly traveler for Gorman, Eckert & Co. has purchased the Nichols grocery business, corner of Colborne and Horton Streets.

Geo. Aust, bookkeeper for M. Masuret & Co., was married yesterday in Boston to Miss Pape, of Toronto, the ceremony taking place at the residence of the bride's sister at the Hub.

CHATHAM.

November 17.—With the commencement of the cold weather, grocery stores and windows are already beginning to take on a Christmassy look. Raisins, currants, peels, nuts and similar seasonable supplies are being displayed.

The local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association held a well-attended meeting last Tuesday evening. Methods for making the association more attractive and beneficial to members were discussed, W. E. Parrott and T. W. Poile being delegated a committee to arrange a suitable programme for the next meeting. The members of the association intend keeping the credit list fully up-to-date, in order to be on their guard against delinquents, and arrangements were made for a further revision of this very useful list.

In connection with the new amendments which prohibit grocers from handling, among other drugs, saltpetre, quite a number of grocers are propounding the enquiry, "What are we to do with the saltpetre we had in stock prior to becoming acquainted with the act?" Though there is no very large demand for the article in question, it has been customery for most grocers in the city to keep it in stock, sales being made almost entirely to farmers for the purpose of curing pork. It seems rather a hardship, after buying the article, to be unable to sell it, even to the drug stores. Not a few grocers resentfully point out that, while their own wings have been clipped in favor of the druggists, the latter handle toilet soaps, baking powder, pepper, mustard, brushes—in fact, dozens of articles which were originally the perquisites of the grocery business, and many of which cannot be classified as drugs. There is not a drug store in town which does not carry on a big cigar trade. The claim is further made that, while grocers are prohibited from selling saltpetre on the ground that it is a poison, the druggists do not register their sales of saltpetre, though the law requires poison sales to be registered. Rural merchants suffer more by the act that do those in town, since many of them carried relatively large stocks of prohibited articles. Incidentally, the druggists themselves do not seem to be a unit in favor of the restrictions, many of them having done quite a jobbing business with country merchants.

The Bradley store recently started to handle oysters, featuring a high quality oyster (practically solid, little or no water) at 50c a quart. The innovation was largely advertised and a good initial sale is reported. Hitherto, very few grocers have handled oysters, the trade being left largely to the confectioners, the objection being that, with the winter broken, as it is here, by frequent spells of warm weather, oysters could not be disposed of quickly enough. Extensive advertising, in which Bradley's are firm believers, will tend to overcome any difficulty of this nature by stimulating quick sales.

A handsome, yet simple window display was put in by H. Malcolmson this week. The window, the bottom of which slopes a little, was just paved with salmon cans. The solid mass of red-labeled cans made a striking effect.

The indications are that a second creamery for the Maple City will materialize shortly. W. A. McGeachy, of N. A. McGeachy & Sons, City Dairy, was in Toronto last week inspecting the most modern butter-making machinery. Since the Maple City Creamery inaugurated a bottled milk department some time ago, competition between the two firms along that line has been keen; with the result that McGeachy's have apparently decided to "carry the war into Africa." The new enterprise will, however, in all probability, not be instituted for some months.

J. H. Allan, of the Wheatley creamery, will establish a branch creamery at Comber in the spring. The new enterprise will be in charge of D. D. Allan, of Princeton, who has just returned to Wheatley.

E. A. and Mrs. Mounteer were in Hamilton last week, attending the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Webber.

John Hales, the Fifth Street butcher, has taken his son, Robert, into partnership. Bob has just returned from an extended trip to British Columbia.

At the sessions of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association at Toronto last week, W. A. Chrysler, of Bloomfield, one of the leading apiarists of this vicinity, was elected a director of the association.

One of Chatham's pioneer grocers passed away on Monday, Nov. 9, in the person of John Northwood. Mr. Northwood was born at Chatham, Oct. 26, 1837. At the age of 14 he entered the employ of his uncles, J. & W. Northwood, as a grocery clerk. Three years later, when just 17—probably the youngest merchant in Chatham's history—he started a grocery business of his own, which he carried on successfully for 17 years. He was later interested in milling in Ontario and Manitoba, and latterly has lived retired. H. S. Northwood, of the grocery firm of Northwood & Bartlett, and E. B. Northwood, formerly of the Northwood Produce Co., are sons.

A project that should not be lost sight of by grocers here is that of a central delivery system. The scheme was much talked of last summer. Though it would be practically impossible to induce every grocer to take part in the enterprice, this is no reason why those favorably disposed should not make a start. From all accounts a central delivery system stands for economy, and more efficient deliveries as well.

The Harrow creamery closed last week after a successful season. It will be run on a larger scale next year under the same management.

Leslie Annett, clerk in Fraser & Billings' grocery, Windsor, was recently united in marriage to Miss Lena Authier, of Tilbury.

INGERSOLL.

November 17.—An impetus has been given trade by the somewhat wintry weather of the past few days. There is always an appreciable increase in the volume of business when the country people begin to market their products. During the latter part of autumn and the early part of winter there is a slight falling off in trade as the season is known to the trade as "between times." But there is a great change when the white mantle begins to cover the earth and the country people take their enforced vacation, as it were. Chores are the principal occupation on the farm during the winter. There is plenty of time to fatten up the poultry and take them to the market. This is what is happening at the present time, although all the fall work is by no means completed on the farm and not a few are still hopeful of at least a few days of that glorious period known as "Indian Summer." During the past week there has been an increase in the poultry marketed and other products have also shown an increase. This means a bigger market and when the farmers are taking in the money and making more frequent trips to town they necessarily spend more money. Poultry prices have been high practically since last summer because of the fact that the supply has been limited. Reports at the present time from the different sections, however, state that poultry of all kinds is plentiful and the prediction has been made by some dealers that it will be cheaper for the coming season than at any period in a number of years. In view of the high prices of butter and eggs, in fact all table requisites, this will be good news to the consumer.

Already signs are visible in the grocery stores of the near approach of the gladsome Christmas season. Stocks have been augmented and windows have taken on a brighter and more attractive appearance. With Christmas only a trifle over a month distant there will doubtless soon be a pronounced growth in trade daily. To all appearance times are better than a year ago and from the preparation that the grocers have made they anticipate as much if not more trade for the festal season than in previous years.

BRANTFORD.

November 17.—The local grocery stores report business fair, and, judging from the many excellent displays of the new fruits, raisins, currants, figs and dates, they evidently believe that the wise housekeepers always do their Christmas baking and make their mince meat early.

Dairy butter is very firm and dealers look for an advance in price. It is at present selling at 28c to 30c. There are very few eggs coming in, and in spite of the very large market last Saturday they advanced as high as 32c. Chickens sold at 75c to $1.25 per pair, ducks $1.20 to $1.50, turkeys 18c to 20c. Potatoes were plentiful at 75c per bag.

Ald. Suddaby, the West Brantford grocer, is a probable candidate for Mayor at the coming municipal elections. His chances of election are good, as for years he has done valuable service for the city in all departments of the civic government.

A. Coulbeck is having a cement floor put in his cellar.

The new store at the corner of Terrace Hill and High Street has been opened by S. G. Phillips.

BARRIE.

November 17.—New laid eggs are a premium here just now and as high as 30 cents a dozen was paid for them at this week's market. Butter still remains about the same price, selling at 25c to 27c. Turkeys that sold last week at 10c a pound sold at 12½c to 13c; geese at 10c, ducks 10c, chickens 8c to 10c. Potatoes were firmer and sold at 55c to 65c. A few loads of apples sold readily at $1.50 to $2 a barrel.

The first California navel oranges are in town this week and open up a nice color, but the flavor is about the same as a Jamaica or Florida, being far from that sweet navel of three months hence. Malaga grapes, like many other fruits this year, are rotting very quickly, and there seems to be a shortage of those fine heavy weights. The prices being paid for them, too, are from fifty cents to a dollar and a half more than last year.

Steve Vair has left this week for Edmonton, where he will play hockey with the Edmonton crack team.

Thos. Ross, of Midland; Wm. Buchannan, of Toronto; Fred. Grazley, of Toronto, and Jack Craig, of Toronto, were among the old grocery boys to spend Thanksgiving holidays here.

Our future Council of 1909 will have, if all succeed in landing a place, a good supply of grocery men. James Vair is announcing himself for Mayor, and so far has only one opponent, and it's one safe bet he will be elected, and your correspondent wishes him every luck as he deserves the position. S. McMorrow, a bright Sixth Ward merchant, is out as an alderman for that ward. Gren Colwell is talking Ward Five, and we think that Gren will land that position without any trouble. W. D. Bothwell is again asking to be elected in Ward Three.

Budd & Co., of the Sixth Ward, are offering a Limerick for this month which seems to be attracting a large number of people to their store. They are offering prizes in crockery to the amount of $30 for first down to $5 for the fifth or last competitor.

A bowling league is being formed in the town this week, composed of the merchants, to be known as the Merchants' League, composed of the grocers, dry goods men, hardware men, butchers and bankers, and a schedule is being drawn up. Keep your eye on the grocery men.

ST. THOMAS.

November 17.—The markets were not so well attended Saturday by either buyers or sellers and prices remained about the same as a week ago. Butter, however, was more in evidence and the price in consequence was somewhat lower, 25c by the basket and 28c by the print. Fresh eggs were very scarce, 28 to 30c being freely paid and all disposed of. Apples, owing to not keeping very well this winter, brought a higher price and first-class quality sold at 30c per peck. Poultry was in large supply, chickens 10 to 12½c, ducks 50 to 60c each.

Type-written copies of Inspector Shaw's report to the city council were forwarded to Attorney-General Foy and E. M. Trowern, Toronto, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, last week, showing that the act of the Provincial Legislature re transient traders' and peddlers' by-laws framed by the city council on the authority of the provincial statutes seem to be a joke, and that the merchants suffer unjust competition on account of the non enforcement of the laws passed by the Legislature for their protection. It is time something was done to remedy this condition.

The grocers are busy getting ready for their Christmas trade and it is about this time that a great many housekeepers buy the ingredients of their Christmas cake, and the demand for peels, raisins, currants, etc., begins. Foreign dried fruits are reasonable in price this season, and there is no doubt that three pounds for a quarter will be the ruling price for raisins and currants to be retailed.

All the railroads report business very good and this means big earnings for the train employees and hence better times for the grocers.

It is a common occurrence for a customer who is paying her month's bill to leave a balance unpaid and take the grocer's money and pay their taxes with his money, whilst the grocer has to delay paying his taxes because he is afraid to offend the customer by insisting on full payment, as he should.

STRATFORD.

November 17.—Winter seems to have set in in earnest these last few days, and with the arrival of new fruits everything has taken on a Christmas appearance.

The Grand Trunk pay car arrived in Stratford on Friday, 13th, the advent of which gives many a merchant the smile that won't come off. The pay this month was quite a large one, and most of the grocers report getting their share of it. The grocers here are making strict rules that customers shall pay their accounts in full, which is a very commendable feature, as once a balance is left standing it is sometimes many months before it is paid.

The Saturday morning market presented the usual supply of produce. Fowl, despite the fact that there was a very heavy offering one week ago, was plentiful, and, in most cases, held up in price. Potatoes were abundant and showed a downward tendency. Apples were fairly plentiful, with an upward look. Live hogs have moved during the week and are now quoted at an advance of 35c to 50c.

Saturday's business was a record-breaker, with most grocers here. The people had the buying spirit, and not only did staple groceries move out freely, but such luxuries as Almeria grapes, table raisins, layer figs, dates, cream cheese, sold with very little difficulty.

A few Stratford grocers of late have discovered a scheme for selling layer figs, which, in most cases, doubles their sales. Four or five boxes are opened at a time and divided into rows, then the surface of the figs is brightened by washing with a mixture of molasses and water; each row is then cut up in 5c, 10c and 15c blocks, and placed on the counter in front of the customers, which makes a very attractive pile. One grocer sold 5 boxes in one day by this method, whereas in the old way of leaving them in the boxes and tearing them out as needed, one or two boxes would have been the extent of his sales. When figs are cut up in blocks this way the people very rarely take a fig off to eat.

A. Beattie & Co. are showing some exceptionally fine cauliflowers this week, rather late in the season. They also have a seasonable window display of grape fruit, cranberries, new pineapples, oranges, shelled nuts, etc.

On Saturday McCully & Haugh's display of turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens was immense. Although groceries, produce and fresh fruits are their staple articles of sale, yet this firm always manage to sell an enormous quantity of fowl.

The Barnsdale Trading Co. have quite a novel window display of Comfort soap. Around the outside they have the soap nicely displayed and near the centre they have placed an express wagon, also a large pumpkin. Above all hangs a neatly printed show card explaining to passers-by that every 25c purchase of Comfort soap entitles the customer to one guess as to the number of seeds in the pumpkin. The person coming the nearest gets the wagon. This firm makes very fine window displays and knows the value of neat show cards.

Jas. Lloyd, wholesale fruit merchant, received his first car of California navel oranges on Saturday, which he claims is the first car unloaded in Canada this year. The fruit this year is very smooth and bright.

The Armour Company have been demonstrating their beef extract, pork and beans, canned soups, etc., in Duncan Ferguson & Co.'s dry goods store all week. They have taken numerous orders for their goods, and pass these orders on to the grocers, believing it not only increases the grocers' profits, but is good advertising for themselves.

The Connecticut Oyster Company's traveler was in town one day this week working up business for a new carrier they have installed to do away with the old method of handling oysters.

The Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co. report Christmas business very much in advance of last year, and with their enlarged up-to-date plant have been prepared for the rush, which has been in evidence with them for some time.

TORONTO.

November 18.—The Retail Grocers' Association seems at last to be coming to its own in the matter of taking up questions of practical trade interest and the regular monthly meeting in their rooms in the Temple Building on Monday night was from this reason one of the best they have held in months. The Association also is gradually gathering in new members. Three or four new faces were in evidence at the meeting, and a number of names were submitted and passed for introduction at the next meeting. One of the matters which came up for discussion was that of the peddling nuisance. "Why," said J. S. Bond, "this is one of the worst things we have to fight in the business to-day." "It isn't only the peddlers," said Dave Bell, "but, in my section the farmers who sell butter from door to door annoy me more." Other members had various other complaints of a similar nature and ultimately a committee was appointed, consisting of J. S. Bond, D. Bell and President Fred. Thorne to interview the officers of the Retail Merchants' Association, who, it is understood, are preparing to take steps to have the Provincial by-law changed at the next session of the Legislature. A suggestion was made by one of the members which may be carried out after some study, to the effect that several of the members might get together and bring in cars of potatoes and bananas direct. This will be further considered. Complaints were also made of selling going on by wholesale dealers in several lines direct to the consumer. Some of the bakers, for instance, are said to be selling bread to consumers at 8 cents. The meeting closed with a general discussion on the Guild case.

The Dominion Co-operative Association, which secured its charter about five weeks ago is about ready to do business, and on December 1st will open up a large grocery store on Bloor Street West, the premises having already been secured. A general grocery stock of about $5,000 will be placed on the shelves. Another store of the same line will be opened in the East End of the city before the close of the year. Alex. MacKenzie, who is a trained grocer of British and Canadian experience, will have charge of the Bloor Street establishment. It is proposed to open up stores throughout all parts of the city and suburbs. In time, other lines of trade and commodities will be handled by the co-operative company establishments. Arrangements have been made with Trans-Atlantic steamers for regular shipments of British fish of all kinds. Negotiations with the Steam Trawling Fleet of Scotland have been concluded, and the finest British fish will be a feature of the company's stores. The Association has now 100 men organizers and a ladies' guild of about the same number who meet every week. Gatherings are each week held in different parts of the city, sometimes in church halls, at which addresses are delivered on the work and objects of the Association, together with its scope, plans for the future, etc. It is not intended to cease until 100,000 persons, men, women and children, have become members of the Association. In honor of the opening of the new stores and the rapid work that has gone on since organiza-

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Nov. 18, 1908.

Owing to the lateness of the season the arrivals of cheese are not showing as good quality as might be desired. Some five weeks ago an estimate of the amount of cheese in Canada placed it at 100,000 boxes, which, it was generally agreed, was about right. Now that navigation is about at a close some new estimates will have to be made. For some time the demand from Britain fell off, but lately has shown signs of greater interest in the market on this side. The attitude of the English buyers seems to indicate the fact that they do not know exactly where they are at, as the policies pursued by various houses are so utterly at variance with one another. This, it seems, may have been the cause of the recent dullness in the market. Of late, however, the indications are evidently of a more steady feeling with some strengthening tendency in prices.

Receipts of cheese for the week ending Nov. 14, were 41,139 boxes, as against 49,675 boxes for the previous week, and 44,685 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. Total receipts since May 1, 1,855,552 boxes, as against 2,017,262 boxes for the corresponding period of last year, Locally, Westerns are quoted at 12¼c to 12½c, and Easterns at 11⅞c to 12c.

Locally the butter market is firm for creamery lines, whilst dairy lines are somewhat easier. From th s it appears that the output of the factories is not as large as it has been, but on the other hand, the dairy end of the industry is in a good healthy condition for this time of the year. Some authorities seem to think that stocks held are not as large as was generally assumed. It is said that a large amount of the butter held at the present moment is for the account of western houses. Grocers have bought more freely and even families have laid in good supplies owing to the experience of last year. Reports from England state that :

"Efforts are being made to get the retailers together on the selling price of butter. The foolish idea that the counter price of butter must be 1s per pound cannot be shaken off easily and the public have got to look for it so that sellers are afraid to raise their limits. But they are beginning to see the folly of the game and an organization is at work on an endeavor to get all the distributors to raise the lowest figure to 1s 1d per pound. This may come into force next week. If it does there should be a livening up of wholesale business, which is sadly lacking at présent. The trade seems absolutely afraid to stock up, and in face of diminishing supplies sellers find it difficult to clear. The weather is again mild and against the sale of all foodstuffs, and this has made the market close very dull. But Canadian comes out well from the unsettled state of affairs, and the price may be said to be 2s per cwt. better. Canadian is coming along in very small quantities and Argentine is getting the bulk of the demand for price."

Reports from New York state a high market ruling there.

Receipts of butter for the week were 6,670 packages, against 6,057 packages for the corresponding week of last year. Total receipts since May 1 are 384,099 packages, against 378,898 packages for the same period of last year. Locally prices range around 27c to 27½c for finest creamery, and 28c in a jobbing way.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, November 18, 1908.

Conditions are a little stronger in the Canadian packing business this week as a result of better local business. Local demand has been exceedingly good this fall, and business has been noticeably larger in volume than in previous years. It has been so good indeed that notwithstanding the fact that for the past month or so the factories have been running fairly well up to capacity packers' stocks have gotten down pretty low. The run of hogs for the past several weeks has been fair, though not so large as usual and the advance seems to have been made to stimulate this and thereby provide for filling up the packers' stocks.

The British market continues steady with no new features in evidence. The Danes continue to ship in largely and supplies of Irish bacon are also going in quite as heavily as usual, so that the market, under dull conditions, so far as demand is concerned, is very well supplied, and there is little demand for Canadian packers' product. Packers are offering 6.10 to 6.25 f.o.b. this week, an advance on $5.75, last week's offerings. This should be effectual in bringing in the desired supplies, as from the larger runs recently there appear to be quite a number of hogs in the country at the present time.

Conditions in the United States markets are given as follows by the New York Journal of Commerce:

"In spite of the lower prices now prevailing and a steady decline that has marked hog values during the week, farmers are rushing their hogs to market in greater quantities than ever, and Saturday's receipts again exceeded the estimate. Even the improved quality which is now evident from the corn feeding that has been going on for some time has failed to stem the decline. The lack of demand in the East for pork products has given the speculative element a difficult task whenever they have attempted to force prices upward, and manipulation of the entire list by the packers has, it is said, caused the trading element to sustain some heavy losses. For this reason there has been more of a disposition on the part of the purely speculative public to withdraw from the market until there should be a readjustment of values upon a more substantial basis."

EGGS—The egg market is higher and local consumption is large consequently. stocks are being heavily drawn upon. New laid eggs are scarce and in good demand. The trade report that the demand for eggs is very heavy, the demand for this time of the year being unprecedented. Several cars of selected eggs arrived this week that were purchased some time ago at 22c to 22½c f.o.b., while others are due to arrive that cost 23c f.o.b. Western houses are now asking 23½c f.o.b. shipping point, advices from the West state that shippers are not very anxious sellers, as they state there is very little left up there for shipping purposes; as the demand from the far West and the coast has been very good, and cleared up almost all the offerings. There has been very few lots of Canadian eggs gone forward to the English market this season, the total exports this season to date only amounting to 6,710 cases.

THE NEWEST SKIN GAME.

"I have always acted on my own judgment after sizing a man up," said the drummer as he leaned back with a weary look on his face. "For 30 years I have believed that I could tell a rascal or an honest man almost on sight, but something happened the other day to make me doubt myself. I was loafing around the Union Depot, waiting for my train to go, when a man approached me and made conversation. We were talking away when a second man came sneaking up and told a hard luck story, and asked to be helped out of a hole. After one look at him I was satisfied that he was a skin, and turned my back on him. Not so with the other man, however. He seemed interested and impressed, and finally gave the fellow a $5 bill to go and get changed, promising him a quarter when he returned.

"'Of course, that's the last of your money,' I said with a laugh as the hard luck man disappeared.

"'No; I think he will come back,' was the reply. 'He looked to me like an honest man.'

"'And to me like a deadbeat. Consider yourself $5 out of pocket.'

"'I can hardly do that. Something tells me that I am not mistaken in that man.'

"'Perhaps you'd like to bet another five that he will show up again?'

"To my surprise he said he did, and we found a stakeholder and put up the long green."

"And what happened?" was asked as the drummer paused.

"Why—why, the hard luck man came back with the change."

"He did!"

"As straight as a string, and was given the promised quarter; I lost my five, of course."

"And—and"——

"And a little later on the depot policeman told me that they were pals working together, and that they skinned half a dozen suckers at the game every day in the year."

"But you—you are a drummer."

"Just so; but it's my business to sell groceries and not look for gum games. When you want a soft mark look for a drummer."—Kansas City Star.

LAY BLAME ON BRITISH MERCHANTS.

Japanese Press Place Responsibility for Boycott of Their Goods in China on Firms of English Sugar Dealers.

The New York Herald, in a recent despatch from Tokio, regarding the Chinese boycott of Japanese goods, says: Smarting under the most recent boycott outbreak and the fact that every returning Japanese steamship brings back a large cargo of Japanese goods consigned to Hong Kong on consular representations that the boycott is "dead," Tokio newspapers are filled with efforts to place responsibility for the movement.

The Niroku Shimbun charges that two of the biggest British firms, Jardine, Mattheson & Co. and Butterfield & Swire, have financed the boycott movement, alleging that the animosity of these British mercantile houses dates back to 1905, when Japanese sugar began successfully competing with the British product in China's market. The Asahi Shimbun blames Professor Murai for a recent lecture at the Meiji lay school here. Professor Murai depicted the Chinese as the lowest of human beings, comparing them unfavorably with the American Indians. The lecture caused the deepest resentment. Thirty Chinese students who were present sent a transcript to the Hong Kong and Canton vernacular press. The Asahi Shimbun declares the publication of this speech is a direct provocative of rioting."

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Prices This Week Steady All Round, W ith Good Local Business—An Advance in Rolled Oats Contemplated in Ontario.

The flour and cereal markets show no immediate changes this week, though the outlook gives prospects of some new developments.

The flour markets generally remain unchanged in spite of buoyant wheat markets and the outlook is for steady prices for some time. Millers all over the country are busy under good local demand, and with the approach of cold weather this will undoubtedly become notably brisker. Export demand continues fairly active, but the millers are rather too busy with local demands to bother with inquiries.

Business in cereals seems to be a little steadier. In Quebec the markets are easier, but in Ontario there is talk of an advance at the end of the week. The cold weather will probably stimulate business in these lines also, when it really arrives.

FLOUR—There has been no material change in the situation during the week. Prices are unchanged and the outlook generally is for steadiness. Local business is slightly easier, though millers are still very busy and are not paying much attention to export demand. The coming of cold weather will largely stimulate demand.

A new company of the above name has just completed the purchase of the assets, goodwill and trade marks of the Robert Greig Co., Toronto. The business will be carried on in the same premises and similar lines will be manufactured, though factory conditions will be improved and the business extended along several lines. The president and managing director of the new company, J. B. Hallworth, has for some months occupied a similar position with the old company, and his knowledge of the business and its connections will insure continued growth. The formation of the new company and the purchase of the business, has, it is understood, been under contemplation for some time, though the matter was only finally closed on Saturday, November 14.

STIRRING UP MONTREAL'S COUNCIL.

S. J. Carter, of S. J. Carter & Co., wholesale grocers, McGill Street, Montreal, who is a prominent member of the city council, created a sensation in the city council meeting on Monday by producing indisputable evidence to prove gross misappropriation of the city's funds, more especially by the police committee, of which Mr. Carter was a member. Mr. Carter's statements made before the city council will probably result in a thorough investigation into the manner in which the city's affairs are conducted. In this denouement Ald. Robinson was associated with Mr. Carter.

NEW WAREHOUSE IN FORT WILLIAM.

The John King Co. Doing Large Wholesale Business in the West.

A new wholesale warehouse, which when completed will be one of the finest between Toronto and Winnipeg, is in course of construction at Fort William by the John King Co., wholesale grocers and liquor dealers. The business was established by John King as a general retail business in 1884, and was continued as such till 1900 when it was converted into a joint stock company and the wholesale grocery and liquor business was established. This was continued till July 20 of this year, when it was totally destroyed by fire. The business has kept pace pretty well with the growth of Fort William and the annual turnover for the past three or four years has been well up to the quarter million mark.

When the firm was burned out they decided to go into the wholesale business exclusively as it was found that a wholesale and retail business did not work well together. Recognizing the future of Fort William as a distributing centre the warehouse was undertaken. The new building is a large three storey and basement warehouse, with trackage from the C.P.R., and will give capacity for more than two hundred cars of goods. Next year the firm's business will be extended into Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

E. F. Reed, formerly traveler for Gorman, Eckardt & Co., of London, in Northern Ontario, has severed his connection with that firm and started in the grocery business in London, at 400 Horton Street. Mr. Reed was formerly a clerk for J. Dobbin & Son, London, and should know the business well. He has been a very successful traveler, has an attractive personality, and should make a decided success in the grocery business.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Business Fair During an Off-season Week—Green Fruits Slightly Easier—Good Supplies of Vegetables—Oysters Selling Well.

The trade during the past week has been a fair one considering that it is a sort of between seasons—the Thanksgiving mile post just passed and the Christmas one hovering in sight. The green fruit market is rather quiet. The potato market is a little firmer and the tendency of apples is to soar in price, as the crop of late varieties was not a heavy one and there is a big demand for them in England, New York and elsewhere. Now that the cold weather has set in the last of the fresh fish has gone, but the same kind frozen may be had. The demand is heavy. Oysters are selling well.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—The green fruit market, taken altogether is a little easier than last week. New stock California oranges are being offered at $3.50 for the 96, 126 and 150 size, and $3.75 for the 176, 200, 216 and 250 size. Jamaica oranges are higher, being quoted at $4.75 this week. Grape fruit is cheaper, also lemons and pineapples. Other lines are unchanged.

VEGETABLES—Water cress is quoted this week at 70c instead of 60c. Carrots are slightly easier now, being sold at 55c a bag. Egg fruit is practically off the market. Potatoes still range between 60c to 90c per bag. Other lines remain as quoted at the last report.

GREEN FRUITS—California navel oranges are here in good numbers and have to be put in the ripening room. They are as good as they usually are, considering that they come from the very early orchard. Orangés are arriving in large quantities. Several cars of Floridas came to hand this week. They are quoted at $3.25 per box. The quality is much improved and they make fine eating. The Mexican oranges are sweet, and selling fifty cents cheaper than the Florida offerings. California navels are quoted from $3.75 to $4. Almeria grapes will soon grow scarce and wholesalers are advising dealers to lay in a stock. The trade in green fruits has not been large during the past few days. The banana market is slow. It is expected that the demand for oranges and lemons, the new crop of the latter being exceptionally fine, will be much brisker in a few days. In other fruits and vegetables there is a fair demand. The quotations for apples are likely to advance. The market is firm and inquiries many.

VEGETABLES—The supply of vegetables is good and there is no shortage in any line. Potatoes are a little firmer. This is owing to the cars having to be lined and supplies not being rushed in so freely during the past few days. For New Brunswick Delawares conditions are easier. There is an abundance of carrots, turnips and cabbage. No great demand exists for Spanish onions as the Canada variety is very plentiful and of good quality. Pumpkins are exceptionally plentiful. The demand for all kinds of vegetables is, so far as the wholesale dealers are concerned, pretty quiet, the farmers rushing in all their stuff now before the weather gets too cold. The sequence is that the average grocer is well supplied with carrots, beets, onions, cabbage, etc. The tomato, egg plant and season for early fall fruit is now over.

FISH—The cold weather has created a big demand for fish and the last of the fresh trout and whitefish disappear this week. Henceforth they will be frozen. The favorite sellers are white fish, trout, halibut, sea herring and qualla. Oysters in bulk are in big demand. The sale of those in the shell is limited. TRADE NOTES.

An interesting little booklet, "Under Sunny Southern Skies," has just been issued by Pickford & Black, the Halifax steamship agents. The booklet is descriptive of the trip to Bermuda and the West Indies, and is pleasingly illustrated with a view to showing the beauties and tropical growth of the islands. One of the useful points in the booklet is a map showing the steamship lines to the various islands.

The value of condensed and evaporated milk preparations as food products is becoming more evident every day. The latest evidence of this comes from Los Angeles, Cal., in connection with a pure food show recently held in that city. Among the attractions at this exhibition was a baby show, in which 123 chubby hopefuls were exhibited. The award was carried off by a three-year-old, who was raised on St. Charles cream. The successful babe was placed on exhibition at the St. Charles booth after the awards were announced.

THE GROCERY TRADE OF PARIS

The Canadian Grocer's Representative Pays a Visit to This Bright Western Ontario Town and Writes of Existing Conditions.

A forty-minute run on the trolley from Brantford brings one to the pretty town of Paris, nestled in the valley of the Grand River. The town is also reached by the Grand Trunk, and scarcely a traveler crossing the high and long railway bridge but has commented on its beautiful location. A manufacturing place of some importance, the woolen industry fills a large sphere, and a great many young women are employed in the mills. Commercially, Paris is a bright town of probably 3,500 inhabitants, and along Grand River Street, the principal business thoroughfare, are a number of stores which for attractiveness compare well with those in larger and more ambitious centres.

Some Local Features.

Nor are the grocers—who are well represented by six progressive merchants—one whit behind their neighbors, albeit they have much to learn in the art of window dressing. If there is one outstanding feature of the trade in Paris it is in the nature of 'phone orders. These are more numerous proportionately than is the case in Brantford, and also means a saving in that a clerk has not to be employed to go out and book orders exclusively. A larger percentage of the people, too, visit the stores in Paris than do so in Brantford, and the grocer is brought in more direct contact with a large number of his customers.

Chas. McCausland is the only exclusive grocer in Paris and he has an up-to-date store in the centre of the town.

John Walker and Rehder & Co. have general stores with grocery departments down-town, and J. W. Hillburn and John M. Patterson have stores at extreme limits of the municipality, the latter conducting a well-paying butcher department in connection with his business. Mr. Patterson is mayor of Paris.

Cash Basis the Best.

The grocers of the country might well emulate the farmers of Ontario in the matter of trading on a cash basis only. No doubt during the late depression many grocers had experiences which would well bear out the truth of this remark. The town of Paris is in the centre of a farming district, and at present the farmers thereabouts are in a happy condition, better off financially than many manufacturers and merchants, and they trade only for cash. A talk with the leading men of the town and country round-about will soon convince one of the splendid position of the farmer. He had bountiful crops this year and the fall wheat now in or being sown promises well for next June. The farmer, too, has advanced as a man of business in trading solely for cash, and is putting by tidy sums in the bank.

In discussing the question of credit or cash with Paris grocers all were unanimous on the point that one of the weaknesses of the present method of doing business was the practice of giving credit, but the fact was also recognized that in some manufacturing centres a certain amount of credit had to be given. Employees of factories who form quite a large percentage of customers are paid probably but once a fortnight, and in cases like that a credit trade had to be done. Notwithstanding that, however, the cash trade was the ideal one and the one to be aimed at.

FRUIT GROWERS DISCUSS TRADE QUESTIONS.

At the Second Day of Their Convention in Toronto Last Week.

The Ontario Fruit Growers' Association concluded the business of their annual meeting in Toronto on Wednesday, November 11. The sessions were very interesting and several valuable papers were read which provoked lively discussions. The codlin moth received attention, and so severe have become its ravages, that a resolution was passed asking the Ontario Government for legislation making spraying or other methods of controling this and similar pests compulsory.

The directors elected for the coming year were. R. B. Whyte, Ottawa; H. Jones, Maitland; F. S. Wallbridge, of Belleville; W. H. Gibson, of Newcastle; R. W. Grierson, of Oshawa; A. W. Peart, of Burlington; E. D. Smith, of Winona; G. A. Robertson, of St. Catharines; J. E. Johnson, Simcoe; D. Johnson, Forest; F. Metcalf, Blyth; A. W. Gurney, Paris, and C. Stephens, Orillia.

J. A. Ruddick, dairy and cold storage commissioner, gave an able address full of pointers on the best sellers in the way of fruit in the British market.

Regarding the packing of apples an enlivening debate took place. Elmer Lick, of Oshawa, said to be a good apple packer a man must have both skill and character. An apple should be handled carefully like an egg, and not like a stone or turnip, as was the practice of the average apple packer. The average apple packing gang was rather a rough lot and young men of character would not associate with the members. If packing was to be good a grower must employ men who he could implicitly trust. The result was, as in a case he had in mind, where a man brought in 126 barrels of apples and got less than $25 for them.

Major Roberts, of Grimsby, spoke on the shipment of tender fruits. He said that owing to the dishonesty of some packers, receivers would pay only such prices as they thought right for fruit if it did not come up to its face value, and thus the honest packer suffers.

F. G. H. Pattison, of Winona, said that the Fruit Marks Act was a dead letter, so far as home fruit distribution was concerned, although it benefited the export trade. In order to check dishonest packing inspectors should be sent to the Niagara district.

J. W. Crow, of the O.A.C., Guelph, remarked that if Ontario fruit growers wanted to get their share of the trade in Manitoba they must send better fruit as there was strong criticism all over the West with regard to the fruit packed and the method of packing.

E. D. Smith, of Winona, said the Westerners paid $5 per barrel, and expected to get good fruit for this money, and if they did not, they would buy elsewhere. The best fruit should not be sent to England, leaving only second-grade to the West.

In further discussion it was said apples, that had been sent to Cobalt were inferior, while some offered on Toronto streets were dubbed "mere trash."

A special committee appointed last year to draft a suitable bill regarding the filling of all nursery orders, true to name, reported. "By its provisions all nurserymen and agents wil have to have licenses. These licenses are liable to cancelation upon sufficient evidence of wrongdoing. No nurseryman is allowed to substitute other varieties for those named, without the written consent of the purchaser. But the chief clause around which interest centred was the one which laid the nurseryman open to damages where the fruiting trees showed fruit other than that ordered." The report was adopted.

A PREPARED PLUM PUDDING.

Arthur A. Clements, sales manager the Allredie Pure Food Co,, of Bridgewater, N.S., is in Toronto this week introducing a new and novel food preparation, the Allredie Plum Pudding.

The pudding is composed of the ingredients ordinarily used in the home-made article, but comes in powdered form in a package with the fruit, etc., included, and only needs the addition of milk and molasses for immediate use. The article is one which should prove popular among grocers' customers.

DO DEALERS ADULTERATE HONEY?

Question Discussed at Meeting of Beekeepers' Association in Toronto Last Week.

"The Busy Bee" drew forth many valuable papers at the annual meeting of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association in Toronto on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 11 and 12.

President F. J. Miller, of London, presided, and in his opening address urged that the members keep up their interest in the association. Thanks were due the Ontario Government, he said, for the assistance given the honey industry. Excellent work on the part of the inspectors had resulted in keeping down the spread of disease, from colony to colony.

A. McGill, chief analyst of the Inland Revenue Department, Ottawa, read a timely paper on "The Adulteration of Honey," in which he said that he would like to have honey so defined that one could tell whether a given article was pure or impure. Mr. McGill submitted several samples and declared that throughout the province a large quantity of adulterated honey was being sold and that an endeavor should be made by the Beekeepers' Association to see that all honey came up to a certain standard before it could be placed on the market. Mr. McGill said beekeepers should not be blamed for the converting of sugar into honey and selling the product as pure. The dealers were the guilty parties.

Other papers read were by A. C. Miller, Providence, R.I.; A. Dickson, Lancaster, and O. L. Hershiser, Kenmore, N.Y.

Wm. Couse, as an expression of appreciation by the association of his long and faithful services as secretary, was presented with a valuable gold watch.

A resolution was carried that no director could hold office for more than five years, and the following constitute the new board: A. Dickson, Lancaster; A. McLaughlin, Cumberland; H. E. Eyre, Chantry; R. Lowey, Cherry Valley; James Storer, Lindsay; William Couse, Streetsville; J. M. Switzer, Orangeville; W. H. Bowen, Niagara Falls; W. J. Craig, Brantford; D. Chalmers, Poole, and W. A. Chrysler, Chatham.

The officers of the association for the ensuing year are:

President, Wm. Couse, Streetsville; 1st vice-president, W. J. Craig, Brantford; 2nd vice-president, D. Nolan, Newton Robinson; secretary, P. W. Hodgetts, Toronto; treasurer, Martin Emigh, Holbrook.

CANADA WILL BE REPRESENTED.

England, Germany, Japan and Norway are among the latest to enter national displays at the National Apple Show, to be held Dec. 7 to 12, in Spokane, when $35,000 worth of prizes will be awarded to successful contestants in the various competitions. British Columbia and several other provinces in Canada have already reserved space for 200 exhibits and indications are that they will double the number.

A FRIEND FROM VANCOUVER.

H. Musham, Vancouver, was a caller at the office of The Grocer last week. Mr. Musham represents Holbrooks Limited in the territory from Winnipeg to the coast. In an interview he expressed great confidence in the great Canadian west and is a most enthusiastic propogandist. "Almost every trip I make," said he, "I see new towns springing up and the older ones expanding, and every improvement is towards best modern methods, indicating that settlers and merchants have confidence in the future of their new homes. One fact that struck me, and one that does credit to your company, is that wherever I go I find The Canadian Grocer in the best stores. I look for it regularly now and my subscription is an evidence of its value to me." Mr. Musham left for his territory on Saturday and expects to reach Vancouver in time for the Yuletide feast and the holly berries.

SOAP COMPANIES UNITE.

It is learned that the Royal Crown, Limited, Winnipeg; the Royal Soap Co., Vancouver, and the Standard Soap Co., Calgary, will unite. A meeting was held in Calgary last week to arrange the details and to ratify an agreement entered into by the directors. F. T. Weir, manager of the Standard Co., who has controlled its policies and works since 1905, will likely remove to Winnipeg.

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Information Regarding Grocery Products Which Will Help the Merchant and Clerk to Dispose of His Goods.

The Banana as a Food.

The banana is one of the best, but perhaps one of the least appreciated, of the best fruits. Its nutrient value is fully equal to that of the potato. Its digestibility, when properly prepared, is far greater than that of the potato. It is a well-balanced food for a low-protein ration. That is, it contains the right proportion of protein and carbohydrates. With the addition of the proper proportion of fat in some form, the banana furnishes everything needed for complete nutrition. The banana disagrees with many people simply because it is not properly masticated. In banana-growing countries, no one thinks of eating a banana until it has become mellow as a peach. Then the mastication is a matter of less importance, for the mere act of munching or swallowing is sufficient to reduce the mellow pulp to the consistency of a paste or a puree.

The green or unripe banana contains a large amount of starch. In the process of ripening, which, when completed, is indicated by the dark brown or black color of the skin, the starch is converted into dextrin and sugar. In other words, the process of ripening digests the starch and so performs the work which is ordinarily required of the stomach. The well-ripened banana is thus a predigested food of the finest sort. Unfortunately in this country one does not always obtain well-ripened fruit. The majority of Americans have not yet learned that the banana skin must be nearly black before the fruit is thoroughly ripe and fit for eating.

Many of the bananas sold in this country are picked when immature, so that they never become mellow and sweet and juicy like the well-matured fruit, but are tough and tasteless. Such bananas are absolutely unfit for food. When eaten in an unripe or immature state, the banana enters the stomach in broken masses reduced to various degrees of fineness, but still masses of coarse substance which digest very slowly, often not at all, in the stomach. The result is a long retention of these undivided and undigested masses in the stomach with resulting irritation, acidity, and sometimes fermentation and pain.

The evident remedy, then, for indigestion resulting from the use of the banana is thorough mastication. In chewing the banana, as is the case with many other food substances, the use of the teeth is not sufficient. The food mass should be pressed and rubbed against the roof of the mouth with the tongue. It is really surprising how quickly and effectively a large proportion of food substances may be reduced by means of the tongue alone employed in the manner suggested. The pressing of the food against the roof of the mouth also facilitates the recognition of any coarse or unmasticated particles. These are readily pushed out by the tip and sides of the tongue and brought between the teeth for further crushing.

The ripe banana is perhaps better fitted than almost any other fruit for infant feeding, and is admirably well adapted to counteract the unwholesome effects of sterilized milk. Perfectly smooth banana pulp combined with sterilized cream constitutes an admirable food for a child a few months old.

The banana, then, is not only harmless, but an exceedingly useful and valuable food. It is only necessary that it should be thoroughly masticated or reduced to a fine pulp before being swallowed.

Cocoa in Bahia.

In an official report from Bahia, it is mentioned that Brazil, as a whole, furnishes at the present time nearly one-quarter of the world's supply of cocoa. Of the total output from Brazil, the State of Bahia has furnished an average of nearly 80 per cent. during the past five years. It will thus be understood that the annual cocoa crop of Bahia is a matter of much importance for the cocoa markets of the world. The export of cocoa from Bahia during the year 1907 amounted to 21,221 tons, being 1,743 tons less than during the year 1906. A wealthy syndicate, which controls West African cocoa, is making strenuous efforts to maintain prices in connection with that particular variety of the commodity in question, but with an accumulated stock of 140,000 bags of cocoa at Lisbon the task of keeping up prices will prove difficult. The current cocoa crop (1907-08) of this state has now been all gathered; it is estimated to total over 22,000 metric tons, being about 1,000 tons in excess of the 1906-07 crop.

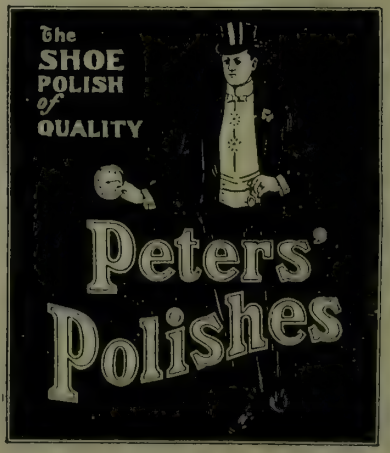
LAMP BURNERS

The screw part or burner-base is covered, which protects against fire. Many burners are made cheaper by leaving the screw part open so that dust, dead insects, or charred portions of wick may collect, thus becoming saturated with oil and liable to catch fire. OURS DON'T.

Manufactured by

ONTARIO LANTERN AND LAMP CO., LIMITED, HAMILTON, ONT.



PETERS' POLISH

A line of shoe polish that has created great enthusiasm among those selling and using it.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

The Turned-Down Corners

Here and there in the Ledger of Life you have turned-down the corner of a page for remembrance sake—you'd forget something if the turned-down corner wasn't there.

¶ To-day turn down a corner deep and wide to remember this one sure fact "quality is remembered long after price is forgotten." Every time you come to that particular page—remember, every time you try to sell inferior quality, think of the turned-down corner. What it stands for and what it really means to your success.

The Reason Why

There is one reason behind every big success in the grocery business, that is, Giving Good Value. The only way to hold the loyalty of your customers and get them talking favorably of you to their neighbors is to give better value in quality and service than the "other fellows" do. That's why you—if you're aiming at real success—cannot afford to buy canned fruits and vegetables that are not thoroughly reliable in quality. Those grocers who have for years been selling OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND are loud in its praises as a brisk and constant seller. They say its quality is unsurpassed by any goods they have ever sold; while very few brands can even nearly equal it. We make sure of quality by selecting only the very finest grade of stock and by having a plant that is modern, clean and well manned.

Tea Hints For Retailers

Seventeen years ago with a thorough disregard for old-time ideas and precedents as to what was "good" tea we placed "SALADA" upon the market. We established a standard of QUALITY and VALUE that has for all these years defied all competition. That has established a sale without precedent on the American Continent.

Yesterday—to-day—and to-morrow the same unalterable aim "TO SERVE THE PUBLIC WELL." To push "SALADA" means

As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty-mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident—its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

A Basis of Success

By Henry Clews, the New York Financier

A WISELY advertised product gives its sponsors credit standing. For confidence makes credit; and knowledge is absolutely necessary to confidence.

Big advertising looks like big sales; it familiarizes; it unconsciously creates trust.

Beyond all question of doubt, the greatest force working in the interest of credit to-day is publicity.

If You Buy Your Tea From T. H. Estabrooks You Will Never Have Any Dead Stock

The dead ones were all bought from other firms. Ask the firms who sold you this dead stock to do the same as T. H. Estabrooks has always offered to do, viz: "take back and pay full price in cash for any tea not fully satisfactory." They won't do it. Then why run the risk of dead stock, especially when you can make more profit by selling Red Rose Tea and Estabrooks' bulk blends than any teas on the market.

Two Reasons—You can sell more of them because no other teas equal them in quality, and you are absolutely guaranteed against loss as every pound is guaranteed to pay you full profit.

The dust problem is constant—like dish-washing—the drudgery of it is split in two with the IDEAL. It appeals to more people as a mechanically correct and necessary device than our Mop, the SELF WRINGER, ever did and we venture the statement that you have for nearly 20 years found our products free from complaints, owing to perfect construction. You can therefore sell as you buy—in perfect confidence. We solicit trial orders through the jobbers.

Christmas Advertising for the Grocer

Hints on How to Induce the Housekeepe r to Open Her Purse at the Holiday Sea son — Every Announcement Should Breathe Forth the Christmas Sp irit—Some Samples of How to and How Not to Do It—Suggestion and Advice by W. F. Ralph.

The climax of the Christmas festival is usually the Christmas dinner. Even the poorest people manage to spend a little more with the grocer at Christmas time than at ordinary seasons. But the fact that people are going to buy more fancy groceries when Christmas day draws near, does not mean that a grocer can afford to neglect his advertising. To get the people to spend their money with you, you must advertise.

The keynote of all Christmas advertising should be suggestion, Let every ad. speak of some particular things. Don't merely say, "We have a large stock of staple and fancy groceries." Get down to the concrete facts. Separate the various items of your stock for the purpose of advertising. Pick out all the fancy goods suitable for holiday use and let the people hear about them. Put a price on everything, and tell the people what it is—and why.

Without being long-winded, say something about each article you advertise; something that will interest the lukewarm; that will breed a desire to have—to taste; something that will tend to make the reader think that her Christmas dinner table will be quite incomplete without it.

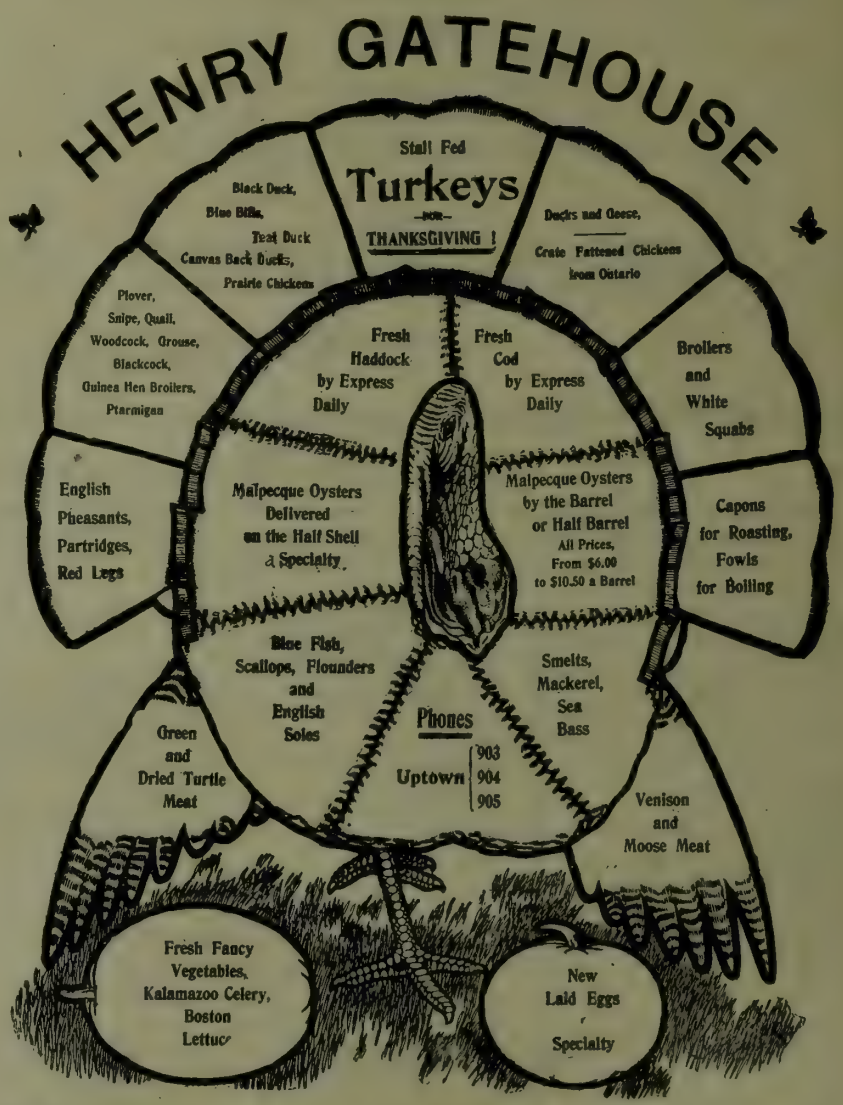
Breathe Out Christmas.

Let every ad. breathe of Christmas. Word it with the joyous optimism of the season. And let your store with all its windows be in harmony with the season—bright, cheerful and plenteous.

Most housekeepers try to keep their expenditure down, even at Christmas time. But the way to loosen the purse-string is to advertise hard and persistently.

A Sample From Montreal.

Talking of holiday advertising reminds us of some Thanksgiving grocery ads. we have seen. There was one great big fellow occupying full-page space in the Montreal Herald, that must have cost a pile of money. We reproduce it here, considerably reduced. This ad. might be termed a good one—ineffectively used. Any person turning over the pages of the paper, which contained it could hardly fail to see it and be curious about it. As far as impressing home the name of Henry Gatehouse goes, this gigantic advertisement, no doubt, did its work. But, with a little more thought and time spent upon it, it might have been made much more effective. In only one spot is a price mentioned. What it needed to make it a really excellent retail grocery ad. was the elimination of a few names, the insertion of a certain amount of explanatory reading matter about each item and a price in every instance. Prices would have given the reader something concrete. She would be able to figure out, for instance, when reading of black duck, blue bills, teal duck, canvas-back duck, prairie chickens, whether she could afford any of those delicacies or not. The absence of the price might easily lead to the conclusion in the mind of the less wealthy housekeeper, that such rare birds were too expensive for her anyway. On the other hand, if the price were attached, she might easily be persuaded that the reasonableness of the price would permit of her buying. And a little explanatory matter might easily have the effect of persuading her that she should have some of those delicacies for the special festive occasion.



A Grocery Ad. from Montreal.

One From St. Catharines.

That's a rattling good ad. of Bradley & Son, a cut of which appears with this article. It is somewhat of a departure, too! It is not what is usually known as straight display advertising, or straight reading notice advertising, but a sort of combination of both. It is the style of advertising that seems to hit the modern note—full of news value. It would be safe betting that the housekeepers of the three cities where this firm conduct retail stores are on the lookout for Bradley advertising.

The opening paragraphs are a trifle on the long-winded side. It might have been better to have scattered the information contained in them over three or four separate ads. featuring prices in one, service in another and so on. The rest of the ad., though, is fine. You will observe that the main story is told by the heading; that excites interest. Then follows the reason why and the quality talk, which is written in a logical, persuasive style that is liable to promote real business. Take the "Mixed Cakes" paragraph as a sample. Here it is! Analyze it for yourself and you will see how interest is turned into persuasion by the influence of a final suggestion.

MIXED CAKES.

mutual arrangement existing between the advertiser, the publisher and the consumer, to result in the greatest benefit to all, depends upon securing an equivalent for services rendered. A publisher can no more afford to lose an advertising account than a merchant can afford to lose a customer or the amount of his bill. Advertising should be regarded, therefore, as one of the fixed charges of the business, the same as the insurance, rent and clerk hire. Each month's rent adds to the good-will of the business; each dollar spent in advertising has the same effect.

At the end of each year the good-will of a successful business shows a material increase on the balance sheet, and this growth is largely dependent upon the advertising. For example, $5,000 a and do not figure that it will be a total loss even if the men fail individually.

Exactly so your advertising campaign should be planned.

When your plans have been properly made, see that you get the best service for the money.

"Years ago a merchant would remark: "We have $5,000 to spend this year in advertising; Jones, you spend it." Jones was in the market from that day until the appropriation was exhausted No system; no investigation; no plan as to how to get the best results, but simply to let go of the money to the first friend or good salesman who had any kind of an advertising proposition to present.

To-day you must study the customer; his habits; his tastes; his income, and

Between Ourselves

There was a time when a person wanting groceries sent their order to the nearest grocery. Now hundreds of the most critical housekeepers of this district say emphatically—Get these groceries for me at Bradley's.

They have proved this store—our groceries, prices and service—and found that Bradley's was the most satisfactory store at which to trade.

Groceries

Hundreds of varieties and qualities of groceries—some good, some bad. Bradley's do the selecting—we stand between you and poor groceries. Every item you purchase in a Bradley store has been passed upon as reliable quality by critical judges before it is accepted into stock. Confidence in our groceries was the foundation of our broad guarantee to buy back any purchase that should not prove equal to your expectations. This protection on quality is one reason why many buy groceries at Bradley's almost exclusively. At no store can you get your money back more promptly than at Bradley's.

Prices

Buying for three stores gives Bradleys a tremendous buying power—unequalled by any other grocery in this district. This gives us the advantage of lower cost prices for our stocks.

Then three stores combined under one management enable Bradleys to do business successfully on a smaller margin of profit than the ordinary grocer.

These two facts explain why Bradley prices are from 5 to 20% lower than those charged elsewhere.

We lower the cost prices—not quality.

Service

You'll enjoy shopping at Bradleys. Courteous salesmen are always ready and willing to do your bidding. If you are in a hurry you have but to mention the fact, and you are served in the least possible time.

Then each order is double-checked before leaving the store, so that errors and shortages are rare at Bradleys.

Bradleys' Store News

Bradleys find pleasure as well as profit in serving you. Money is not everything, even in a business such as this. We are now preparing for the heaviest business of the year. Prices will be fair—Bradley's prices in reach of every person's purse.

Cash Basis

This Bradley business is run on a cash basis. The savings possible are an example of how well it pays to pay cash. Cash buyers find it to their advantage to buy at Bradleys, because they know they are not paying for bad debts which credit stores have to provide for.

If you have never yet tried Bradleys, do so at your earliest convenience. Come this week.

These teas were offered to us to sell at 30c per pound. By taking a quantity, however, we secured a concession in price that enables us to offer you this 30c quality of tea at 25c per pound.

If this is the price you usually pay for tea, we would be pleased to have you try a pound from Bradleys.

It's a blend of specially selected coffees that at the price cannot be equalled for flavor.

BRADLEY & SON

3—STORES—3

St. Paul Street, ST. CATHARINES, ONT.

A Well-written Ad. from St. Catharines.

"Include a quarter's worth in your next order."

Every paragraph is the same—interesting all the way through. It just shows what can be done in the way of grocery advertising when a grocer becomes convinced that mere space-filling is not effective advertising; but that newspaper space can be made a big business promoter if it is filled with live, interesting matter about household wants—with prices attached.

THE APPROPRIATION AND PLAN.

In planning an advertising campaign, remember the bills must be paid. The year spent in advertising a retail business in a good locality, or in advertising a trade-marked article, is not, and cannot be, wasted money. Competition in trade usually requires something in direct returns for your advertising, but remember, that an advertising expenditure is not money wasted, even though no immediate results are shown.

An advertising campaign should be planned exactly like planning to send men on the road in a wholesale business. You know about what the expense will be if you put three or four men on the road; you arrange to meet that expense out of the profits of the business, how to reach him. What medium to use; what article to advertise primarily, and what to push as a secondary proposition. All these things must be taken into consideration, with the size of the store, the advantages in location, the amount of stock carried, the number of people employed, and the value to the merchant of an increasing "good-will." There must be system in your advertising plans.—W. T. Davis, in the Ottawa Citizen.

PROPERTY OF TRAVELERS AT HOTELS.

Is a hotel-keeper responsible for the lost clothing, jewelery, etc., of his guests?

In some cases he is and in others he is not. In France the proprietor is responsible for the safe-keeping of all the property of a guest. Whether placed in charge of the office or not makes no difference. In Canada, unless valuables are given directly in care of the landlord he is generally not held liable for them. A mere notice of the fact that the landlord will not be responsible for furs, coats, hats, etc., unless left in his charge, is, however, of itself not enough to absolve him, as a recent decision at Galt would indicate. The action was tried in the Division Court. The particulars are rather interesting, illustrating the relationship between guest and host.

A traveler named Laidlaw sued the hotel proprietor to recover $28.50, the value of an overcoat left in the hotel office and which subsequently disappeared. The traveler had taken his coat into the office and hung it on one of the lock hooks; he locked the mechanism and put the check in his pocket. When he returned an hour later the coat was gone. The proprietor refused to settle and the suit followed. The defence took the ground that the traveler had not left his coat in the hands of the proprietor and that a notice on the register stated that the proprietor would not be responsible for coats, etc., unless they were left in his charge. The judge ruled that the mere fact of such a notice on the hotel register did not absolve the proprietor from responsibility. Judgment was given for the plaintiff for the full amount.

It would, of course, be unreasonable to think of holding the proprietor of a public house responsible for the personal property of every guest, whether entrusted to his charge or not, but the recent decision goes to show that if a hotel installs lock hooks and other alleged devices of protection and some one is able to tamper with them and walk off with the clothing, furs, etc., the owner of the building is held accountable. The fact that he cannot escape by posting up a sign or notice is a good thing from the standpoint of the traveling public and will tend to make landlords see that no idlers, thieving or light-fingered gentry float around the hostelry and possibly float off later with some of the guests' belongings. Just how far a proprietor should be liable for the luggage of his visitors is a question not yet definitely decided, and perhaps may not reach the condition in France. The decision rendered in the Galt and other instances, however, would appear to indicate that we are traveling in that direction.

CHRISTMAS CONTESTS AROUSING INTEREST.

Considerable interest is being taken all over the country in The Grocer's Christmas Window Dressing and Advertising contest. From various towns come reports that local grocers are putting in special windows for the purpose of entering the competition and some bright ads of Christmas goods appearing in a number of local papers give opportunity for very readily entering the ad contest.

The fact that the Window Dressing contest is divided into two classes, thus offering equal opportunity to the city and country merchant, is a feature that should appeal to all. This was found to work out admirably last year, and will, no doubt, do so again.

These contests are something in which every merchant in the country should take an interest. To enter would be a help to himself as well as to others, and would probably mean development of these features of his business. The contests have been arranged with a view to educating the grocers to get the most out of their window dressing and advertising departments which are of the utmost importance in the modern store.

POOR OLIVE CROP IN SPAIN.

Advices from Spain November 6, stated that only 500 casks of Queen olives would be harvested this year, against 15,000 casks in 1907. Later advices, November 20, are even more pessimistic, stating that the full extent of the crop is now known. Of the 500 casks harvested a large quantity is reported unfit for export, being of poor quality.

Manzanilla olives have not proved quite so unsatisfactory, but still the quality is not so good as it might be.

Olive oil, under the circumstances, rules very firm, and higher prices are anticipated, especially for the finer grades of oil, which are generally shipped in March and April.

Strong markets will undoubtedly prevail from now on in olives also. While some stock was carried over from 1907, there will not be sufficient in first hands to supply trade requirements until 1910, when a further supply of olives will be placed on the market on the harvesting of the 1909 crop.

PURCHASING BY GRAFT.

No one except the grafters will be sorry that the Minister of Marine has issued instructions to "blue pencil" the patronage list.

The patronage list, which has existed since Confederation, under all Governments, Federal and Provincial, never had any excuse for its existence, except to create an exclusive list of political favorites who might furnish supplies and undertake contracts.

In an ordinary business enterprise it would not have been countenanced for one moment, and custom should not allow its continuance in the Marine or any other Government department.

The fact that the patronage list is a preferred list is not its worst feature. Undoubtedly purchases are made for Federal and Provincial Governments at prices which are not above those ruling on the open market. Some of those on the patronage list have declared that they have had to sell at prices which did not return them even a moderate profit. But that does not alter the fact that as a whole the system is bad and a hot-bed in which graft flourishes.

Every buying department, Federal and Provincial, should be placed on a business basis; and the exposures in the Marine Department should hasten its consummation.

The first step should be the appointment of men with practical business experience in the particular lines which the various departments have to purchase. And a salary should be paid which would ensure competent as well as honest men.

FIGHTING THE PEDDLING NUISANCE

An Evil That is Becoming Very Pre valent, Particularly in Ontario—Local Merchants Waking up and Ac ting in the Matter—Preparing for New Legislation.

The peddler, hawker and the transient trader can be found to-day in increasing numbers in almost any community. Particularly does he flourish in neighborhoods removed from railway or water communication, to which it is difficult to convey goods other than by haulage from the nearest dock or station. They are a great and growing army reaping a rich harvest. The returns must be large, or so many would not be engaged in the business. These itinerant sellers somehow manage, in a great many cases, to escape taxation, and, in many municipalities, one would think such a license fee would scarcely be worth avoiding, for the amount is a mere bagatelle. What is required and what the legitimate retailer is now demanding, is a more uniform tax, and that it be promptly collected. The authorities in several centres have been lax in getting after these meandering merchants and an aggressive campaign is mapped out.

The statutes now provide the maximum fee that may be levied, but these figures are too low. Villages, towns and townships generally have a tax of their own, ranging from $1 upwards, but the rate is felt by the merchants in different places to be no protection at all and the license is looked upon more in the light of a farce.

The average retailer does not object to hawkers and transient traders—far from it—but what they do contend is that these venders of miscellaneous commodities should be compelled to bear a just share of the cost of doing business.

The Local Merchant's Side.

The local merchant pays taxes, rent and water rates; he pays help and has light, heat and other expenses to meet. He bears a portion of the outlay for all the improvements in his village or town in the way of local improvements. He also maintains a delivery service and scatters many dollars in the way of supplies for the upkeep of his home and family, as well as distributing dollars in numerous other avenues. What does the transient trader do? His name is not on the assessment roll; he seldom pays any tax and yet he goes from community to community hawking his wares, sometimes on foot and at other times with a horse, escaping with a low fee and dodging it whenever and wherever possible. Thus his profits are large. He generally gets the top notch figure for his stock-in-trade, and makes a handsome margin. Retail merchants should, therefore, make every effort to see that a portion of that profit finds its way back into the township or village coffers. They ask only a fair measure of protection and, granted this, they are not afraid of honest, open competition.

The County License.

A transient trader may, it seems, obtain in not a few counties what is termed a county license. He often seeks to do business in every municipality within that county on the presentation of this license. In some instances he has done so and the courts have upheld his rights to operate as it were under a "blanket permit." Business men desire that the law on this point should be made clear and explicit and that municipalities should be more active in seeing that peddlers and transient traders do not go scot free. The class of persons aimed at, roughly speaking, constitute those selling direct to the consumer and not to the retailer. The distinction between a peddler and a transient trader is that the former is generally a resident of the section where he pursues his calling and is possibly on the assessment roll. The latter is one who moves around from place to place, sometimes leasing a store for a short time, engaging a room in an hotel or boarding house and selling direct to the consumer, obtaining as high prices as he can and presenting a most plausible plea as to the superior merit and quality of his offerings.

The Transient Trader.

Transient traders in Ontario to-day are thicker than ever, and it is said fully three-quarters of them pay nothing for the privilege of doing business. The sell tea, coffee, curtains, clothing, caps, carpets—in fact, most all lines carried in the average general store. It is after them that the legitimate retailer intends to go and see that the tax is levied, and that the transient merchant cannot trade in every municipality in the county simply by obtaining a county license. It is possible that the agitation may result in a demand that a minimum fee should be imposed by every municipality and that the authorities of each place be alert and industrious in seeing that all fees, licenses—taxes of every kind—are promptly met and collected.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada is taking up these grievances and will at the next session of the Ontario Legislature ask that the present law be changed. The amendments, which will be incorporated in petition to the legislature, will be definitely outlined in the near future, after a consultation among the members of the different branches of the organization, the various interests represented, and conferences with township, county and city councils.

Further information along this line, as well as the different clauses and amendments to the Municipal Act licensing hawkers, peddlers and transient traders will be given in future issues.

LET US HEAR FROM YOU.

For the next few weeks The Grocer will devote some attention in each issue to the peddling nuisance, its abuses and how it may be met. As a help in this we would be glad to hear from our readers in all parts of the country as to how they have been affected by this widespread evil. Address Editor Canadian Grocer, Toronto.

GROCERS BUY CHEESE FOR PRICE

What is to be Done With the Culls if They Are Not Sold in Canada?

Editor Canadian Grocer:

We have read an article in your issue of Nov. 20th under the heading "Do Grocers Buy Poor Cheese?" There is much truth in Mr. Ruddick's letter but we do not think he gets to the root of the matter. Unfortunately, there are many retail grocers who either are not aware of the fact, or wilfully close their eyes to it, that cheese varies in quality just as much as does butter or coffee or tea or almost every other commodity which they sell. Unfortunately, too, as Mr. Ruddick points out, there is much cheese of inferior quality, which, not being good enough for export, is left in the country for home consumption. Mr. Ruddick, whilst deploring that this should go into consumption, does not tell us how else it can be disposed of.

With our intimate knowledge of the trade, it has been painfully brought home to us that too many grocers buy cheese for price. Price with them is the first, last and only consideration. When they want to buy cheese, the inquiry addressed to the salesman is "What is cheese worth?" No mention of good or poor quality, new or old cheese, but just "What is the price?" If the price quoted is ½c per lb. higher than the lowest price quoted from another quarter, the beating down process begins and a deaf ear is turned against any argument in regard to quality or maturity. It stands to reason that it costs money to keep cheese six months, since the interest, storage and shrinkage would amount to at least ½c per lb. per month. Competition is keen and too many grocers are tempted to take a chance with green or second-class cheese rather than pay the additional ¾c per pound asked for good cheese in a thoroughly matured condition. Whilst we believe these to be the facts in regard to grocers who handle poor quality cheese, at the same time, we know that there are hundreds of grocers in different parts of the country who handle their cheese business as they do other branches of their business—intelligently.

The problem of factory culls we leave for Mr. Ruddick to solve. So long as they are available, they will be sold and until it is made compulsory to keep cheese for six months, or until matured, green cheese will find its way into the hands of, and be sold by, the unskilled grocer who buys for price.

Yours very truly,

C. L. MARSHALL.

Something Doing in Trade Evolution

Largest Retail Buyers' Exchange in the United States Retires and Forms a Wholesale House While the St. Louis Grocers Form an Exchange.

From New York Journal of Commerce.

There has never been a time when grocery trade questions were reaching the critical stage they are now. Only this week the biggest and most famous buying exchange in America announced its retirement from the field as a co-operative buying institution. Out in St. Louis the Retail Grocers' Association almost simultaneously decided to start a buying exchange. The reasons for these two moves are almost diametrically opposed as principles of operation in the grocery trade.

Out on the Pacific Coast two other great issues are being tested. The California Wholesale Grocers' Association is fighting the Diamond Match Co. because it refuses to withdraw "free deals" in that territory. In the same district, before the Supreme Court of California, is pending a decision on the issue of whether or not a manufacturer who desires to maintain the price of his goods in the market can obtain damages from a jobber or retailer who has cut that price and thereby possibly damaged the manufacturer's trade marks and standing in the market. Incidentally, in the latter case is involved the whole principle of a manufacturer's right to fix and maintain the selling price of his product.

Out in North Dakota the millers have placed in the hands of the court and are awaiting a decision, their contention that Food Commissioner Ladd had no right to publish bleached flour as detrimental to health nor to interfere with their practice of bleaching flour. Simultaneously in Washington the same milling interests are arguing before Secretary Wilson and his associates of the Food Inspection Board that bleaching flour is harmless and should not be prohibited.

Up in Canada the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild is on trial for alleged conspiracy to keep competing wholesale grocers out of the field, and is charged with having driven competitors out of trade by compelling manufacturers to cut them off from purchasing privileges. Down in Alabama President J. A. Van Hoose, of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, embracing all the jobbers in fourteen States, is defending himself against a suit for similar conspiracy by having pursued the regular work of his association.

And out in Chicago has just been fired a "shot that will be heard around the world," in the form of one of the big national specialty manufacturers. He has cut off from his goods one of the big Chicago jobbers who persisted in marketing under his own brand name goods similar to those of the manufacturer, who was relying on him as an ally and distributor. And the jobber has appealed to his fellow jobbers for mutual defense. There is involved in it all those differences which the Specialty Manufacturers' Association desires to correct, and the issues loom large with significance.

In view of all the above. And yet some people smile incredulously when students of the situation write that there is a great evolution in progress in the grocery trade. Men who follow events are forced to regard the coming year as one which will carve out for itself a great place in the history of the grocery trade.

Philadelphia's Sensation.

Nothing has quite so stirred the grocery trade of late as the announcement from Secretary Smedley, of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association—the biggest buying exchange in the country—that it was to quit co-operative buying and join the realm of legitimate wholesale grocers. To the manufacturer it was the signal for drawing a sigh of relief and to awaken hope that the most annoying problem of the times is in line for solution. For the jobber it marks a turning point in a battle he has been waging for several years. For the retail grocer it possibly means that the days are at an end when he must compete with a successful rival, who owns his goods at something like 10 per cent. less than he can buy them for. And for the managers of buying exchanges it strikes a note that sounds strangely like a knell to the days of his favoritism.

None of these impressions may be wholly justified when the matter has been thrashed out to its conclusion, but every one of them is reasonably within the possible effects of the Philadelphia denouement. It is certainly a very significant move. For many months past this big buying exchange has been "under fire." One after another of the big manufacturers has decided not to continue selling it directly at jobbers' prices. Four or five large companies have already withdrawn their sales and as many more have threatened doing so. They had decided that it was not fair to sell the retailers in the association at lower prices than the rest of the retailers. Mr. Smedley denies that his decision rested on any fear of such cutting off. But he virtually admits that the position of his buying exchange was anomalous and irregular when he says that the step was taken in recognition of the fact that it placed some very friendly manufacturers in an embarrassing position, which he could not consistently force upon them longer.

If Mr. Smedley's movement and reasons are absolutely sincere and his "reformation" hearty, he deserves a great deal of credit for bravery and business acumen. People who have differed with him in the past will do well to wink at some of their old scruples and take a hand in helping him succeed in his efforts at consistency.

Philadelphia a Grocers' Problem.

Philadelphia is the most unique grocery field in the country, without doubt. Buying exchanges and chain stores have had a development there unequaled in any other place. If the same development should ensue elsewhere, the small retailer may well tremble and prepare for his finish. The same is true of the jobber. Giving Philadelphia the same ratio of retail grocery stores as most cities of its class, it would have something like 6,000 or 7,000. It did have almost that number once. To-day, however, there are not above 3,500 and one-third of these are combined in nine systems, with a volume of outlet estimated at probably 60 per cent. of the whole. The small retailer has been driven out by the growth of great retail systems that are now even throwing defiance at jobber and manufacturer. Yet the consumer does not get groceries any cheaper in Philadelphia than elsewhere.

Any one who contemplates these great retail systems and compares their buying capacity with that of the average independent Philadelphia wholesaler will readily appreciate how complex a problem has faced every manufacturer doing business in that city. However convinced a manufacturer might be that it was right and logical and "the square deal" to sell only through the wholesaler, his hesitancy to act was justified when he was challenged by consistency to refuse to sell such big organizations and profitable outlets as the Acme Tea Company, Mr. Smedley's exchange, or the William Butler system. It took courage to be consistent. People who have never studied the situation carefully should do so before passing judgment. In the interests of present-day consistency and future trade welfare there is room for serious thought in Philadelphia.

Who Created Buying Exchanges?

Mr. Smedley says, as do others who are familiar with the situation, that the co-operative buying exchange came into being, not as an aggressive agency designed to set up a preferred class, but in self protection against a rapidly growing preferred class represented in the cut-rate chain stores. Mr. Smedley was not chargeable with price cutting, so far as the evidence discloses. He says that his members were threatened with being driven out of existence unless they did combine and buy together. He still insists that co-operative buying was a success and a saving grace to the small retailer who was a member,

If this be true, who then is to blame for having made possible the great systems, which bought goods at such low rates that they undermined all competition? Logically it would appear it was the manufacturer who was willing to sell them goods, but who now sees that he was in error. Had he recognized the rights of the jobbers to protection in a free and open field, rather than fallen to the temptation of a big retail outlet, the big retailer might not have grown so great. Now he threatens and defies not only the jobber, but in some lines the manufacturer himself. Once elimination starts no one can tell where it will end in this severely practical economy of ours. First displace the little retailer, then the jobber, and the manufacturer is logically the next victim. But thanks to organization, recently culminated in the organization of the manufacturers themselves, for the purpose of working out a harmonious and uniform plan, there is some likelihood that the irregular drift may be checked. The move of Mr. Smedley's association is the first bit of fruit from the correctionary tactics of the manufacturer.

What is a Wholesaler?

There is in the example of the Philadelphia exchange, however, another possible development, which is just now worth considering. By the mere act of incorporation and a clerical change in the methods of doing business, Mr. Smedley and his associates propose to metamorphose themselves from retailers into wholesalers. And, so far as analysis can discern, they will accomplish it. It all raises again that unanswerable question—unanswerable to the satisfaction of everybody—of "What is a wholesaler?" Dictionary terms are ambiguous on that point. The ordinary conception, however, is that a wholesaler is one who buys in large quantities, intending to sell again in smaller quantities to the retailer, who will further distribute the goods to the consumer. If that be correct that is precisely what Mr. Smedley's new corporation will be.

But the same would be true of the Acme Tea Co.'s big main depot, save that its distribution would be confined to its own retail stores, instead of selling to any retailer who comes along as a customer. Any big chain system might, by merely separating its main supply depot from its retail outlets, place itself in the column of the wholesalers, especially if it would offer to sell to any retailer who applies to buy. If the transition is thus simple, there arises a possibility that perhaps the Smedley system is the logical way out of the dilemma. Let every big distributing, buying and central station follow this course and the whole situation would become consistent again. There would be nothing but straight wholesalers and legitimate retailers. And the road would be all smooth and sunshiny to the manufacturer who wants to be consistent. Through war would have come peace.

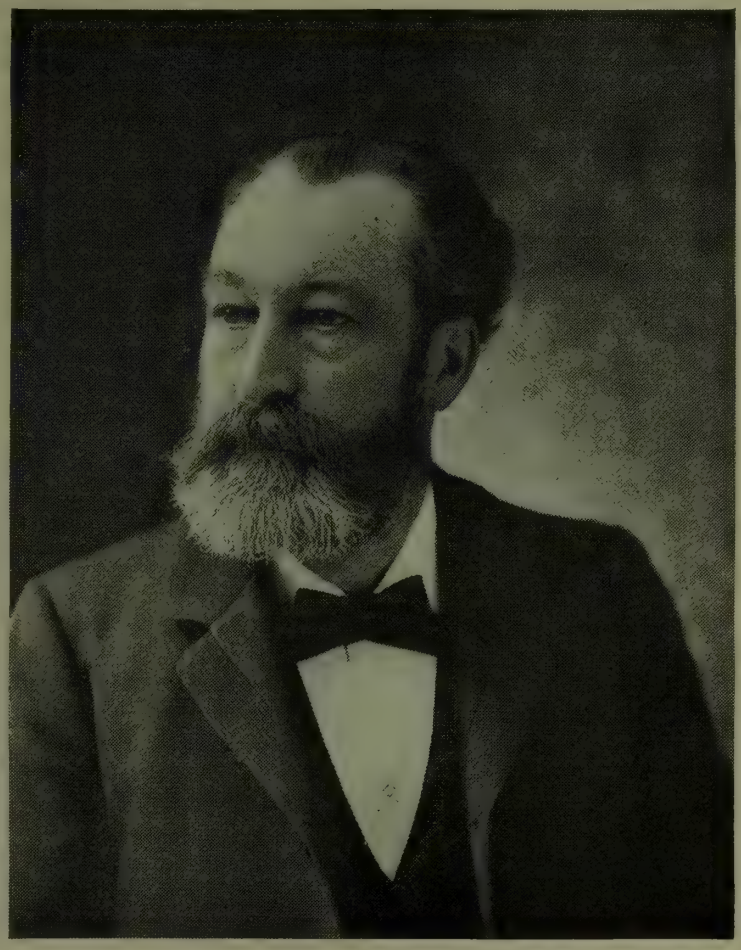
But such a course does not conform to the ideals of the old-line wholesalers, who comprise the great representative body, and who have combined into the great associations, National, Southern, State and Sectional. According to the constitution of the National Association, any wholesaler is eligible to membership, but "no syndicate or combination of retailers shall be eligible." The constitution of the Southern Association follows much the same lines, but provides that "no wholesaler is eligible where a greater amount than 20 per cent. of his, or their, capital is owned or controlled by retailers," to be determined by affidavit. And Mr. Smedley's corporation is admittedly made up very largely, if not almost wholly, of retailers, though others may buy the stock if they desire.

Here, then, is the stumbling block to the determination — from the jobber's standpoint, at least—of whether the Smedley method can change a retailer into a wholesaler. It may be that in trying to find a way out of a bad dilemma the influence of the Specialty Manufacturers' Association may be thrown to bring about new classifications, but there would be a merry old wrangle in accomplishing it. However, the present appears to have gone a long way in the direction of simplifying the situation, but in just what direction the next evolutionary movement will tend must await developments. Possibly a pause may be wise until conditions can adjust themselves to the new order of things. It appears to be largely up to the manufacturer.

The St. Louis Exchange.

The St. Louis movement to form a buying exchange and embark on the very course which Philadelphia is now repudiating appears to be nothing but a somewhat belated repetition of the early history of the Philadelphia evolution. One who reads the discussions which have ensued in the meetings of the St. Louis association cannot escape the conclusion that the movement—wise or otherwise—is born of a desire, and necessity, to cope with the chain store system of that city and the influence of the well-abhorred catalogue houses. These two have been mercilessly cutting into the very heart of St. Louis retailers, and the decision to start an exchange came from a recognition that the time had come to buy as cheaply as "the big fellows" did.

Now that the Philadelphia association has changed front it may not be too late for St. Louis to pause a minute and study the matter deeper than it has thus far.



THE LATE CALEB CHASE.

Senior Member Chase & Sanborn, of Boston and Montreal.

HEAD OF CHASE & SANBORN DEAD

Caleb Chase, senior member of the firm of Chase & Sanborn, died at his home in Brookline, Mass., on the morning of Monday, November 23.

He was born in Harwich, Mass., Dec. 11th, 1831, being the son of Job and Phoebe (Winslow) Chase. He was educated in the Harwich schools, and was in his father's general store until he reached the age of twenty-four. He then went to Boston, entering the employ of Anderson, Sargent & Co., a leading dry goods house. He was with this firm five years, traveling for them on Cape Cod and in the West, and in 1859 he made a connection with the wholesale grocery house of Chaflin, Saville & Co.

In 1864, he began business for himself, forming the firm of Carr, Chase & Raymond, which, in 1871, became Chase, Raymond & Ayer, and in 1878 was merged into the present firm of Chase & Sanborn. Owing to ill health, the active management of the business of late years has been assumed by his partners.

Mr. Chase will be long remembered for his benefactions. There was a personal element in his public and charitable gifts; something of the giver himself seemed to enter into each. He kept an active interest in his native town as long as he lived, and Harwich owes much to his public spirit. At his personal expense, he improved Harwich harbor, including the building of the sea wall. He contributed largely to the betterment of the roads of the town, gave to West Harwich its library building and another building for the town hall. He gave liberally to his own Baptist church in Harwich, and to the other churches in the town, irrespective of denomination. To the Brookline schools he gave a fund for the purpose of placing in the school rooms copies of some of the world's best sculpture. More recently he gave to the Boston Salvation Army $15,000 for its People's Place, the main hall of which is named in his honor, "Caleb Chase Hall."

Mr. Chase's private charity was endless. It was said of him that he could never resist the appeal of misery or distress. It is quite certain that there are literally thousands who will remember his generosity and personal sympathy in times of adversity.

Mr. Chase belonged to the Algonquin Club, and was an enthusiastic member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery. He was one of the 173 members who went to England in 1896, and when the London Ancients came to Boston in 1903, he was an important factor in making the visit of the Englishmen a memorable one.

He was married in 1864 to Miss Salome Boyle, of Thurston, Maine, who survives him.

TRADE NOTES.

E. A. Jackson, who has been in the grocery business in Port Whitby, Ont., for many years, has recently sold to O. M. Walters, of Guelph, who purposes establishing a soda water and bottling works at Port Whitby.

J. B. Hallworth, president and managing director of White Swan Spices & Cereals, Toronto, is at present making an extended trip through Western Canada. He reports having already made some strong connections. Before returning Mr. Hallworth will visit Chicago and other American cities to arrange for machinery necessary to operate a new and large department of the business.

WOODSTOCK AND ITS GROCERS

A City of Few Stores But of Good Business—Some Old-Established Merchants Who Are Well Up in the Trade—Splendid Christmas Window Display.

The grocers of Woodstock have a city of which they may well feel proud, as indeed they and all the citizens of that place do. Situated in the midst of an exceptionally fine agricultural section—Oxford claims to be the banner farming county of the Dominion—Woodstock is also a manufacturing town of no mean importance.

Historically, the city dates back to the days of Governor Simcoe, who laid out the townsite, and for many years the place was known as the "Town Plot." A permanent settlement was made about the year 1830, and two years later there were 12 houses. In 1850 Woodstock was erected into a town and in 1901 was incorporated a city. The population to-day numbers about 10,000.

The city is well laid out and the streets are wide and spacious. Woodstock possesses some splendid public buildings and is embellished with squares and parks. There is really but one business thoroughfare, Dundas Street, which runs through the centre of the city, but there are a number of beautiful residential streets which compare well with those in larger cities.

Felt the Strained Conditions.

There is no concealing the fact that Woodstock's manufacturing concerns have been running rather light this year, that is speaking generally and in the broad sense of the term, for some few industries report satisfactory business, and this is reflected somewhat in the unchanged and unimproved condition of business and collections. As with other classes of merchants, the grocers have felt the pinch, but being men who have been in business for some time and having been tried before, they are coming through in splendid shape. There is of course a reverse side to the picture, and that is the fact that the farmers of Oxford County have had a splendid season and to-day have on deposit in the various banks some $30,000,000. That does not sound like financial depression, does it?

The grocery stores are not nearly so numerous in Woodstock as in other cities of its size, and thus the few which are there are of an important size and are able to carry large stocks. This has counted in the favor of the grocery trade in that city. Still when all is said and done the volume of business this year will not loom so large as did that of a year ago.

Some Bright O'd Trade Members.

In conversation with old grocers like James Scott and A. M. Smith one is convinced that the younger men in the business do not know it all, nor have they all the good things on their side. Mr. Scott is a Scot by birth as well as by name and was connected with the grocery business in the Old Land. He has been 25 years in the business in Woodstock, the past ten of which he has been located in his present stand. Mr. Smith was for many years located in the east end, but recently removed his business nearer the centre of the city. Both of these grocers' stores will compare well with any of the other stores there. There may be more elaborately fitted-up premises, but there are no more neatly arranged stores, and they carry bright stocks and their stands are equipped with the latest in store appliances.

Forbes & Co., Geo. Parker and his brother William, E. W. Sage and A. E. Sage are splendid representatives of the grocery trade in the west and east ends, and F. C. Tate, near the market, has a fine establishment.

The manufacturing trade is represented by Bean & Westlake, confectionery and biscuit makers, who though perhaps not putting out such great quantities of goods as a year ago, are very near the mark set, and show profits even in advance of last year's business.

Some of the Larger Stores.

Nearer the centre of the city are the larger grocery stores—the E. J. Coles Co., who conduct a business on the lines of a department store, but who at the same time push groceries; Fred. Millman, who does somewhat of a jobbing business; and Poole & Co., the largest grocery in Woodstock. Mr. Poole is a very well informed man and is much interested in what is going on in the country roundabout, especially in matters pertaining to the agricultural output and to the crop situation. His store is well fitted up, and down the side opposite the counter are a couple of silent salesmen and show cases containing confectionery and the daintier lines of groceries. For window display the palm must go to the Coles Co. That concern exhibited in one of its windows a lot of candied peel for the Christmas season, the arrangement of which was very neat, though not at all elaborate. J. Kelly, Fury and Thompson, and J. Lewis also have commendable grocery establishments. Altogether Woodstock should be a good grocery centre when the times improve, and at present they appear to be shaping that way, for the grocery stores are few and the population is large and well-to-do.

TIME TO RENEW.

Slips are being sent members of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association for the renewal of their membership for 1909. Now is the time to look after this before it is too late, and it is hoped by the management that the members will give the matter prompt attention.

John McKergon, of A. A. Ayer & Co., has been urged by his friends to accept nomination for the mayoralty contest in Westmount, in the approaching municipal elections.

The Lind Brokerage Co., 23 Scott St., Toronto, have been appointed local agents for the Allredie Pure Food Co., of Bridgewater, N.S.

Complain of Delay in Freight Shipments

Several Toronto Houses Experience Inconvenience From Slow Delivery of Goods Coming via Montreal—Others' Shipments Came Through Satisfactorily—Railway Men Lay Blame on System of Unloading Steamers.

Some of the Toronto wholesale grocery houses have been put to considerable inconvenience during the last week or so, and in some cases this has resulted indirectly in absolute loss, through unreasonable delay in receiving freight shipped via Montreal. The story is to some extent an old one, as the same difficulty has been experienced to a greater or lesser extent every year when the large direct shipments come in, but this year, with the better facilities for handling goods at the docks at Montreal, it was hoped that this difficulty would be obviated.

Delay in Jacona's Goods.

While the delay has been noticeable for some weeks, it seems to have become particularly evident in the case of the goods coming by the Jacona, in which almost every Toronto house had at least some goods. It is a peculiar fact in connection with the matter that some houses report no delay whatever and are pleased with the excellence of the delivery.

As an instance of how the matter has been working out, it is noted that the Jacona, with a cargo of dried fruits, nuts, etc., direct from foreign ports, docked at Montreal on Nov. 5th. While some deliveries of goods from her cargo appear to have been made before, large lots of these goods only came in on Saturday, the 21st inst.; some on Monday, and some had not arrived up to the time of writing.

As an evidence of just how widespread the delay was The Grocer interviewed this week practically all the local wholesale houses. Their experiences in the matter are rather varied, as is shown herewith :

What the Trade Says.

Perkins, Ince & Co.—"Yes, we have noticed some delay this fall, particularly in regard to the goods from the Jacona. Some of our stuff in her cargo is not in yet, though some came on some days ago. It seems to be about the same thing as we experience every year."

T. Kinnear & Co.—"We have noticed the same delay this year as usual, though it's getting to be an old story. Some of our goods from the Jacona have come along, though other lots are not in yet."

Groceries Limited—"Yes, this matter has caused us a good deal of inconvenience. A couple of carload lots of currants from the Jacona, which docked on the 5th, only came in on Saturday. Sixteen days seems rather too long for the delivery of such goods."

J. F. Eby, of Eby, Blain, said : "We have had considerable trouble in other years, but have no complaint to make this year. Our goods, particularly the dried fruits, have come through in two or three days, and we have no complaints this year."

Fred Armstrong, of Warren Bros., spoke somewhat similarly : "We have had no trouble this year, and are pretty well satisfied with the delivery. Our lot of 1,000 boxes of raisins we had on the direct boat came through fine."

John Sloan & Co.—"We have had no trouble in goods coming via Montreal this year. There were a couple of car lots of currants for us which came through without any noticeable delay. We have had some trouble, though, with goods coming via New York."

Fred Humphrey—"We have noticed some delay in the delivery of goods from Montreal this year, but perhaps have not had so much trouble as a year ago. We have noticed more delay this year in shipment of goods by water."

Walter Lumbers, of Jas. Lumbers Co. —"Well, we hadn't a great deal of goods coming from Montreal. There were some figs and currants, though, on the direct boat, which we haven't seen anything of yet. It hasn't bothered us much, though."

John Medland, of Medland Bros.—"We have noticed considerable delay this year, both on goods via Montreal and New York. We had two lots coming from Smyrna for instance, the first of which left Sept. 24th, and the second on Oct. 26th. Both came in Tuesday and strangely enough, the second lot came in first. This will give you an idea of how things work out."

A. H. Pafford, of Davidson & Hay, said:—"We have had no more delay than usual in our shipments this year and things have come along pretty well. We had some goods in the Jacona but they came along quite as soon as we could expect. The facilities at Montreal for handling this class of goods, however, do not seem to be what they ought to be."

What the Railroad Men Say.

With a view to getting at the cause of the delay complained of the heads of the departments of the C.P.R. and G. T.R. which would be involved were also seen.

Mr. Todd, assistant export and import freight agent for the C.P.R., questioned regarding the delay complained of, stated that there was such a rush and hurry to get away when the last boat from the Mediterranean arrived it was not surprising if there was some delay. The cargo, being picked up at many ports, was not placed in the different holds according to the ports bound for, but was rather promiscuously handled. Insurance rates were heavy at the end of the season and the owners were anxious to get the cargo off and the export products aboard. No complaint was heard as to delay with respect to the Mediterranean steamer that arrived in October but generally with the final boat there was some detention on the part of the steamship company. The responsibility rested with them and not the railway.

Mr. Nelson, of the district freight office of the Grand Trunk, through which department all import business is handled, stated that the company had received no complaints from consignees about not receiving goods in time from the Jacona. He added that delay might be caused by the different routing of the freight, some being forwarded by one line of railway, some by another, while other goods were transported by water. Of course, if a bill of lading was dated Montreal, November 5th and the goods did not reach Toronto until the 20th or 22nd, that was far too long. Imports placed on board the G.T.R. cars in Montreal were invariably in Toronto within a day and a half. If there was any detention in receiving or handling goods from the Mediterranean steamer it was not the fault or oversight of the G.T.R. Where the blame lay could not be definitely stated without full inquiry. Mr. Nelson thought that complaints as to delayed freight were rather the exception than the rule and intimated that portions of consignments were now and then bound to be overlooked if there was a great rush and crush as there would be on the occasion of the last boat.

The delay, considered from what can be learned locally, seems to be due either to undue haste in unloading the cargoes from the late boats or to inadequate facilities for handling the goods at the dock. It is understood that steps are being taken locally to attempt to remedy the matter.

GETTING AFTER HOTELS.

A circular is being sent out by the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association to its members asking them to report in writing to the board of management any suggestions whereby the hotels of the country can be improved in the way of rooms, board, sanitary arrangements, sample rooms or excessive charges. This is a fine idea. There are numerous hotels in Canada that are first-class in every way. The traveler appreciates these—and patronizes them. But there are many hostleries that do not at all satisfy—far from it, and frequently, there being but one hotel in the place, the knight of the grip is forced to put up with serious inconveniences and discomforts. The executive of the association plan to co-operate with the hotelmen.

The Touring Club, of France, if the writer mistakes not, approached the owners of hotels in that country giving unsatisfactory accommodation, or against whom travelers made complaint, and, getting together, between the hotel proprietors and the club, difficulties were smoothed over. Considering the fact that the commercial traveler is the most steadfast patron of the hotel, his comfort and convenience should be ensured at all times. The commercial man is quick to appreciate such efforts as are made in this direction, and no better advertisement for a good hotel could be paid for than the free publicity given good hotels by the pleased "drummers."

14 TONS HONEY---ONE YEAR'S SALES

Excellent Profits Realized Through Ed ucating the Customers and Teaching the Food Value of the Product—A ttention Should be Given to Stimulating the Demand.

By a Retired Retail Grocer.

There is perhaps no article of food so little understood by the consuming public as honey. The beekeepers hold their annual conventions to discuss and arrive at the best methods of bee culture, and how to produce more and the best quality of honey, but they always seem to be overlooking a very important part of the work which requires special attention, that is, to develop the industry to the standard it ought to occupy in this country and to increase consumption, something which might very readily be done.

Bee culture is considered of such importance that the Government makes a yearly grant to the association, and in other respects assists the beekeepers in the development of this industry. It is only just, therefore, for the people to expect that good work will be done in the interests of the general public. It does not matter how excellent an article is produced. Unless a demand is created for such an article the main object of its production is lost. All kinds of goods are produced to be used, and unless the people understand their value they will not use them. This is particularly so with honey. The way honey is done up and offered for sale in our stores is in itself misleading, and instead of being looked upon as a common, everyday, useful and wholesome article of food, it is regarded as an article to be bought in a five or ten-cent bottle as a medicine for colds.

Food Value of Honey.

Comparatively few people know the food value of honey and know how to eat it. It may seem almost ridiculous to undertake to tell people how to eat but I speak from experience when I say that very few know how to eat honey. Even the wisest man, Solomon of old, told his people to eat honey, but only a little at a time.

One pound of honey contains as much nutriment as five pounds of beef, and some people if they don't know any better, especially children, will eat at one time as much honey as would be equal to about two pounds of beef, and as a natural consequence bad effects will follow and the honey gets the blame.

Sold 14 Tons in a Year.

The writer has had a unique experience in selling honey and knows whereof he speaks. For several years he kept a store in Toronto, where he sold nothing but butter, eggs, cheese and honey, and devoted his whole time and energy to the sale of these four articles. When I first started to sell honey customers would invariably say "Oh, yes, I know honey is good for a cold" and would never think of buying more than five or ten cents worth at a time, and our sales were about 200 pounds the first year. By constantly talking the value of honey as a food, its wholesomeness and its cheapness compared with preserves and other foods, and never forgetting to tell them to eat only a little at a time, our sales increased to 14 tons in one year.

Here is a lesson for beekeepers as well as the Government and the people in general. There is a wealth of millions in honey in the flowers and blossoms right before our eyes, which with proper management and wise expenditure of the money granted by the Government, could be harvested and become as common on our tables as butter. Instead of the poor people buying poor butter for their children, through the education I gave them they began buying five and ten-pound pails of honey and their children were growing fat on bread and honey.

Instead of beekeepers discussing how to get the highest price for their honey I would say spend the Government grant in advertising the value of honey as a food, and thereby increase the demand.

BRANTFORD CORRESPONDENCE.

Nov. 24.—One of the best and most enthusiastic meetings of the Brantford Grocers' and Butchers' Association was held in their hall on Tuesday evening. At the last meeting it was decided to change the programme for the next meeting and have the clerks meet with the employers. That the clerks appreciate this invitation was shown by the large number who were present, they also helped to contribute no small part of the programme. After the business of the association was transacted the following programme was given: President's Address, Arthur Coulbeck; Instrumental, R. Davies; Recitation, Harry Gowman; Debate, "Resolved, That lady clerks are preferable to men clerks." The speakers who took part —in the affirmative were employers— H. Foulds, Phil. Truss, Fred Corey; those who took the negative were clerks —J. Laing, D. D. Butler and S. Pilling. After due deliberation of the many points, many of which will prove profitable to all, the judges, F. C. Harp, W. Hastings and E. Wall, gave the decision in favor of the negative.

N. Hastings, who a short time ago came to this city from Galt and is at present with the J. Forde Co., of this city, gave a most interesting address on the Display of Fruits, a timely topic for this season of the year, also a number of good suggestions were given in regard to putting up fruits, nuts, fancy raisins and candies in fancy baskets and boxes for the Christmas trade, something which sells readily and, at a better profit than is usually made in the regular way. Further programme consisted of Instrumental, Harry Briscoe; Comic Song, H. Gowman; Reading, H. Briscoe. The grocers showed that they were interested in the clerks' advancement by donating the sum of $25 and appointed a committee to purchase books for a library. They also made a donation of $25 to the Children's Shelter. Refreshments were served at the close of the programme.

Bert Burns met with a painful accident last week, a knife slipped cutting the cords of the thumb, making it necessary to go through the painful operation of having the cords spliced.

Ed. Church who recently disposed of his grocery business, has started in the commission business, having secured the agency for this city for a number of firms.

R. Cusden has taken charge of the Brantford Co-Operative Association's grocery store.

From time to time we have seen in The Grocer discussions in regard to a grocer's flower department and how several city stores have recently gone more or less extensively into the supplying of floral decorations, plants, etc. C. W. Grantham is the first grocer in this city to try the experiment and he states that trade in that line is rapidly increasing and he is greatly pleased at the results thus far. Mr. Grantham also imports and sells a number of canary birds, called German rollers, and has them at prices ranging as high as $25 per pair.

Ald. Jas. Burns, the Dalhousie St. grocer, will again be candidate for Ward 3 at the coming municipal elections.

FROM EDITOR TO SALES MANAGER

W. S. B. Armstrong, who until about a year ago occupied the chief editorial chair on The Canadian Grocer and who has since been devoting his attention to the Pioneer, the organ of the Dominion Alliance, has taken the position of sales manager for the Ontario branch of Red Rose Tea and will commence his new work on Dec. 1st. Mr. Armstrong is known in Toronto as a thorough newspaper man and his genial disposition secured him many friends in the trade during the time of his connection with The Grocer, and will no doubt be of material assistance in the new position. Whatever he knows about tea he picked up during his connection with The Grocer and during his calls on the trade. Probably the impression he made then paved the way for the present appointment. Anyway, he should do well in directing the work of the excellent lot of boys selling Red Rose in Ontario. The Grocer wishes him every success.

F. F. Pearson, Carman, Man., has sold out to T. B. Kingsford, who has already taken possession. Mr. Kingsford will handle only crockery and groceries, and is now disposing of the dry goods stock.

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, Nov. 26, 1908.

POINTERS—
Dried Fruits—Firmer.
Provisions—Easier.
Butter—Still firm.
Fish—Easier.
Eggs—Firm; good demand.

The chief event of the week in business circles, has been the closing of the port to ocean steamers. The usual activity which this event imparts to business in general was felt this season. While this condition is not remarkable for its size, it is a welcome influence, however small. A steady improvement in the tone of trade which set in some time ago, continues, and presents every prospect of proceeding along slow, perhaps, but healthy lines. Fish is arriving freely, which has led to small declines in some lines, and a general feeling of easiness. The poultry trade is fairly quiet after Thanksgiving, but will soon brighten up for the approaching holiday season.

Good clover honey is selling well and receipts are not heavy. Other lines are going freely and are in ample supply. Free offering characterizes the bean market. Provisions, although short in some lines, are easier this week. No changes of any moment have taken place in the other markets during the week.

SUGAR—Powdered sugar is receiving special attention just at this moment, owing to the Christmas activity of the confectionery and bakery trade. Other lines are quiet. The sugar market is decidedly apathetic and the presence of many and diverse conditions render any speculation with regard to the future of little value.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Canned fruits, vegetables and fish are meeting with a good sale. Sardines are in particularly good demand. Canned meats are, if anything, a little neglected in comparison with other lines.

TORONTO—The sale of fruits and vegetables continues to be surprisingly good. Canned fish are also in fairly good demand, owing to the continuance of the mild weather. There is some indication of tomatoes being offered at very close prices, but this is said to be by some of the smaller packers.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, November 26, 1908.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Steady.
Nuts—New walnuts in.
Canned Goods—Moving well.
Raisins—Valencias selling cheaply.
Collections—Improving.

The wholesale markets continue on about the same basis as last week, with a good deal of activity evident and an excellent tone pervading the whole situation. With Christmas only a month off of course a great deal of the buying for the holiday season is being done and this as well as the regular staple demand helps to keep business active.

There are few new features to report this week and the markets remain generally steady. Shipments of new raisins and currants continue to arrive and new walnuts coming in during the week made the supply pretty complete. All staple lines remain steady.

SUGAR—The markets, both raw and refined, are remarkably steady, with no prospects of immediate change in any direction. European beet markets present no new features and reports on crops are favorable, both in Europe and Cuba. The present visible supply is 1,968,378 tons as against 1,849,029 tons at the same period last year.

TEA—The local market continues quiet with practically all lines held firmly. This is particularly noticeable in Ceylons and Indians. Some rather belated shipments of Japans arrived a couple of days ago will supply earlier orders and keep that market quiet also for some time. Kearley & Tongue's report for November, just to hand, shows an increase in the imports of Chinas, as follows:—"The total stock of tea in London at last shows a marked increase on the previous year's figures, but this is mainly due to the fact that China tea amounts to no less than 4½ millions more than last year at the same period. The figures of Ceylon tea remain practically on last year's basis, but Indian tea shows a decided increase as regards imports, particularly during the month of October. Prices generally are on a very safe basis."

COFFEE—There seems to be a little better demand the last week or so, probably as a result of holiday demand. Markets, both local and abroad, show very little change this week.

Regarding conditions in Sao Paulo, it is reported that the question of the state loan is before the Federal Congress to receive the guarantee to enable bankers to take up the loan and carry on the propaganda.

DRIED FRUITS — Shipments of raisins, currants, figs and dates continue to arrive daily. Some of these goods are already sold and are passing out briskly. General demand is good. Valencias continue to be sold very cheaply and some houses are quoting 5 cents and even below on first class stock. Currants are held more firmly.

"DADDY" MAY JOINS THE BENEDICTS.

W. W. May, one of the traveling staff of R. S. McIndoe, Toronto, who sells Bovril in Toronto and western Ontario, was happily married on Thursday, Nov. 19, to Miss Ida Zilliax, of College St. The ceremony was performed at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Manning Avenue. "Daddy," as Mr. May is familiarly called by his friends in Toronto, is very familiarly known to the trade in the city. He is also a familiar figure in athletic circles. He has been a member of the grocery brokers' hockey team since its organization, and last year was outside wing for the champion Tammany Tiger Rugby team.

After the ceremony the young couple left for a ten days' trip to New York and the eastern States. On their return they will reside at 194 Delaware Avenue, Toronto.

A VISIT TO CALEDONIA SPRINGS.

The winter opening of the hotel at Caledonia Springs, near Ottawa, was fittingly celebrated last Saturday and Sunday, when the new manager, Charlie Cole, and Geo. Ham, of the C.P.R., very pleasantly entertained a party of about twenty newspaper men from Montreal and Ottawa at the Springs.

On Sunday Mr. Cole took the party on a tour of inspection, which lasted two or three hours. This included a visit to the bottling plant, the dairy, the splendid stock stables, where fine bred cattle worth $300 each were to be seen; also the hen farm, where various kinds of poultry, including pigeons and ducks, were in stock, cultivating for the menu of the hotel tables. The greatest interest was taken in the bottling plant, which was built at a cost of $85,000. Mr. Cole explained, as a man who had been formerly exployed at the Poland Springs water works, in United States, that a bottling plant could be built for $3,000, but not like this one, simply because the protection from bacteria had to enter into the work so strongly that to get the best machines and the proper glass and silver vessels and all the accessories of hygiene, money had to be spent.

Sunday afternoon Mr. Cole showed again his many-sided nature, when he drove the party himself in a four-in-hand to Vankleek Hill. The party took the evening trains each to their homes with memories of a land "where nobody goes home," which are as unfading as the sky. The hotel used to be closed in the winter. Now that has been all changed. Skating rinks and toboggan slides will be the charm potent in other places and why not here? They have the food, the comfort, the springs and all that is necessary is to make it known to get a large number of visitors there all the time this winter and every winter. The baths from this spring water are in conjunction with the hotel, and their benefits are known all over Canada. The water has recently passed the test of the pure food laws of United States, and this was a delight to Mr. Cole. Canadians may get the water on any part of the continent and in the Old World. A booklet of great interest and value will be sent to any enquirer. The grocers of the land will find information of interest to them by writing for this booklet. The water can be shipped in any climate.

HAMILTON CORRESPONDENCE.

November 24.—The grocery trade here all seem pleased at the way business has picked up lately and this applies specially to those in the factory district where all the grocers are hustling for more help.

Two of our veteran grocers, who are also great sportsmen, have just returned from Muskoka, where they went loaded for bear, and sure enough they brought bruin home with them. Adam Ballentine and Geo. Caine are the successful nimrods, their party having bagged all kinds of game—one bear, several deer, minx, and other animals. They claim this the best season ever.

H. N. Kittson, of W. H. Gillard & Co., wholesale grocers, met with a distressing accident recently while driving his speedy horse. The animal bolted, drawing Mr. Kittson over the dashboard and on to the pavement. Fortunately his worst injury is a broken nose, which, while very painful, is not necessarily serious. His friends are offering him congratulations on his narrow escape from serious injury.

The Grocers' Association are still hammering away at the pedler question and while all agree that nothing permanent can be done until the Ontario Legislature amends the act so it will be entirely plain to a police magistrate or justice of the peace what their jurisdiction in the case may be. In the meantime discussion does no harm and the grocers are pledging the aldermanic candidates to exert themselves in favor of a by-law that will protect the taxpayer in the matter.

H. C. Beckett, ex-president of the Dominion Grocers' Guild, has kindly consented to address the Grocers' Association at an early date. This will be a great treat for the Hamilton grocers and one which they thoroughly appreciate.

A PROMINENT MANUFACTURER.

One of Montreal's younger and more energetic business men, and one of the city's best politicians, is president of the recently reorganized Caledonian Biscuit & Confectionery Company, in the person of Ald. J. G. Duquette.

Only thirty-nine years of age, Mr. Duquette has still the best part of his life before him, yet he need not utilize the next twenty years in strenuous endeavors to establish a reputation for business worth and "get there" qualities, for he has already proved his capabilities.

He claims Lachine as a birth-place, and there his first rudiments of learning were attained. He finished off his education in Montreal, and secured employment with the old Montreal Roofing Company. Ten years of faithful service with this concern taught him the roofing business, and at the age of 28, in partnership with a fellow-worker, he put out his own shingle (not a pun) "Bissonette & Duquette, general roofers."

ALD. J. G. DUQUETTE.

He has been quite successful in this business, and he is likely to be equally so in his new undertaking. He has associated with him Ald. N. Seguina, retail grocer of experience, besides L. A. Taillon, as manager of the biscuit company.

His active political career covers a period of four years. He was nominated for alderman to represent St. Denis ward in the city council in 1904, and went in by a good majority. He was returned by acclamation in 1906, and in 1908 defeated his opponent, so that he will hold office for the next two years.

He is a valued member of the Chambre de Commerce and is prominent in all the local French-Canadian societies.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Nov. 24.—Foster's predicted storm of the 16th did not come this way and the West has been basking in almost summer hear. The light snowfall is a thing of the past, and blue skies and bright sunshine have very effectively put the thought of coal and furs out of the minds of should-be purchasers. This is affecting the coal, clothing and fur trades materially, but on the other hand it has given a very great impetus to building and this week the foundation for one of the largest apartment blocks yet erected was begun and it is fully expected to have the foundation completed this fall, and everything in readiness for the steel superstructure next spring. The block will cost between $150,000 and $175,000, and is the fourth apartment block of approximately the same cost to be erected this year. The site chosen is one of the few vacant corners in Winnipeg's most fashionable suburb, Fort Rouge, and is a further indication, if any were needed, of the steady way in which capital is seeking investment in Winnipeg.

A great many large buildings have reached the stage of inside finishing and there will be a greater amount of all-winter work for carpenters, plasterers and painters than was the case last year, and there will be a corresponding increase in the trade in wood finishings, small hardware and paints.

Another thing that looks well for the employment of labor this winter, is the provision being made by lumber contractors for supplies for winter camps and the fact that already gangs are being made up for the woods. During the past week a number of men have been employed and sent out to the woods, and though the men who are doing the hiring are probably rather more particular as to what class of men they take than was the case two years ago, still there has been a fair demand for good, able-bodied men for the woods.

There has been some complaint that employment agents show a preference for Galicians over English-speaking men who apply, and a further inquiry seems to indicate that there is something in the complaint.

Employment agents would not admit it, of course, but it is just possible that it is easier and cheaper to feed the foreigner than it is the native-born, and if so, a camp composed of these men would be a cheaper camp to run than where the nationalities were mixed. I would not like to be taken as saying definitely that there is a discrimination against English-speaking men in favor of these husky foreigners, but there are certainly signs pointing that way. Possibly working on the theory that heavy snow usually follows a winter of exceptionally light snowfall, such as we had last year, contractors seem to be laying plans for a big winter in the bush. Tie camps especially will be busy this winter as the demand is very good.

Exceptionally keen interest is being taken in the civic contest here, which will be determined on December the 8th. Controller Evans, who in conjunction with Mayor Ashdown, has worked so strenuously, and with such conspicuous success to improve the condition of the city finances, is a candidate for mayor, and he has for opposition Alderman Manning, who has systematically opposed the efforts of these men in the direction of improved finances. He is also the father of a scheme for the city to buy out the present street railway company and their power plant. The third candidate is C. H. Forrester, a man with absolutely no civic experience. W. Sanford Evans, who is not unknown in eastern Canada, is a man of good business ability and also of culture and refinement and an able speaker. It is felt by all who know him that a better choice could not be made for mayor, more particularly in view of the fact that the British Association will be guests of the city next summer. In Mr. Evans the city will have at once a man who may be trusted to do the wise and the right thing in regard to finances, and at the same time will represent the city with infinite credit, not only with those who may visit the city, but wherever he may go abroad as the city's chief magistrate.

The grain movement continues to be one of the striking points of the West. Not the most sanguine advocates of the double-tracking from Winnipeg to Fort William anticipated that it would make such a difference in the amount of wheat moved. It is not yet complete, but over 240 miles of it have been in commission since October 10, and the increase in car movement has been quite surprising. Up to November 18th, 39,322 cars of grain of all kinds had passed Winnipeg out of the present crop, and of this 34,816,950 bushels were wheat. The details of this movement are rather interesting.

Reports made on the 18th indicate that there had been inspected in Winnipeg from this year's crop in the yards of the Canadian Pacific 22,858 cars of grain. This was distributed as follows: Wheat, 20,156 ; oats, 1,524 ; barley, 723 ; flax, 455 ; total, 22,858. At Calgary there have been inspected to date 1,048 cars, as follows : Wheat, 604 ; oats, 401 ; barley, 41 ; flax, 2 ; total, 1,048. In the yards of the Canadian Northern in Winnipeg there have been inspected to date 11,574 cars of grain, as follows : Wheat, 9,843 ; oats, 963 ; barley, 728 ; flax, 40 ; total, 11,574. For the Grand Trunk Pacific there have been inspected in Winnipeg 761 cars, as follows : Wheat, 664 ; oats, 71 ; barley, 20; flax, 6 ; total, 761. At Duluth there have been inspected of Canadian grain of this year's crop 2,080 cars, as follows : Wheat, 1,902 ; oats, 42 ; barley, 107 ; flax, 29 ; total, 2,080 cars.

From this it will be seen that the C. P.R. carried 23,896 of the total of 39,-322 cars. Another interesting feature is the amount coming in off the G.T.P. and the amount going to Duluth via the Great Northern. The movement past Winnipeg has averaged half a million a day for the past week.

The market has been a very steady one and for the latter part of the week an active one, with an increased shipment to Buffalo. One of the features of the week has been the runaway market in flax. The price went up by leaps and bounds, May flax selling at $1.29, and November at $1.25, and these prices were cheap compared to Duluth, where November flax sold as high as $1.45. There is no doubt that the damage to Argentine flax by frost set the ball rolling, but there has been some manipulation as well. The crop of the Canadian West is not a heavy one this year, but the quality is unusually good. The big oil companies have been heavy buyers this past week.

The outward shipment of grain from the head of the lakes has been so large and stocks have been kept so well down in proportion to the amount going in that it is not likely that there will be the usual wild scramble to get boats out at the last moment, as has prevailed in former years. The absence of ore hauling at Duluth has set free a very large number of boats for the wheat trade, which are not usually available. This has another advantage to the wheat shipper, the keen competition has prevented the usual advance in grain rates as the close of open water is approached.

The movement of cattle has been almost as remarkable as that of the wheat, over 23,700 head passing the Winnipeg yards in three weeks, and 9,-079 in one week. The fine weather has kept the pasturage good on the ranges and anything fit for export has been very good indeed. There has, however, been an undue shipment of young and small stuff that needed another year on the range. The close of November will practically see the end of the cattle-shipping season, not that there are no cattle whom their owners desire to sell, but owing to there being no further ocean space available.

Fully 90 per cent. of all cattle reaching Winnipeg come in over the C.P.R. and all cattle leaving Winnipeg for Montreal go out over the C.P.R. In the three weeks just mentioned over 1,200 cars owned by that company were employed in the cattle trade west of Winnipeg, and 900 cars were used for hauling cattle east of Winnipeg.

The situation in the West continues very satisfactory and the movement in money steadily improves.—H.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, November 26, 1908.)

POINTERS—

Canned Peas—Prices vary.
Syrups—Competition forcing reduction.
Beans—Declining.
Almonds—Reduced.
Cheese—Advanced.
Butter—Market firmer.

Christmas trade is in full swing at all the wholesale houses and a strong demand is reported for high-grade Christmas and holiday supplies. General business continues to show a marked improvement. Money is circulating pretty freely as the farmers have got returns for most of their grain and country merchants have been looking after collections pretty sharply.

One or two houses have made an attempt to advance the price of canned peas as supplies are reported short. Others are, however, still selling at the reduced prices established a few weeks ago and there is little indication of a settlement of the canned goods war. Competition has forced a reduction in corn syrups and it is difficult to enote with any certainty of accuracy.

SUGAR—The sugar market is quieter now than for some little time past but, in view of recent experiences, fluctuations need excite no surprise. Quotations continue as follows:

OPPORTUNITIES IN CONFECTIONERY.

The approaching Christmas season is one which stimulates most grocers to pay a little extra attention to their confectionery departments. And this is very advisable. There is no reason why the confectionery store around the corner should gather in the big share of this business. The grocer should make a study of the wants of his customers and lay in a number of lines, though not too many, to meet the demand. While a certain amount of low-priced candy is necessary in most stores, the attention of customers should be directed as far as possible to the better lines. Many grocers do a splendid business every year in high-class box goods which they advertise and talk up a few weeks before the holiday season. There is good money in this if handled rightly.

Confectionery manufacturers report an excellent demand for their products this year, particularly of the higher grades of goods. The decline on cocoa during the year has caused a slight drop in chocolates and these should be more in evidence than ever. Though the past several months have been a little hard on the confectionery trade, the present holiday season, now that money is freer, promises to be exceptionally good. It is up to the grocer to take advantage of this.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Reading notices under this heading will be accepted at 10 cents per agate line.

Joseph Brown & Sons, 29 Youville Square, Montreal, have recently added to their business all leading lines of nuts, as well as lemons, oranges, grape fruit, Malaga grapes, and similar goods. This firm is known all over Canada as a banana importing concern, and the departure from "bananas only" is the result of frequent requests from their customers that they supply them with their wants in other fruits, and nuts.

Baker's cocoas and chocolates are being offered by W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, at very interesting prices. See their advertisement in this issue.—Advt.

Winnipeg Stores Are Getting on a Christmas Appearance—Grocers Interested in Elections—Herring Run Started at Vancouver Island.

VANCOUVER.

November 21.—New nuts and raisins from California are in for the Christmas trade. The California walnut has almost the monopoly in this market for the big holiday trade, because the Grenoble does not arrive from France until close on to Christmas or after. Both last year and the year before it was after the holiday before they got here. They are the cheaper nut, still the California is a good article. Almonds from the south are selling at 15c to the retailer.

Raisins come from California in 12 and 16-ounce packages, jobbing at 8¼c to 8½c and 9½c respectively. The 16-oz. brand is the best for trade, as it can go at two for a quarter, while the other has hardly enough margin to allow three for a quarter. Raisins also come from California in one-pound packages done up in cartons with isinglass fronts. These are compared to the Solitas brand of Muscatels from Spain in loose tissue paper parcels. These latter job at 18½c.

The higher prices of eggs come a little sooner this year than they did last. D. E. Mackenzie, clerk of the market at New Westminster, who keeps a record, points out that they were quoted last week at 50c wholesale and 55c retail, which is 5c higher than the corresponding period of last year, and from 10c to 12c dearer than in Alberta, while in Seattle the wholesale price is about 47c. Most of the dairy butters are selling at 40c, and the creameries at 45c, with prices in the market at 40c. In November last year, the figure was 5c lower. Yet, this year the weather is much warmer than a year ago. The winter all through a year ago was mild, but since the first of the present month very warm waves have swept over the province. These bring rains to be sure, but not by any means cold. It may mean that eggs may slump, but cold storage sets aside the effects of temperature. Although eggs and butter may be higher than in other parts of Canada, the general average of living is not higher in British Columbia than in other western sections.

The Co-operative Society at New Westminster is now looking up a site for a store. The selection will be made in a few days, and construction will likely start within a short time.

Another new fishing enterprise is spoken of for northern waters, so that the market in this line should be well supplied. The trade in the east is counted on for such fish as halibut, cod, etc.

A visitor this week was Stanley Scearce, the mercantile prince of Dawson, who states that business conditions in the Yukon are all that could be desired, and that the outlook is favorable in every way. He brought his wife out with him, as well as his automobile, and is on his way to California, where they will spend the winter.

The herring run has started on the east coast of Vancouver Island, and fishermen are busy at Nanaimo. The herring this year are reported to be of exceptionally good quality and size. It is expected that 500 men will be actively engaged in the catching and curing.

WINNIPEG.

November 23.—Winnipeg grocery stores have a bright air of Christmas cheer about them now and the holiday business is getting well under way. Several stores have particularly attractive window and interior displays of fruits and nuts which find their readiest sale when the housewife is thinking of holiday menus. Some of the best window displays are those of the W. H. Stone Co., E. B. Nixon, A. Hendry, A. R. Christie, Robinson & Co., and the T. Eaton Co. Since the enlarging of their store by the crowding out of two or three other stores adjoining them, Robinson's have more window space on Main St., and grocery displays are seen in their Main Street windows for the first time.

A. R. Christie has moved from Main Street to Portage Avenue, adding one more to the number of Winnipeg merchants who have made similar moves. Mr. Christie is one of the long-established Winnipeg grocers and he has always had a choice line of customers. If his experience is anything like that of A. Hendry, he should find a big increase in his business as a result of his move to the leading retail street, where he is closer to most of his best customers.

Cold weather and snow would be welcomed by all the Winnipeg retailers. Just now the thermometer is hovering around the fifties and business is suffering somewhat from the unseasonable weather. Thanksgiving day brought snow and cold weather which lasted long enough to give business a welcome boost but the return to mild and sloppy weather has been responsible for a slight reaction.

Dealers in Winnipeg and throughout Manitoba are very much interested in the agitation over the quality of coal oil which has been sold recently and which has been responsible for one terrible tragedy in Swan Lake, as well as many minor accidents in city and country. No one blames the retailers, as they could have no object to serve in adulterating the coal oil they sell with gasolene, which costs more than coal oil; and although the evidence points to the conclusion that all the coal oil about which complaint is made came from one oil company, about the same time, no one seriously entertains the belief that that company deliberately adulterated its oil. The situation is serious, and every one hopes that the authorities will conduct a thorough investigation, which will lead to the discovery of the guilty or criminally careless persons who are responsible for the trouble.

Winnipeg retailers are interested in the approaching civic elections, as all good citizens should be. Perhaps, because of what they believe to be an injustice in the levying of the business tax, and for other reasons, they are more interested than others in the selection of a good mayor and good controllers and aldermen. If so, they are more interested than other citizens, because as property owners and business men they have more at stake than others. But their vote is not to be delivered in a block by any interested party who may think that by virtue of a position which he holds, his influence with them is worth something. Consequently, at least, one candidate for mayor was well advised in turning down hard a bumptious individual of that sort, who pretends to hold the retail vote of Winnipeg in the hollow of his hand.

Quebec and the Maritime Provinces

Several Business Changes in Montreal—Large Shipments of Apples to British Markets—The Markets of Nova Scotia.

MONTREAL.

Nov. 24.—D. T. Carter, representing Liptons in the Province of Quebec, leaves on the 29th for a trip to Quebec and the towns of the Lower St. Lawrence in the interests of his firm.

An interesting window display may be seen at Morgans' Departmental Store this week. This consists of a wooden kitchen cabinet, having numerous electric switches. This cabinet contains the usual places for groceries, and kitchen supplies, and the cooking of these things is done on the broad shelf of the cabinet, without the intervention of a stove. All the pots and pans used have short legs, which elevate the bottoms of the dishes free from the wood of the cabinet, and are connected with electric current. In this way the warming surfaces of the dishes are rendered sufficiently hot to cook by, and the disagreeable feature of standing over a hot stove is eliminated.

H. G. Bauld, of Bauld Bros., Halifax, was in town for a few days last week.

A. H. Brittain & Co., agents for "Allredie" plum pudding, are conducting a demonstration this week of their goods at the Mount Royal Departmental Store, Mount Royal Ave.

J. W. Roscoe, wholesale and retail grocer, of Liverpool, Eng., was a visitor to this city for a few days last week. He is making an extensive tour of Canada, traveling for the benefit of his health. Mr. Roscoe, during a discussion of conditions in England and Canada, stated that the glowing stories of the great possibilities which he heard of Canada at the Franco-British Exhibition had influenced his decision in coming to Canada.

D. G. Whidden, of the Sweet Milk Condensing Co., Laurentide, Que., was in town for a few days last week.

J. H. Davis, representing Beaver Oats, has returned from a hunting trip in the Laurentians. He secured a good bag and among other things, got a deer and a fine hawk, which he has had mounted.

Sperdakos Bros., retail fruits and confectionery, 453 Notre Dame west and 98 St. Lawrence Boulevard, have opened a new store at 628 St. Catherine St. east, which is a credit to them.

Mrs. Edgar Judge, wife of Edgar Judge, grain exporter, Board of Trade Building, died suddenly Wednesday morning.

S. Carsley, head of the firm of S. Carsley Company, died suddenly Friday evening at 9 o'clock, Nov. 20. The previous Tuesday Mr. Carsley sustained slight injuries as the result of a carriage accident but it was thought by his medical adviser that these were of an inconsequential nature. Up till Friday afternoon he had been making satisfactory progress toward recovery when suddenly his condition became worse and he passed away at 9 o'clock in his 72nd year. Mr. Carsley's death will be felt as a distinct loss to the community in general, being prominent in philanthropic as well as business circles. One of the chief features of the Carsley store was the grocery department which they had developed to a superior degree. The deceased gentleman is survived by a widow and five children, among which are W. F. Carsley, president of the S. Carsley Company; Samuel Carsley, vice-president of the same company; John Gibb Carsley, also associated with the company, and Cecil L. Carsley, of Edmonton. The funeral was held from his late residence 507 Guy St., to Christ Church Cathedral, thence to Mount Royal Cemetery.

ST. JOHN.

Nov. 23.—Several changes have been recorded in the local market during the past week and the tendency seems to be for higher prices. Ontario flour has advanced 10c, the wholesale price now being $5.60 to $5.70. The quotation for Manitoba's is unchanged. Oatmeal is firm and an advance is looked for any day. Molasses is also firmer and another cent per gallon will probably be added very shortly. Sugar remains at $4.60, the last change being a decline of 10c per hundred pounds on the 6th.

New fruits are coming in every day now. Large shipments of raisins from Spain and California have been received. Butter and eggs remain firm and prices are high.

Energetic efforts are being made by St. John business men to secure the Dominion grant of $50,000 for an exhibition here in 1909. The common council has appointed a special committee to act with the Board of Trade and the Exhibition Association in urging upon the Government St. John's claims. At the annual meeting of the directors of the Exhibition Association last week, A. O. Skinner was re-elected president and in a discussion on the question of securing the Dominion grant it was decided to make every effort to secure it for St. John.

Humbert, Aulton & Co., of Baie Verte, have made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors. It is understood that the firm's liabilities are not greatly in excess of their assets.

The winterport season of 1908-09 was opened on Saturday, Nov. 21, when the C.P.R. steamer Empress of Britain arrived in port with a good passenger list and a large general cargo. Grain has been pouring in here every day and there are now about half a million bushels stored in the elevators. D. McNicoll, first vice-president and general manager of the C.P.R. was in the city last week inspecting the harbor facilities.

The season of 1908 on the St. John River was practically closed last week and the majority of the steamers have laid up for the winter. Shipments of produce from up-river points have been very heavy lately, the farmers apparently trying to get their goods to market before the close of navigation.

Mr. Wakeford, of Hamilton, Ont., has accepted the position of manager of J. D. Irving's flour mill at Buctouche in place of the former manager, Geo. A. Wicks who has gone to Fort William.

The big cold storage warehouse here is well stocked with foodstuffs of various kinds. There are upwards of 60,000 barrels of apples and about 5,000 boxes of apples, the latter from Ontario. Large quantities of fresh meats, beef, lamb, pork and poultry, are stored, there being 10,000 lambs and sheep alone, as well as several carloads each of the other products. About 5,000 chests of tea are also stored in the big building. There are some 4,000 barrels of dried fish, all local goods, and principally for local consumption or for supplying the province. There are also 5,000 bundles of finnan haddies and 10,000 boxes of the same fish. The building which contains also a considerable quantity of butter and eggs as well as other goods, is pretty well taxed to its capacity.

Edwin L. Perkins, general storekeeper at Norton, King's County, has assigned to W. H. Harrison, St. John. Mr. Perkins recently sold out his belongings and paid most of his creditors so that now only the back debts remain. His assets are estimated at $260 and liabilities at $2,400 to $2,600. An offer of 10 per cent. has been made and a number of creditors have expressed a willingness to accept the compromise.

James E. Hogan, who at one time, in company with his brother, conducted an extensive grocery and pork packing business in the North End, died in his home, Main St., on Wednesday, Nov. 18, aged seventy-seven years. He was a native of Petersville, Queen's County. During his long business career in this city, he had borne an enviable reputation for upright dealing. Mr. Hogan is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Callagher and Mrs. Philip Grannan of this city.

Thomas Magee, one of the oldest residents of Port Elgin, Albert County, and known as a grocer and a member of the large fish canning business carried on there, died Nov. 12. Mr. Magee was born in Kiltee, Ireland, in 1827 and came to Canada in 1847, landing at St. John, where he made his home until 1862, when he moved to Baie Verte, where he started business. In 1879 he returned to St. John and interested himself in real estate and stocks, but returned to Port Elgin in 1882, and in 1890 returned again to St. John. In 1899 he went to Port Elgin, where he and his son, Fred, started a business, which is to-day in a flourishing condition. They dealt in all kinds of country produce and went in quite extensively for canning fish, especially lobsters.

W. F. Todd, of St. Stephen, who was elected in the recent Dominion elections M.P. for Charlotte County, New Brunswick, is a partner in the wholesale grocery firm of A. I. Teed Company, St. Stephen. Mr. Todd defeated the former representative for the county, Gilbert W. Ganong, of the firm of Ganong Bros., confectioners and proprietors of the St. Croix Soap Manufacturing Company. Mr. Todd was born in St. Stephen fifty-four years ago and is the youngest son of the late Freeman H. Todd, a pioneer lumberman. In early life he took an active interest in athletic sports and was for some years captain of the old "Resolutes," a famous baseball team that brought much glory to the town. It was Mr. Todd's early intention to enter the legal profession, and with this end in view he attended the law school of Boston University one year, and spent another term in the law school of Harvard College. A commercial career then appealing to him more strongly, he returned from college and entered the copartnership of F. H. Todd & Sons. Retiring from the firm of F. H. Todd & Sons some years ago, Mr. Todd became a partner in the wholesale grocery firm of A. I. Teed Co., and for a time was in charge of its Calais branch. He is still a partner in this firm, though not actively connected with its management. With Hon. G. F. Hill, James Russell and James O'Brien, he was elected to represent Charlotte County in the local legislature, and served one term, from 1900 to 1904 but declined renomination. Of a genial and pleasant personality, Mr. Todd has always enjoyed a large measure of popularity and has entered now upon a field where he can render great service to his native county.

HALIFAX.

November 23.—The grocery business is in fine condition in Halifax, and the wholesale dealers report trade good in all lines. The fine weather has very greatly helped business, vessels arriving and clearing promptly, and shipments have been made without delay. There is an excellent supply of dried fruits on the market this season and prices are reasonable. This season's crop of California prunes is expected here in about a month. Prices on the whole are very steady, and at the present time there is no indication of any great change. Sugar is firm at the following prices: Extra standard, $4.80; No. 1 yellow, $4.10; bright yellow, $4.40; Austrian granulated, $4.50. Packages of California seeded raisins are quoted at 9½c to 10c; evaporated apples at 8c; evaporated peaches, 10½c.

Fresh laid eggs are becoming very scarce and they are now quoted at 28c by the case wholesale. Fresh-laid stock now coming on the market is bought up very quickly. Cold storage eggs are plentiful and are quoted from 23c to 24c.

Prices of butter remain unchanged this week. Winter stock is now coming on the market in small quantities, and it is in good demand. The jobbers find no difficulty in disposing of the stock as soon as it arrives. Creamery is quoted at 30c; dairy in small tubs at 27c, and large tubs at 25c. The butter market has a very strong tendency to advance.

There is an abundant supply of apples on the market, but the stock now offering is of fair quality only. In fact, the market is flooded with No. 3 apples, which sell for about $1.25 per barrel. They are little better than culls, all the choicest fruit being shipped to the English market. There is a good demand for Bishop Pippins, but few are offering for sale. No russets, spies or greenings have been marketed so far. The English apple market is reported to be in excellent condition, and first-class stock is in good demand. A Hants County grower who recently sent some fruit across has received the returns, the apples netting him $3.90 per barrel. It was very choice fruit, principally Kings, large and highly colored. This week about 35,000 barrels of apples were shipped from Halifax to the London market.

The first cargo of bulk fish to be shipped by water to Montreal from Newfoundland was landed at the former port recently by the schooner Australian, which has just returned to North Sydney. This is a new departure in the fish business and the result was most successful. The cargo consisted of one thousand barrels of codfish, valued at six thousand dollars. The success of the venture will be followed by more shipments. The major portion of the schooner's cargo was shipped to other cities in the interior, where a ready market with good prices was found.

The provision business is now at its height and a large quantity of stock is being handled. The wharves are lined with produce-laden vessels. Potatoes are selling at 30c per bushel, and turnips at 25c. On account of the mild weather, the storekeepers are not yet laying in very large stocks.

The market is well supplied with poultry, all native stock. Turkeys are quoted at 20c per pound; geese from $1 to $1.25, and chickens at 15c per pound.

A. N. McDonald has opened up a neat and attractive grocery store at 117 Rockdale Avenue, Sydney, C.B.

Brantford Grocers Buying Library for Clerks—Chatham is Talking Trade Excursions—Stratford Grocers Will Contest Elections—London Has Some Enthusiastic Bowlers.

CHATHAM.

November 24.—To boom Chatham as the centre of the western peninsula by running a series of cheap excursions on all railways from outside points to the Maple City is a scheme now being mooted among the merchants. The enterprise was suggested by the success of a similar scheme at St. Catharines a short time ago. There is every prospect that the project will come before the Board of Trade for their sanction in the near future, and, if undertaken, will be under their auspices. The merchants who are talking the excursion scheme are confident of results. The main object is to counteract a certain tendency on the part of trade to go to Detroit. Chatham has good railway facilities, and if the necessary cheap rates could be secured, excursion day should bring big crowds from miles around into the Maple City. "We have the goods and we have the prices," remarked one grocer, recently, "and we have the railways. Chatham is the natural centre of the western peninsula, and we should be able to draw excursionists from all directions." It will be necessary, of course, for merchants and others to subscribe a few dollars each toward the necessary guarantee to the railways, and to cover the cost of advertising; but from what can be learned here of the St. Catharines excursion, these subscriptions in that city were more than repaid by extra business. Should the first excursion prove anything like a success, it is suggested that similar low rate excursions be run monthly.

REPORT DELAY AT ONCE.

Any subscriber of the Canadian Grocer who finds his paper is not being delivered on time will confer a favor by reporting the matter to this office at once. The management is anxious to be assured that every copy of the paper goes to its readers promptly.

The numbering of the city was completed last week, and new street signs are being put up where necessary. The work has taken a little less than two months—quick work, the credit for which is largely due to the energy with which Ald. John Edmondson, the St. Clair Street butcher, supervised the job. It is unlikely that free mail delivery will be instituted before New Year's. The completion of the numbering is very opportune, however, and should facilitate the delivery of goods during the Christmas rush. Provided merchants impress upon their customers the value of remembering and giving their new numbers when making orders, it will no longer be necessary for the delivery man to call at half a dozen houses with the query, "Does Mr. So and So live here?"

Hog shipments last week were probably the heaviest of any week this year, not only from Chatham, but also from surrounding towns. The price of $6 per cwt. for live hogs brought out practically all the hogs that were ready. J. T. O'Keefe, of the firm of O'Keefe & Drew, last Monday stated that during the week his firm were paying out approximately $30,000 for hogs. Buyers claim that the local price, $6, is 15c a hundred higher than at other Ontario points outside the western peninsula. Dressed hogs bring $7.50. It is expected that after this week the shipments will be much lighter. There is not the same supply of hogs in the country now that there usually is at this time of year. Last fall the farmers sold large numbers of their hogs on account of the scarcity of feed, and the scare caused by the Meat Inspection Act; in addition to which marketing has gone on more actively during the summer months this year than usual. The present supply in consequence is unusually light, and the prices are exceptionally good for this time of year. The abundant supply of feed is leading quite a few farmers to hold their hogs. 286 hogs, weighing 58,610 pounds, passed over the city weigh scales last Wednesday.

Quite an interesting item in grocery advertising was the list of "Washday Needs," featured by the Bradley & Son grocery last week. The list, run in single column space, comprised 16 items, the prices being prominently featured.

V. J. Bosworth, Jr., has severed his connection with the Thornton & Douglas staff at Stratford, and last week returned to Chatham, where he will be associated with his father in the conduct of the latter's grocery business on William Street. Mr. Bosworth, Jr., was with the Thornton & Douglas people for five years.

Sydney Bennett, formerly bookkeeper at E. R. Snook's grocery, and who left last spring for the Pacific coast, is now holding a position in the San Francisco municipal buildings.

Thos. M. French, a prominent apple buyer here, states that this has been on the whole a bad season for the apple buyers. Greenings and snow apples shipped to the Old Country in many cases went bad in transit, owing to hot weather in September and October. Apples shipped to the west, however, arrived in good shape, and there is a good demand for more, which cannot be filled. Many farmers are reported, owing to low prices for hand-picked fruit, to have shaken their apples from the trees and sold to evaporators and canning factories.

M. Macfarlane, of Ridgetown, who recently retired from business, will shortly resume, in the premises formerly occupied by D. J. McLean.

J. W. Dyer's grocery, on St. Clair Street, has received a new coat of paint, considerably brightening the exterior.

Onions are reported to have been a big crop this year, particularly in marshy lands. At Point Pelee, Alister McKay, of this city, harvested 725 sacks of 75 pounds, which, after paying all expenses, yielded a net profit of $192.50 an acre. These marshland onions are reported to be equal in size to Bermudas and superior in flavor.

ST. THOMAS.

Nov. 24.—Both markets were largely attended Saturday and the demand was sufficient to dispose of the plentiful supplies offered. Some excitement was caused on the West or St. Andrew's market owing to the refusal of the stall butchers to pay the increased market fees as raised by No. 4 committee at their last meeting. The butchers offered to pay the old fee of fifty cents but this was refused by the market clerk. It is possible that summons will be issued unless the fees are paid forthwith. As usual, dairy produce was scarce, butter sold at 28c to 30c per lb. and eggs at the same rate per dozen. Only the more staple vegetables were offered, such as turnips, carrots and cabbage and these sold at the usual prices. Potatoes were plentiful and sold at 90c per bag, a little higher than they were last week. Apples of good quality are becoming quite scarce and sold from 20c to 30c per peck. Fowl were in large supply but the price was maintained, chickens, from 30c to 45c each; white geese sold at 90c to $1 each; turkeys, 15c per lb. About 30 tons of fish, principally herring were caught Wednesday evening at Port Stanley and some of this large catch was offered at 7c to 8c per lb. Smoked herring sold at 15c per lb.

Secretary Tom Pearson has received an acknowledgment of the resolution as passed at the last meeting of the R.M.A. and also the copy of Inspector Shaw's report on the lack of action of our police magistrate in enforcing the transient traders and peddlers by-law and Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General, stated that he would give the matter his attention. It is to be hoped that something will be done to remedy this injustice to the tax-paying merchants quickly.

PETERBORO.

Nov. 24.—A new grocery store has been erected at the corner of Reid and Sherbrooke Sts. by H. J. McCannon and purchased by Bert Hunter and will be opened to the public next week. Mr. Hunter has been in the employ of Peter Connal & Son for some time. He has also been engaged in the grocery department of Simpson's store in Toronto. He will carry a complete line of groceries, provisions and confections.

Mrs. John Fowler, wife of the proprietor of the Fowler Restaurant, met with a rather serious accident a few days ago. She was purchasing some meat in Alex. Gordon's meat market when she fell through a trap door into the cellar. One of the employes of the meat market had opened the door a few moments before and she had not seen it. She sustained severe cuts in the head.

The grocers are busy these days laying in the stock for the Christmas trade. They anticipate a splendid season and claim that if it is as good in proportion as the Thanksgiving trade they will be more than satisfied. Christmas cakes are now the order of the day in the culinary departments of the households and the ingredients for these are being disposed of rapidly by the grocers.

Geo. A. Gillespie, of White & Gillespie, grocers, has been in the country this week attending the annual meetings of various cheese factories. Mr. Gillespie was recently re-elected a member of the Board of Eastern Ontario Dairyman's Association as representative of this district. He is the most prominent buyer on the Peterboro Cheese Board, and one of the most widely known men connected with the dairy interests in the country. He is also a buyer on the Lindsay Cheese Board.

TORONTO.

November 25.—The grocers of Toronto are taking an active interest in the affairs of the St. Lawrence market, believing that the building should be used exclusively for market purposes. They also desire the city council to pass a regulation allowing no peddling on the streets until after one o'clock in the afternoon. Such was the decision arrived at when a regular meeting of the Grocers' Section of the Toronto Retail Merchants' Association was held on Monday night. A. B. Griffin, chairman, presided, and the chief business before the gathering was the consideration of the question of the St. Lawrence market. The grocers endorsed the resolution passed at a general meeting of the merchants surrounding the market, and also the general executive board.

A committee was appointed to wait on the council, along with a committee of the Butchers' Section and the general executive.

In effect the resolution of the merchants doing business near the market is that the north end should be kept for market purposes only, and that the structure should not be rented by the city council for any other use. "And further," continues the resolution, "we petition the council for the abrogation of the by-law prohibiting the sale of smaller quantities of produce than a bushel."

The Grocers' Section backed up the merchants and the general executive by declaring that Toronto should have a properly equipped market for market purposes only, and further, that no peddling be allowed in the streets until after one o'clock in the afternoon.

At present farmers can sell produce of all kinds at any hour or in any locality on or off the market, to private families or to grocers. The latter consider too much latitude has been allowed and that peddling should be restricted to the afternoons.

George Coleman, one of the pioneer confectioners and bakers in the city, passed away on Monday in less than an hour after partaking of his breakfast. He was 81 years old and for half a century was in business on the south side of King Street, between York and Bay. He retired some ten years ago.

An action, which may in a measure unfold why the sales of Canadian apples have fallen off in England during the past year or two, was tried before Justice Riddell at the non-jury sittings this week. It is an action which deals with an apple packing case and the plaintiffs are R. S. Lang & Co., of Toronto, commission merchants. The defendants are L. H. Williams & Sons, fruit dealers, of Glasgow, Scotland. Lang & Co. seek to recover the sum of $16,462.22, made up of $6,462.22 claimed as unpaid commissions and $10,000 damages, for the alleged breach of contract. The Scottish company have entered a counter claim for $36,000, made up of $25,000 for loss of profits, $10,000 for breach of contract, and $1,000 for shrinkage in unpacking. Their principal claim is for loss of profits.

At the conclusion of hearing Justice Riddell told the disputants that he thought they could get together and settle the dispute. In the meantime, some of the points have been sent over to the master at Osgoode Hall to decide upon.

The Dominion Co-operative Association will open its first of a series of stores at 964 Bloor Street West, Toronto, on Tuesday, Dec. 1st. The store will carry a full stock of provisions aad groceries. Meetings in behalf of the association are still held in many parts of the city. The attendance has been large and the interest active. On Thursday, Dec. 17, in Broadway Hall, the association will hold a celebration. Mayor Oliver will preside.

GUELPH.

November 24.—Mr. Zieman, the Provincial President of the Retail Merchants' Association, at the association banquet, on the 13th Nov., made some very rash statements, according to a letter published by S. Carter, President of the local Co-operative Association, in the local papers this week, which is causing a good deal of talk among local merchants. These two gentlemen would make an interesting debate for the next meeting and would keep up the interest in the meetings also as usually after the annual banquet is over the attendance drops off until some fresh excitement again attracts attention.

The Guelph Co-operative Association has invited W. L. MacKenzie King, M. P., to attend their annual banquet and to address the members of the association and the citizens generally. Mr. King has taken a stand for co-operation and the members would like to hear his views. We will all be glad to hear Mr. King, even if we do not see eye to eye with him.

"Did you ever sell two tins of Sportsmen Sardines for 25c," was a question I was asked in a local grocery store this week. I could not remember of ever selling that particular brand for less than 15c, and that was some years ago. Well they can be bought right here in Guelph now, I was told. To decide a bet that had been made before I joined the company a man was sent out and came back with the goods at the 2 for 25c. I knew there was a mistake somewhere and on investigating found the grocery store mentioned. It was just the same old story, goods are never marked, but just opened up and put on the shelf to sell at whatever looks reasonable to the seller, which in this case was certainly losing money. When the mistake was noticed you bet for some time at any rate that particular store will have these goods marked. But why wait until the mistake occurs? Why not insist on all goods being marked at once?

Say, Mr. Grocer, what are you going to give your boys for a Christmas box this year? Just the same old box of cigars, an umbrella or pair of braces? Why not make a change and give a year's subscription to the Canadian Grocer, Busy Man's Magazine, or when you have three or four, buy a few technical and scientific books and get the boys to exchange with one another. It will not cost you more than you usually spend and may bring you greater returns in your business. Try it this year.

The many friends in the trade of F. H. & C. Barber, grocers and butchers, will regret to learn of the death of their brother, Ivan, after a lingering illness. He, like the other boys, was always more or less connected with the two stores.

The promised rural mail delivery is now ready and while as yet the stages carry the mail on the Eramosa, Dundas and Dundas roads it is expected that individual delivery will start at once.

Saturday's market was a very small one indeed for this season of the year and prices again went soaring. Eggs were as high as 35c a doz., and butter from 28c to 32c. Fowl also had an upward tendency. Beef was quoted from 5c to 7½c, and lambs from 8c to 12c a lb. The smallness of the market does not appear quite clear, but some of the farmers were taking advantage of the fine weather, while others claim they have not got the stuff to bring in.

Guelph is getting to be a model city, is the latest news from the mayor. He claims that he is constantly receiving letters from outside inquiring how the waterworks, gas and electric light works and street railway are so successful under the city's guidance, and the low tax rate of 14 mills.

Your Chatham correspondent is getting a step in the right direction when he talks of the grocers getting after the druggists and their cigar trade. And what is more, they are allowed to keep open on Sundays and of course they don't sell cigars. One druggist told me Sunday was the only day he sold many cigars.

STRATFORD.

November 24.—There are many rumors afloat that Stratford will have a grocer for mayor next year. It is an understood fact that C. McIlhargey, president and manager of the Stratford Wholesale Grocery, will be in the field. Mr. McIlhargey has been a member of the council for the past five years and during the past year held the position of chairman of finance, a place he filled with much ability, and to use his own expression "if the people vote aright they will have a grocer for mayor." Several other probable candidates have been mentioned, but the one of most interest to the grocery trade is E. K. Barnsdale, although he has not yet publicly announced what he intends doing at the next municipal election. Both these men are veterans in the grocery business of Stratford and have aldermanic honors conferred upon them at different times. They are men with sterling business qualities and would honestly fill any position the people might give them.

W. J. McCully, of the grocery firm of McCully & Haugh, has been pressed by numerous friends to enter the field as candidate for alderman. Mr. McCully, although a young man, would, if elected, make an enthusiastic member of our council.

The market on Saturday was not as large as that of last week, but equally well attended. Fowl was very plentiful and brought the same price as last week; turkeys have improved considerably since Thanksgiving. Eggs were very scarce and dear; whether the industrious farmer is holding them for high prices, or whether the hens have actually stopped laying is a question. From 25c to 30c per dozen was the price on Saturday. Butter was plentiful and sold from 22c to 25c per lb.

The city had a visit last week from Mr. Coughlin, Government inspector of weights and measures. He reports the majority of scales here in good working order. He had a busy morning Saturday testing the meat sellers' scales on the market.

Will. J. Norfolk, formerly with R. S. Jones, has taken the management of A. Beattie & Co.'s store in Ingersoll. This firm has lately moved into a new store fitted up with all modern improvements, making it one of the finest stores in Ingersoll, and with the vim and energy which Mr. Norfolk will bring to it should have greater success than ever. Mr. Norfolk entered upon his new duties on Nov. 23, and all his many friends wish him every success.

The grocery on Wellington Street belonging to the H. M. Killoran estate, has been sold to L. F. Killoran, son of the late H. M. Killoran. Mr. Killoran has been manager of this store for some time past and has acted wisely in purchasing it for himself. It is a store anyone might be proud of, having the latest computing scales, new cheese cutter, coffee mill, stationary folding counter chairs, etc.

The Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co. are lately doing some extensive advertising, having the staunchest faith in their Perfection Cream Sodas, and feeling that a good article backed up by live advertising is sure to bring good results.

The grocery department of the Whyte Packing Co. is advertising eight different kinds of cheese — McLaren's Imperial, Canada Cream, Ingersoll Cream, Roquefort, Swiss, Stilton, Mild Canadian and Fine Old White Cheese. This is a larger assortment than most grocers handle.

The past summer has seen sixty-six new houses erected in Stratford. Some of these are very expensive structures, the best that Stratford has yet seen, and with them have been built a number of new corner groceries. On Nov. 20 J. Pepper opened a new grocery at the corner of Nelson Street and Railway Avenue. Mr. Pepper's store is a fine brick building with dwelling attached and situated in a thickly populated part of the city.

The sales of the bread and cake department of the Barnsdale Trading Co. have far exceeded those of last year. The firm think this is accounted for to a certain extent by the fine weather we have had this fall, although their extensive newspaper advertising must have made a great increase also.

The Nasmith Co. closed their confectionery and ice cream store on Nov. 1, but still continue to run their bakery. They report the bread business better since closing their store, as their attention is specially directed to bread making and the delivery of the same.

The California navel orange has found its way into all the stores these last few days and grape fruit is more in evidence than in any previous year.

INGERSOLL.

November 24.—It is to the credit of merchants in general that they have accomplished much in educating the public through their advertisements to buy early for the Christmas season. On Saturday night last a local grocer informed your correspondent that there was already a pronounced swing about the Christmas trade. This was especially noticeable in the frequent requests of customers to lay aside some article suitable for a gift. This assertion was all the more surprising in view of the unseasonable weather that prevailed, but it goes to show what merchants have done in constantly hammering away along the line "Shop early." A great change along this line has taken place during the last decade, according to merchants who have been in business for a greater period than this. The time was when stocks of the average merchant were much smaller than at the present time, and the Christmas articles received very little attention until a week or two before the "rush" was anticipated. Latterly, however, the merchants have been preparing even months ahead for their Christmas harvest. They order much earlier than was once the case and their goods are on display so much earlier than in former days that all who enter their stores have ample time to familiarize themselves with them long before they feel called upon to purchase.

W. J. Norfolk, of Stratford, has succeeded the late John S. Smith as manager of A. Beattie & Co.'s grocery store. Mr. Norfolk is a young man who has had considerable experience in the grocery business and is well qualified for his duties here.

Poultry was offered in such increased quantities at the market on Saturday last as to give rise to the belief that it is more plentiful than in recent years and that it will be within the reach of all for the holiday season. Chickens of splendid quality sold at from 60c to 75c per pair; ducks at 90c to $1 per pair; geese 10c per pound, and turkeys from 12 to 14c per pound. Although the shippers have commenced to gather up the turkeys for the export markets it is understood that there will be an abundance for the home demand and that the prices will show a big decline compared with those of last year.

BARRIE.

Nov. 24.—Earl Armstrong, who was formerly in partnership with Mr. Channen has severed that connection and has joined the traveling staff of the T. Long & Bro. Co., of Collingwood and will make his headquarters at Orillia doing from that town south. Wm. Maley, who formerly had this territory, is traveling north of Orillia.

The many friends in town of Geo. Moffatt were pleased to see him back on his trip this week after an eight weeks' sojourn in the Toronto General Hospital, with an attack of blood poisoning.

Brown & Co. are moving into their new store and are going into the grocery trade larger than ever.

Mrs. Metcalf has disposed of her stock of groceries and has left town. The store is to let and should not be long idle as it is the most ideal spot in Ward Five and a capable person can work up a fine business there.

J. Jamieson, of H. P. Eckardt & Co., is moving into one of the two fine houses he has built on Collier St. this summer.

C. Hinds, of Hinds Bros., is again at work after a two months' hospital vacation with typhoid fever.

The prices of poultry were firmer on Saturday's market, chickens selling 10c to 11c a pound. Turkeys advanced a cent, selling at 13c to 14c. Geese were lower, selling at 8c to 9c; ducks, 9c to 10c. A load of snow apples were the only apples on the market and sold at $2. Potatoes sold at 55c to 60c a bag; new laid eggs at 30c a dozen, fresh, 26c a dozen; held, 24c. A few farmers sold loads of butter for 24c, while smaller lots sold at 25c and 26c.

LONDON.

Nov. 24.—Wholesale trade is fair. A great deal of Christmas fruit is moving a brisk demand for the various lines of goods having set in. Sugar is not very active and prices are unchanged. Fine teas are also high and mediums are up ¼d. to ½d. per lb. There is a good demand for cereals but canned goods are moving slowly.

The police magistrate gave his decision yesterday in the case of John Garvey, wholesale grocer charged with violation of a city by-law in driving onto the Carling St. sidewalk. The magistrate's judgment is in effect that Mr. Garvey has a perfect right to drive over the sidewalk for the purpose of loading and unloading goods.

Retail trade is a little slow, due probably to the very mild weather.

The officers of the Retail Grocers' Association are kept busy looking into complaints of price-cutting. One grievance is that certain dealers are advertising canned tomatoes at three for a quarter, but as goods are to be had at a price that warrants their being retailed at the figure named the remedy is obvious—let all be supplied with goods for the three-for-a-quarter trade. More serious is the complaint that some grocers are allowing five per cent. discount on cash purchases. This is now receiving the attention of the association's officers.

The manager of the Canadian Packing Company, whose premises here were destroyed by fire some time ago, has returned from England, where he has been consulting the directors. He will have a conference with the aldermen shortly, when the question of offering inducements to the company to rebuild here will be discussed. "We intend to rebuild," he says, "and would like very much to remain in London, but that will depend upon what arrangements can be made. We have been offered splendid inducements to go elsewhere, but prefer to remain here even with less encouragement than other places are willing to give us. We want a site and plenty of water and would like to be given the abattoir privileges of the city. London needs an abattoir badly and if it were under our control we would slaughter all the animals consumed in London at our plant and have them properly inspected." Meanwhile the machinery damaged in the fire is being repaired.

Poultry and potatoes were the features of an unusually big market last Saturday, and prices were somewhat lower. Apples are scarce and promise to be a luxury this winter.

The grocery men are taking to the bowling game seriously. During the week they played two matches on the Ideal alleys. In the first they defeated the Advertiser team 2,319 to 2,203 and in the second they were beaten by the Giants 2,352 to 2,107. They also played at St. Thomas and won.

The experience of the Retail Grocers' Association when last the members attempted to hold a meeting may have the effect of inducing them to rent a hall or large room for their own purposes. It will be remembered that on the occasion in question the grocers were crowded out of the hall they had been using by an organization which had got there before them. It is now thought that if the association and the grocers' clerks were to rent a suitable place of assembly, which could be fitted up as a reading and meeting room, increased interest would be shown in the organization. The idea has been discussed by officers of the association, and it is not improbable that early next year some action will be taken in the direction indicated.

KINGSTON.

Nov. 24.—The Kingston correspondent's last letter to The Grocer gave out a wrong impression to the trade and added wind to the flame. What makes the pox scare so alarming outside is the fact of the patients being sent to the old fort and, of course, people writing to their friends help to make matters appear worse than they are. The cases are so light many think it would have been better to leave the patients in their homes and placard the houses the same as they did in Brockville. Other places have had the same light pox. Many old-timers say it is nothing but Cuban itch.

Travelers are coming in from all parts and there is no fear so far of contagion. We had a very large market on Saturday, which is evident that the farmers are not in dread. I am sorry if my report last week did any injury to trade here. I try to be loyal to my city but the best of houses sometimes make mistakes. A leading wholesaler said the rumors had not affected their sales any.

California oranges are coming in but a little on the sour. Lemons are not as thin skinned as formerly. Weather must be changing south so they have to put on heavier coats. A great boon to our young men here is our Y.M.C.A. classes in mechanical drawing, bookkeeping, writing etc., are being opened up and clerks and drivers who are anxious to climb the commercial ladder are encouraged.

If this fine weather continues the egg market will not go as high as expected but prices will remain firm.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Nov. 24, 1908.

The closing of navigation for the season of 1908 is now an accomplished fact and dealers are looking forward to a lull in the export market for some time. This condition generally follows the close of navigation at this point. British buyers seem to assume that the cheese market is a dangerous thing to meddle with, until the trade becomes accustomed to its new conditions. Locally, trade is in a good condition, and the lower grades are scarce. The total receipts of the season up to Nov. 20, since May 1, are 1,880,200 boxes, against 2,039,035 boxes for the same period of last year. These figures prove now beyond the possibility of a mistake that the season will finish behind last year's record. Total exports since May 1 were 1,844,537 boxes, against 2,029,-054 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. The local cheese market is steady, with Westerns quoted at 12¼c to 12½c and Easterns at 11⅞c to 12c.

The butter market is making a strong finish, so far as price is concerned. Last week firmness of the market was especially noticeable in the higher grades, but this week all lines are commanding good prices, and there seems to be considerable activity displayed in getting after any available stock, regardless of its quality. The latest arrivals are showing the fodder taste, which proves that the pastures have petered out for the season. Considerable speculation is being indulged in locally regarding the size of stocks. Some are inclined to the belief that they are larger than many think, while others think they are small. As was pointed out by one dealer, who thinks they are large, several have laid in good supplies, thinking there would be a repetition of conditions as they were last year, and in this case the venture would prove an exceedingly profitable one. Locally the demand is exceedingly good for all lines.

Receipts for the season, up to Nov. 21, were 390,517 packages, against 386,-436 packages for the same period of last year. Finest creamery is selling at 27c in round lots, and 27½c to 28c in a jobbing way.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, Nov. 25, 1908.

The continuation of exceedingly good local business is this week, and has been for some time, the feature of the Canadian packing business. The general public seem to be eating more bacon this fall than ever before as the local demand is seemingly unprecedented for the season of the year.

During the few weeks of the late summer when supplies of hogs were exceedingly light, packers allowed their stocks to run down pretty low, expecting they would be able to fill up as usual during the light business customary in the fall. As yet they have not been able to add much to their stocks, for Canadian demand has taken practically all the goods turned out. This is all the more surprising when the very light shipments to the British market are considered.

The export business, as noted, continues light, for one reason from the fact just mentioned, and again because demand for Canadian bacon in England is very inactive. Of course, some supplies are going forward, the packers regularly doing business there keeping their product regularly on the market, but the amount of this is not a large feature. The Danes and the Irish, in fact, are keeping the market so well supplied, that there is little call for other products, the price standing about 51s.

The run of hogs during the week was fairly good and the animals come in generally in good condition, better than a few weeks ago. Just how large the supply of hogs in the country is at the present time is rather a matter of conjecture. Reports from Western Ontario say that the supply there is only light, as the farmers sold their hogs last year on account of the short supplies of feed. Others say the plentiful supplies of feed this season are inducing the farmers to hold their hogs. Prices offered this week vary from $6 to $6.15 f.o.b.

The New York Journal of Commerce in reviewing the current situation in the United States, says:

"The sudden upturn to the speculative market at the end of the week was followed by a scalping campaign on the part of the professional element, who were about the only traders in the market. A heavy run of hogs was not without its effect and all options were forced on a lower basis. Much inconvenience was caused to local slaughterers by the quarantine on cattle now prevailing against the States of New York and Pennsylvania. The local cash markets were dull."

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—The provision situation is a little easier, despite the fact that selected heavy Canada short cut, boneless pork, heavy short cut clear, and very heavy pork are extremely scarce, practically none offering. Lard, both compound and pure, is a little easier this week. Locally trade is fair.

BUTTER.—Firmness is the feature of the butter market. Prices have been fully maintained and the local demand is exceptionally good. Although prices remain practically the same as last quoted, an advance at any moment would be no surprise, as conditions seem to warrant one.

BUTTER—Creamery is firm with an advance of a cent or two, but dairy is plentiful and much of it not good, with all the efforts on the part of the Government, a good many of the farmers are still clinging to their old habits, and are feeding turnips to their cows, which affects the quality of butter, with a tendency to lower the prices. A certain line, which is now styled 'separator butter," is supposed to be made from cream taken from the milk with a separator and done up in 1-lb. prints, wrapped in paper with the names of the makers neatly printed on them, and of a better quality than the ordinary dairy butter. In order to preserve the reputation of this butter, it is of importance that farmers do not make the mistake of feeding their cows with turnips. A good deal of ordinary butter still comes in badly made and carelessly wrapped in unsuitable cloths. Nothing but new, clean cotton should be used.

EGGS—Strictly new laid eggs are very scarce and worth from 35c to 40c. The mild weather and high price might tempt the hens to break the strike and start work, which, of course, would soon put eggs where they could be reached with less difficulty. Some of us remember when there were only two kinds of eggs, good and bad; but now there are strictly new laid, new laid, fresh, selects, candled and limed eggs. It may be interesting to know the difference in the value of each kind.

Buyers in the country who deal direct with the farmers should insist on them putting it up in better shape. Buyers should remember that they are not only buyers, but also educators, and by doing this, both buyer and seller will benefit.

WINNIPEG.

BUTTER—Local stocks of creamery are fairly large as it was held at such a high price during the summer as to prevent outgoing shipments. Dairy is in better supply but in sympathy with advices from the East the local market is firmer. For No. 1 dairy. tubs or bricks, local produce houses are paying 22c f.o.b. Winnipeg, for No. 2, 19c and for No. 3, 17c.

EGGS—Produce houses are paying 25c per dozen f.o.b. Winnipeg.

SHIPPING BUTTER TO RETAILERS.

Winnipeg Wholesalers Claim Country Dealers Are Demoralizing Market.

A Winnipeg wholesale produce merchant in conversation with The Grocer the other day referred to the circumstance that a great many country merchants throughout the Province of Manitoba are making a practice of shipping butter direct to Winnipeg retailers.

"These dealers are shipping direct to Winnipeg retailers in the hope of getting higher prices and saving the wholesale produce man's profit," said he, "but in reality they are demoralizing the market and they are getting much less than they would get if they would all confine their business to the regular channels of trade. Moreover, they do not get their money so promptly as would be the case if they shipped to wholesale produce houses."

When a city retailer gets 500 to 1,000 lbs. of butter he is over-loaded and he makes complaints as to quality and so on—anything to get a better price. It very often happens that because of the city retailers' complaints we get instructions from the shipper to take the butter off his hands. We do so at a reduced price. A number of transactions of this kind break the market and the prices are depressed. The wholesale produce houses have the market and the facilities to handle large quantities and a few big shipments sent to us do not demoralize the market. You may think that I have an ax to grind in talking this way and no doubt it would be to the advantage of the produce houses if the Manitoba dealers would sell to us only, but it is also a fact that the country dealer would get more for his butter and would get his money more promptly."

RETAIL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION NOTES.

James Eadie, provincial organizer of the Retail Merchants' Association, is spending this week in Stirling, Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls and Marmora, where local branches will be organized.

E. M. Trowern, general secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, will go to Chatham, Ont., in a few days to discuss matters of interest to the branch there. An active campaign will be begun in that district.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour and Cereal Markets Remain Generally Steady—Cold Weather Will Boost Rolled Oats—Christmas Candy Selling Well.

The flour and cereal markets continue steady this week without much change in the situation.

Flour is in good demand all over the country, millers being kept very busy. Business has improved somewhat in Quebec and the East during the week, though in Ontario it is perhaps a little easier with some cutting going on among the smaller millers.

The rolled oats market is holding firm, though an expected advance has not yet occurred. The continued mild weather it is understood, is the reason for this and a touch of real winter weather would probably bring the change in a hurry. Better business in all lines is looked for when winter really sets in.

A fair export business continues to be a feature. Millers are rather too much occupied with local business to devote a great deal of attention to it but some flour is going forward to Great Britain. Rolled oats are being shipped rather more freely. The recent heavy exports of Manitoba wheat, a feature in the local situation, are explained on the ground of a large increase in the proportion used by foreign millers, says the Journal of Commerce. In former years they have made use of it only as a strong wheat of extra quality, a 20 per cent. mixture being sufficient for their requirements. This year, however, the scarcity of the other wheats has made it imperative to use Manitoba to form the body of the mixture, and the proportion is likely to be increased to 50 per cent. It is pointed out, however, that this situation will be considerably modified when the new crop of Plate wheat is available in sufficient quantities, which will not be before March, so that for the next four months the European millers will be largely dependent upon the Manitoba crop.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Improvement in demand has been the dominant feature of the flour market during the week. Buyers are realizing that the chances of prices easing off much is a remote speculation. In view of this fact they are replenishing their now much depleted stocks. No changes in quotations have taken place during the week.

ROLLED OATS—A rumor gained some currency that a rise was about to take place in this market, but it is found upon the closest scrutiny of conditions to be unfounded. Up to the present moment there has been no change to record. Buyers continue their policy of caution, and the amount of goods changing hands cannot be said to be large.

FEED—A drop of $1 in the price of Manitoba shorts took place during the week, the line now being quoted at $24, instead of $25. The small mills are shipping only limited supplies, and there is no indication of a change in prices at present. The possibility of the market going lower is very remote.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The market remains about the same as last week with the trend of prices slightly lower though quotations as given last week still prevail. In some quarters, however, there is considerable cutting going on and some grades may be bought slightly below these figures. Local firms attribute this to smaller outside millers who seem to regard Toronto as a dumping ground and get rid of their surplus product here. There is some talk also of flour made from sprouted wheat being sold in some quarters. This, however, cannot be verified. While local millers attribute the cutting to outside firms there is no doubt that they are to some extent meeting this. Millers all over, however, are doing good business with no immediate change in prospect.

CEREALS — The continued mild weather is reflecting rather largely on business and on this account the advance in rolled oats predicted for this week did not materialize. It only needs a good cold snap, however, to send prices up a notch. Business is steady, in fact has been rather better than usual from that standpoint this fall, the usual periods of rush and dullness being not in evidence. Cold weather is needed, however, to brighten things up.

The committee which has the matter in hand is endeavoring to make the dinner the finest yet held, and with that end in view are sparing no pains to get together a list of prominent business, professional and political men who will give short addresses that will contribute much to the pleasure of the evening.

No announcement can yet be made, but something extra is promised by the executive if arrangements work out satisfactorily.

A fire at the premises of the Whitby Fruit and Vinegar Works, Whitby, Ont., last week, burned the two top storeys of the apple evaporating plant. The building was splendidly equipped and the loss at this season of the year is particularly unfortunate. No insurance was carried.

The Autumn Pure Food Number of "The 57," the organ of the H. J. Heinz Co., Pittsburg, is a bright little booklet of interest to grocers everywhere. Its contents include a couple of illustrated world-travel articles, another one on the tests being carried on by the United States Government to determine the effects of food preservatives on the human system and a couple illustrative of the Heinz factory. The booklet will be sent to any grocer in Canada by the Heinz Co., on mention of this paper.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Business Continues Good Though Mild Weather is a Drawback—New California Oranges in—Apple Markets Firmer—Approach of Advent Stimulates Fish Business.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUIT—New stock California oranges have made their appearance, and are offering at $3.25 to $3.35. Floridas are a little easier this week, now selling for $3.25, against $3.50 last week. Grape fruit remains firm at $4.25. Bananas are slightly firmer, as the minimum price is now $1.75, against $1.50 last week. Nova Scotia cranberries are strong having advanced 25c during the week. Other lines remain as last quoted. Trade has been good during the week, country orders being received in greater volume. Apples have experienced a change upwards of 50c to 75c per bbl. with a good demand for seconds, now that the supply of firsts have gone so high. No. 1 stock is quoted at $3.50 to $4.25 in car lots and No. 2 at $3 to $3.50, four cars being sold at the above prices; but at these figures they could not be replaced as holders are asking $4 for No. 1 f.o.b. in the West. There appears to be a great scarcity all at once. At present stocks in the city are said to be not over 5,000 to 6,000 bbls. at the outside against about 50,000 bbls. a year ago. These conditions, it is thought, will lead to much higher prices. Cable advices report a firm market in England but at the present time trade at home is more profitable.

VEGETABLES—Changes in prices is the predominant feature of this week's market in vegetables. Fully one-half the quotations have either gone up or down, with the general tendency strongly upward. This week oyster plant is being quoted at 60c. Artichokes are offered at $1 per bag; new string beans at $3 per bushel basket. Parsnips per bag are selling at 90c and sweet potatoes at $1.50 per bushel basket. Marrows are down to $1.50 and $1 per dozen. Carrots are cheaper at 25c per bag. Spanish onions have declined 75c. Lettuce is cheaper at 50c, against 95c last week. Lines which have gone forward are pumpkins, which are somewhat scarce; brussels sprouts, squash, onions, cabbage, radishes, beets, green peppers, parsley and cauliflower. Trade has not been very brisk. Dealers on the market are feeling the final departure of vessels for the season. Stewards of vessels calling here have always been depended upon for considerable trade during the season of navigation.

FISH—Advent will start on the 29th and grocers have been ordering in anticipation of this season when the consumption of meat falls off so, offering opportunities for large fish sales. New frozen sea herring is arriving, and is quoted at $2 per 100 fish. Fresh smelts, mackerel, haddock and cod are plentiful, also frozen halibut, salmon and lake fish. In smoked lines haddies and bloaters are arriving freely, but kippers are scarce at present. The salted and prepared market is exceptionally good, and supplies are ample. New green cod and Labrador herring are selling well. The season for malpecque oysters is nearly finished. Demand for bulk oysters, by the gallon, is increasing. The fish market is active, and owing to the large supplies arriving, prices have become a trifle easier.

GREEN FRUITS—California box grapes are now out of season and their place is filled with Almeria grapes, which are arriving in large quantities and are selling for $5.25 to $5.50 a keg. VEGETABLES—There is very little change in vegetables this week, and the market is well stocked with all kinds. Farmers are taking advantage of the favorable weather and are rushing them in to save expense of lining cars to protect them against frost. All kinds of vegetables are of exceptionally good quality, and quite sufficient to supply all demand. Red peppers and white turnips are now off the market.

WHO IS A RETAILER ?

The Three Classes of Trade and Their Proper Distinction—The Conception of the Word "Legitimate"—The Danger From the Semi-Jobber.

In last week's issue of the "Trade Press Bulletin," the circular of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States, John A. Green, secretary of the association, takes up the question. "Who is a Retailer ?" The reference seems to be particularly to the words "legitimate retailer," as used by J. A. Van Hoose, president of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Convention, held recently at Asheville, Tenn.

In reply to a request from Mr. Green, President Van Hoose has given the following as his idea of what is a retailer:

"Our idea of a legitimate wholesale business is one where the person, firm or corporation buys on its own account and in selling sells only to the merchants or to established commissaries to sell again, and in which firm or corporation no retailers are directly or indirectly interested to any appreciable extent.

Wholesalers Must Not Be Interested.

"Our idea of a legitimate retail business is one in which the person, firm or corporation buys on its own account, and in selling sells only to the consumers, and in which wholesalers are not directly or indirectly interested to any appreciable extent.

"I am inclosing copy of an address which I delivered several years ago, by invitation, before the Virginia Retail Grocers' Association, at Richmond. They selected the subject for me. You will note in this address our idea, as well as belief, that manufacture, transportation and distribution should be along departmental lines, and that each has its legitimate sphere of usefulness and obligation, and the men who make their living in one or the other of these various departments should not interfere with the rights and living of those in other departments.

"As to the question of a wholesaler selling to hotels and restaurants, it is our idea that this should only be done where it is absolutely necessary for holding the business in that town or city, and should always, under all circumstances, be a matter of amicable and satisfactory conference with the wholesalers and retailers. In many towns situated in the territory identified with the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association entirely satisfactory and amicable arrangements have been made by and under which the wholesalers sell a few of the largest hotels and restaurants in unbroken packages, thus enabling the whole community to get the benefit of the money thus expended in that particular town or city. The goods which these large hotels and restaurants wish to purchase in broken packages are secured from the local retailers.

The Conception of "Legitimate."

"You, of course, understand, that in the use of the word 'legitimate' it is not used in the sense of being legal or illegal. Manifestly any business is legal which is not prohibited by law. But in using the word 'legitimate,' whether applied to a wholesaler or to a retailer, we mean it in the broad, humanitarian conception of the word, as either injuring or protecting the interests of others who are also vitally concerned in making a living for themselves and for those dependent upon them.

"We do not believe that it is fair as man to man, that it is legitimate for a person, firm or corporation to buy as a wholesaler and then to fight the retailer for his living, with the consumers' trade. This association and this office use every moral influence to persuade manufacturers not to sell goods to parties as wholesalers, where those parties either from their own stores or from stores owned or controlled by them, compete with or interfere with the retailer for his living.

"Obviously, the converse of this should be fair and consistent, viz., That the retailers should not, from their own stores or from stores owned or controlled by them, compete with or interfere with the business of the wholesaler. The consumer and the public at large are vitally interested in seeing these respective spheres of usefulness safeguarded in every proper and legal way. Neither the town, county, city, state nor nation should permit the small dealer to become eliminated, and distribution centered into the hands and under the control of vast aggregations of wealth. Property interests, taxes, municipal, county and state securities, are vitally involved in this matter. It is a tremendous and far-reaching question. The farmer or mechanic, or any citizen, who sends his money away from the community in which he lives or from which he draws his living, is blind to his ultimate best interests when he wishes to pass by his local retailer and apparently, for the time being, save a little money in the transaction, provided, of course, that he cannot procure the same goods at anything like the same price from his local dealer.

Carrying Out the Idea.

"This same principle is true of the retailer in his attempt to pass by the wholesaler. The same is true in the attempt of the wholesaler to manufacture in competition with the manufacturer whose goods that wholesaler is also handling.

"We believe in 'co-operation' in the broadest and best sense of the word, hence, believe in the great principle of 'organized co-operation,' a co-operation in which the rights and living of others are held in just as high regard both in theory and practice as we regard our own rights.

"The above are substantially some of our views in reference to this whole question of economic distribution, but I regret that heavy pressure of work prevents me from sending them in more concise and better arranged form. I hope, however, you will be able to gather from same, together with the copy of the address above referred to, substantial answers to your questions."

In commenting on the above, Mr. Green says :

"This answer, at the present time, will help us in our contention that the trade of the consuming public should belong to the retailer, and that the wholesaler should in no way enter into competition with him. We realize the perplexing problem that confronts us in trying to bring about a satisfactory understanding between the distributers of food products, wholesale and retail. The disposition of both parties to play fair will, no dodbt, in the near future bring about the conference each desires, and through this conference the beginning of the end of all misunderstanding can easily be brought about.

"The following paragraph from President Van Hoose's speech before the Virginia Retail Merchants' Association might be considered at this time, and is worthy of more than passing consideration :

> " 'The semi-jobber, department stores, other and all forms of concentrated capital, with their more or less odious trust features, will, if foolishly permitted, proceed to relegate you, your business, your profits and your living to the past as not necessary. If there is no use for the legitimate jobber, there is no logical use for you, the legitimate retailer. Why should monopoly stop and spare your business, your living, any more than ours ?'

"There is no doubt but that we are somewhat inconsistent in complaining about the semi-jobber. If the retailer did not patronize the semi-jobber he would soon cease to exist."

NOTES FROM GUELPH.

Those big fat oyster talks that we see in nearly all the local grocery ads lately should help to sell the oysters. Why people never heard so many nice things about raw oysters before.

One grocer claims his granulated sugar is worth $1 a hundred more than his neighbor's. I wonder why, for myself, I can not see it. But he thinks he knows, and he has a right to his own opinion.

Geo. Forbes, who has been running an ice cream and candy store on the Elora Road, has purchased and moved into the Olympic candy, ice cream and refreshment store on St. George's Square, and is doing a good business.

A library of grocery technical books would be a great suggestion for Guelph, but unless the grocers get together soon the Clerks' Association ought to take this matter up, as they have a surplus and nothing to do with the money at present, and this would be a good investment for the winter months. Did you ever go into our Public Library and notice on the tables the books that are there for mechanics, carpenters, molders, etc., and labor papers generally, even to the Socialistic papers? We never see The Canadian Grocer or Dry Goods Review there. Wonder why not? Some grocers, as soon as they get their Grocer, run and hide it from their clerks for fear they would see it, or see some good ideas in it, or else the few minutes in looking at it would be wasted, while others, I am glad to say, take a look at it themselves, then pass it along to the clerks to take home and read. Which do you do?

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Information for Grocers and Clerks Regarding the Goods They Sell Which Will Help in Interesting Customers.

The Cocoa Tree.

The cocoa tree is an evergreen and grows to a height of from fifteen to twenty-five feet, its leaves being bright and smooth, somewhat resembling the foliage of a rubber plant. It is very low-branching, and the blossoms are small and pink. The blossoms and pods not only spring from the branches, but often from the trunk itself. The fruit is a yellowish pod about the size of a cucumber and is filled with seeds, all strung together in a pulpy, pinkish mass. It is from these seeds or beans, each about the size of a chestnut, that the chocolate and cocoa of commerce are manufactured. The trees bear from the fourth to the thirtieth year, and it is not unusual to see on the same tree buds, flowers and fruit.

When ripe the pods are gathered by the native women and are allowed to lie on the ground for a day or two, after which they are opened. The pulp containing the beans then ferments for about a week, the astringent qualities of the beans being much modified and their flavor improved.

After being thoroughly dried the beans are packed in hundred-pound bags for shipment. When received by the manufacturer they are carefully picked over for quality, assorted and roasted. The nibs, as the roasted beans with the shells removed are called, are then fed into a hopper and ground between stones similar to an old-fashioned flour mill. The grinding process, coupled with the friction of the stones, which produce a temperature of some 120 degrees, changes the solid nibs (without the addition of anything) into a thick, heavy liquid. This is technically termed "chocolate liquor," and is sold to confectioners.

This same liquor, subjected to hydraulic pressure, with the resulting separation into a clear oil, gives the cocoa butter of commerce. The remaining pressate when powdered forms drinking cocoa. The chocolate liquor solidified becomes cooking chocolate, and, with sugar, vanilla and spices added, it is sold as "sweet" or "eating" chocolate.

Pineapple as a Medicine.

The medicinal value of pineapples has recently been the subject of considerable inquiry among physicians, and in Hawaii experiments have been made to determine something of these properties. It has been found that the fruit of the pineapple contains a digestive principle closely resembling pepsin in its action, and to this is probably due the beneficial results of the use of the fruit in certain forms of dyspepsia. On the casein of milk pineapple juice acts as a digestive in almost the same manner as rennet, and the action is also well illustrated by placing a thin piece of uncooked beef between two slices of fresh pineapple, where in the course of a few hours its character is completely changed.

In diphtheritic sore throat and croup pineapple juice has come to be very largely relied upon in countries where the fruit is common. The false membranes which cause the closing of the throat seem to be dissolved by the fruit acids and relief is almost immediate.

Keeping Eggs Fresh in China.

"There is a way to beat the storage commission merchant and the old hen herself; to have fresh eggs all the time, in fact," said Marshal Raymond, a lawyer, of Paducah, Ky.

"This method may be as old as the Chinese—at least I learned it in China when I made a trip through the East more than a year ago. I happened to run into the American Consul General at Shanghai while over there, and when I left he presented me with what he said were eggs.

"Although they didn't look like eggs at all—looked, indeed, more like elongated mud pies with a stone stuffed in them—I faithfully brought then home, and at last opened one.

"Sure enough, there was an egg inside, and when it was broken it proved to be entirely fresh, although it may have been in that mud for a year or more. Well, with that knowledge of how the Chinamen keep eggs fresh I salted a whole barrel of them to see how they would do under American mud.

"I bought them at the time of year when they were cheap, not caring much whether they kept or not, but willing to try the experiment. I buried them under more than a foot and a half of earth and left them for several months.

"When winter came along and eggs went up to some enormous figure, I just dug down into the earth and pulled out that barrel. Opened to the light of day the eggs looked as if they had just been laid. They tasted, too, as if they had never been put away in the earth for many weeks."—Washington Herald.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

"OLD MISSION"
BRAND CALIFORNIA OLIVES

NEARLY a century and a half ago, a little band of Spanish soldiers and priests, under the leadership of Father Junipero Serra, sailed into the bay of San Diego, California, and landing, took possession in the name of King Carlos III. They established a "Mission" and planted out orchards of olive trees and fields of grain, and in a short time had a thriving colony.

RIPE OLIVES

are a delicious novelty which the Mission Fathers bequeathed to those who succeeded them. The olives are allowed to ripen, so that when picked they are of a brown to purplish color, and rich with the natural oil. They are "cured" and packed in cans in such manner that they retain the natural color of the ripe olive, and, like all ripe fruit, are rich and mellow. They are packed without the use of any coloring matter or preservative. These olives received the Highest Award at the great Expositions at St. Louis and Portland.

During recent years improved methods of packing have made it possible to ship the delicious, matured, ripe olives. No more healthful food can be conceived, no more delicious delicacy can be placed on your table than the

"OLD MISSION"
BRAND RIPE
CALIFORNIA OLIVES

Not to be nibbled, as are the green olives, at banquets, etc., one or two at a time, but to be eaten freely, alike by young and old, as a delicious, health-giving, wholesome food, delightful alike to the "gourmet" or the child. They are generally served covered with cracked ice, just as they come from the can, and are eaten as a relish with fish, flesh and fowl alike.

Are Your Credit Customers Safe?
No! They'll run you into bankruptcy in a jiffy if you'll let them. And still you can't get too independent with this class of trade—it is good money when it does come.
ALLISON COUPON BOOKS
point the way to safety. They guard against loss, they hold the credit customer in check, save time, money and trouble.
How They Work
A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.
For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere. Manufactured by is a pretty sure way of drawing a crowd. And the next best thing to giving away money, when it comes to drawing and keeping a crowd, is to give really good value for your customers' money. Consequently, it behoves the live grocer to exercise great discretion in the selection of his canned goods stock. Don't let a single can of poor quality goods creep in anywhere. Make sure of uniformly high quality by ordering OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND—the brand with the quality reputation. We know that our best friends are the particular grocers; and we never let the quality of Old Homestead Brand deteriorate one iota.

The Peddler Is Abroad

The peddler, hawker, and the transient trader can be found to-day in increasing numbers in almost any community. They sell tea, coffee, curtains, clothing, caps, carpets—in fact, most all lines carried in the average general store. Retail merchants should, therefore, make every effort to see that a portion of that profit finds its way back.

—From the "Canadian Grocer," Nov. 27th, '08.

He is destroying your Tea Trade. Put him out of business by selling "SALADA" the only tea that will do it, because we never sell to peddlers. The only way to successfully combat the peddler evil is to push the sale of goods the peddler cannot buy. Push "SALADA" and you will secure the tea trade the peddler is getting. You will have the absolute assurance of knowing that you are serving your customers with the purest and most delicious of all teas. Its delightful flavor has captivated the tastes of millions of particular tea-drinkers, thus enabling thousands of grocers to build up a large and profitable tea trade.

Save Your Elbow Grease

PATENT APPLIED FOR

The Kaiser Wax Pad AND IRON CLEANER

The Cleaner that Cleans Well.
The Wax Pad that Waxes Well.

REQUIRES BUT HALF THE TIME TO DO AN IRONING.

Every Housekeeper dreads ironing day, especially so, when she has a lot of Shirt Waists, Mens Shirts, Collars Cuffs, etc. to Iron; She always wants to obtain a high gloss finish equal to First Class Laundries, and after hard work by the use of Common Wax, a lot of rubbing and Polishing utterly fails.

The Kaiser Iron Cleaner & Wax Pad will clean and smooth the rough and rusty places that have accumulated since the last time they were used By rubbing the hot Iron quickly over the corrugated surface you remove immediately starch or rust. You will be delighted when you try the Iron to see how smoothly it slips over the linen and the result will be no difference from first class laundry work. When the wax is entirely exhausted in the outer 2 Layers on both sides, remove it—and you still will have 2 Layers left.

WHY YOU SHOULD USE IT.

The cost to use it is almost nothing.
The Iron does not adhere to the fabric.
It imparts a splendid perfume to the clothes.
It saves a great deal of hard work in Ironing.
It gives an excellent lustre to the Linen or Muslin.
The Clothes will remain clean and neat much longer.
It gives the Clothes a much better finish than by any other method.
It makes the Iron pass smoothly over the surface and does not leave any black streaks or spots.

Every Housekeeper that cares to do Good Work should have one. We claim there is nothing on the market is its equal to the KAISER IRON CLEANER & WAX PAD, for quickness, convenience, satisfactory work or economy.

The Peddler and the Law in Ontario

Sections From the Statutes Which Control the Itinerant Vendor and Transient Trader and How These Are Sometimes Evaded—What is being Done to Remedy the Nuisance.

The grievances, which merchants are laboring under by reason of the loopholes in the acts regulating hawkers and transient traders, are receiving much attention from business interests all over the country, but particularly in the Province of Ontario. Not only is the law loosely administered in many places, but the license fees in certain cases are regarded as altogether too low. Legitimately, hawkers and transient traders have as much right to ply their calling as any other tradesmen and no objection is taken to them by local merchants on that score, but it is contended, and apparently not without reason, that the tax upon them is too light, and that they are not bearing their just share of the expense for the privilege of doing business. This is the burden of complaint, and at the next session of the Ontario Legislature some amendments will be sought to the present act governing peddlers and transient traders, particularly in respect to the latter. An effort will be made to have the license raised, and the legal machinery more effectively administered.

Complaints are being received from all over the Province, not only at the growing number of peddlers, but from the fact that many escape taxation owing to the remissness of those whose duty it is to see that the provisions of the law are carried out, more especially in rural sections and villages. As a large number of peddlers avoid the payment of all fees, owing to the reason mentioned, this state of affairs is regarded as a fruitful source for the abnormal increase in their ranks.

What is Being Done.

In Toronto the Grocers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association have taken the matter up and are asking the City Council to prohibit the peddling of fruit and farm produce until after one o'clock in the afternoon. As matters stand at present there is nothing to prevent any gardener or produce dealer from selling, not only to the retailer, but also to the consumer at any time of the day, and, accordingly, many never go near the market and grocers have to suffer from the fact that no dues are being imposed. All the grocers ask is that this privilege be restricted until one o'clock in the day, which request seems a reasonable one, especially in view of the small amount of produce offered and the meagre attendance on the market.

The Nuisance in Ottawa.

In Ottawa the grocers have a grievance against those who evade the license fee, and they are taking steps to prevent the trouble which has assumed acute proportions. In fact, so glaring have become some of the violations, that not only will redress be sought from the City Council, but certain amendments will be asked of the Ontario Legislature with respect to the Transient Traders' Act. A general meeting of all the retail trade has been called when the entire question of transient traders and peddlers will be gone into. Further reference to this matter is made by a correspondent from Ottawa on another page.

What the Act Provides.

At the request of a number of retailers throughout the Province the clauses in the Revised Statutes of Ontario, regulating and licensing hawkers and transient traders, are herewith appended.

R. S. O., Cap. 139, sub-sections 14 and 15, respecting hawkers and peddlers, reads:

By the Councils of counties and towns and of cities having 100,000 inhabitants, and by the Board of Commissioners of Police in cities having 100,000 inhabitants, or over:

14—For licensing, regulating and governing hawkers, peddlers or petty chapmen, and other persons carrying on petty trades, or who go from place to place, or to other men's houses on foot or with any animal, bearing or drawing any goods, wares, or merchandise for sale, or on or with any boat, vessel or other craft, or otherwise carrying goods, wares or merchandise for sale, and for determining the time during which the license shall be in force.

Provided always that no such license shall be required for hawking, peddling or selling from any vehicle or other conveyance any goods, wares or merchandise to any retail dealer, or for hawking or peddling any goods, wares or merchandise, the growth, produce or manufacture of this Province, not being liquors within the meaning of the law relating to taverns or tavern licenses, if the same are being hawked or peddled by the manufacturers or producer of the goods, wares or merchandise, or by his bona fide servants or employes having written authority in that behalf; and such servant or employe shall produce and exhibit his written authority when required to do so by any municipal or peace officer.

The word "hawkers" in this clause shall include all persons who, being agents for persons not resident within the county, shall sell or offer for sale, tea, dry goods, watches, plated ware, silver ware, furniture, carpets, upholstering, millinery or jewelry or carry and expose samples of or patterns of any such goods to be afterwards delivered within the county to any person not being a wholesale or retail dealer in such goods, wares or merchandise.

The provisions of any by-law passed or enacted by any municipal council prior to the first day of October, 1885, shall not be held as extending to any such persons who by this change are to be held as included within the meaning of the word "hawkers."

The council of any town not separated from a county for municipal purposes may pass by-laws to carry into effect the purposes or objects of this clause, and may therein declare that the county by-laws, passed under the clause shall not apply to or be in force in said town, while the said by-law of the town remains in force; and thereafter no such county by-laws shall have effect in the said town during such time.

By the councils of counties:

15.—For providing at the discretion of the council, either the treasurer or clerk of the county, or the clerk of any municipality within the county with licenses, required under by-laws passed under clauses 2 and 14, for sale to persons applying for the same, under such regulations as may be prescribed in such by-laws.

By the councils of counties, cities and towns.

16.—For fixing the sums to be paid for licenses required under by-laws passed under clause 14, in cities having a population of 100,000 and over, the license fee shall not be more than $50 for a two-horse wagon; $30 for a one-horse wagon; $15 for a push cart, and $1 for carrying a basket.

The paragraph numbered 16 of section 583 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, is amended by the adding at the end thereof the following: "In case a constable or other police officer demands the production of a license by any person to whom the by-law passed under this paragraph or paragraph 14 of this section applies, and such demand is not complied with, it shall be the duty of such constable or other police officer, and he shall have power to arrest such persons without a warrant, and upon his failure to produce a license, to take him before the nearest Justice of the Peace, there to be dealt with according to the by-law."

Transient Traders' Regulations.

With reference to transient traders, R.S.O., cap. 139, subsection 29 reads:

For fixing the sums to be paid for licenses required under by-laws passed under the preceding clause, 28.

By the councils of townships, towns and villages and of cities having less than 100,000 inhabitants, and by the board of commissioners of police in cities having 100,000 inhabitants or more.

30.—For licensing, regulating and governing transient traders and other persons who occupy premises in the city, town, village or township, for temporary periods, and whose names have not been duly entered on the assessment roll of the municipality in respect of income or personal property for the then current year, and who may offer goods or merchandise of any description for sale by auction or in any other manner conducted by themselves or by a licensed auctioneer or otherwise.

(a) No such by-law shall affect, apply to or restrict the sale of the stock of an insolvent estate which is being sold or disposed of within the county in which the insolvent carried on business therewith at the time of the issue of an attachment or of the execution of an assignment.

31.—For requiring all transient traders who occupy premises in the municipality and are not entered upon the assessment roll, or who may be entered for the first time upon the assessment roll of such municipality in respect of income or personal property, and who may offer goods or merchandise of any description for sale by auction, or in any other manner, conducted by themselves or by a licensed auctioneer, or by their agent or otherwise to pay a license fee before commencing to trade.

(a) No such by-law shall affect, apply to or restrict the sale of the stock of an insolvent estate which is being sold or disposed of within the local municipality in which the insolvent carried on business therewith at the time of the issue of an attachment or the execution of an assignment.

(b) The words "transient trader" wherever they occur in clauses 30 and 31 of this section shall extend to and include any person commencing in the municipality the business in the said clauses mentioned, who has not resided continuously in such municipality for a period of at least three months next preceding the time of the commencement by him of such business therein.

By the councils of townships, cities, towns and villages.

32.—For fixing the sums to be paid for licenses required under by-laws passed under the preceding clause, 30.

33.—For fixing the sums to be paid for licenses required under by-laws passed under the preceding clause, 31, not including in cities and towns, $250; and in other municipalities, $100, for each license; and for providing that the sum so paid for a license shall be credited to the trader paying the same upon and on account of taxes for the unexpired portion of the then current year, as well as any subsequent taxes, should such trader remain in the municipality a sufficient time for taxes to become due and payable by him, and in any other event to be taken and used by the municipality as a portion of the license fund of such municipality.

Provided, nevertheless, that the license fee imposed by any by-law of any village situate within a territorial district may be a sum not exceeding $200.

Further information as to the working out of these by-laws and the laws in force in other Provinces will be given in these columns in later issues.

INDUCING EARLY XMAS BUYING

How to Get Customers Interested a Couple of Weeks' Sooner Than Usual—Timely Advertising, Window Display and General Hints Will Do the Work.

By Victor Lauriston

Discussion of the old problem of inducing the public to do their Christmas shopping early is once more timely. Already many stores have taken on a Christmassy look. In a short time the usual Christmas rush, so wearing, alike on clerks and employers, will commence. "If only the rush would start a couple of weeks earlier," is an oft-expressed wish, when the "last awful week" before Christmas has reached its height.

On the whole, there seems to be a tendency during later years on the part of many shoppers—particularly the shrewder kind—to purchase earlier. Merchants in all lines of business can do much to stimulate and encourage this tendency.

A merchant who does not rely on "slaughter sales" to stimulate his business, stated the other day that his firm's policy was to stock up with seasonable goods a couple of weeks before all competitors. Herein is a hint for merchants in dealing with the Christmas rush. "Commence your campaign early," is good advice. Of course, this is more difficult in connection with the grocery trade, where "perishables" form a large element; nevertheless, the hint is worth considering.

There are many housewives at the present moment who are discussing what to put in their Christmas cake and Christmas pudding. Both are articles which improve with age, and the ingredients form a good-sized element in the grocer's Christmas stock in trade. Here, as in many other lines, early buying is not only practicable, but is good business from the housewife's point of view.

Many merchants at Christmas time double their advertising space. All of them "talk Christmas." It would be wise generalship on the merchant's part to open his Christmas campaign a couple of weeks earlier.

Be First in the Field.

The merchant who is first in the field with his Christmas stock and with his Christmas advertising is bound to catch a lot of early business—the business of people who like to make a careful selection, and who prefer good stuff to cheap stuff. It saves him, too, from having a lot of stuff left over at the close of the holiday rush. There are people who will buy early if you will point out, in your advertising talks, the wisdom of buying early. Tell them that the firstcomer gets the best choice, that the firstcomer is saved time and worry, that the firstcomer isn't jostled like the latecomer, that the firstcomer isn't disappointed by the discovery that what she wants is all sold out. Talk it over in your advertising space a few weeks ahead—it is worth the trying.

Most advertising isn't anything like instantaneous in its effect. It is not the first advertisement that does the work; but the series of carefully designed advertisements. Advertising is not a battle, but a campaign. And this is just as true of Christmas as of other advertising.

The man who succeeds is the man who looks ahead. Like other men, the merchant is prone to put things off. He is busy, and time slips by without his noticing it. He is still thinking of his fall business and its results, when, unexpectedly, he finds that winter and Christmas have crept upon him, unawares. The result is that for the Christmas season he has often to use advertising hastily jotted down, and published too late to have the effect it should.

A Christmas campaign inaugurated the first thing in December, or even earlier, will have far more effect than one begun two weeks later. With an early start, the advertising will have time to "sink in." Moreover, it stands to bring out the purchasers early. The business is larger; it is spread over a longer period of time. The necessity of a large quota of extra clerks is done away with, and the result proves more satisfactory, alike to buyer and seller.

Then, the purchaser who buys Christmas stuffs early, will have time to think of something else, and to come back again. When she runs over the list of what she has already ordered, the deficiencies will naturally suggest themselves.

Early Ordertaking Helps.

A suggestion worthy of at least a fair test is that of taking orders for future delivery. Here the buyer places her order with the grocer weeks ahead, to be delivered shortly before Christmas. Particularly among old and tried customers, quite a bit of business can be done along this line, The grocer will be the better able to gauge his own orders, and the customers—and this is a point to be emphasized in advertising—will not run the risk, so common when orders are rushed in at the last moment, of not having the order filled.

Enlist the services of your local newspaper or newspapers. Have them talk "early buying." The early buying movement is one which, on moral grounds alone, merits the support of the press. And a few well-written, sensible, businesslike articles early in the Christmas season will help to bring the buyers out.

But, above all, set the example. Start your own campaign early. Use your advertising and your window display to stimulate early Christmas shopping. The public at large are not leaders, but followers. And, before early buying in the Christmas season can become a fixed institution, we must have the merchant leading the way by an early appeal to his purchasers.

NEW OFFICES IN NEW YORK.

R. B. Huestis, who has been New York representative for The Canadian Grocer for the past couple of years has recently moved into new offices at 622-624 Tribune Building, New York City.

THE GIFT AND GRAFT SYSTEM

Peculiar Conditions in the Business Life of To-day — Tempting the Consumer With Supposed Gifts—Bribing the Traveler and Clerk — Their Effect on the Community.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—The love of fair play and fair competition is deeply rooted in the Anglo-Saxon race; there is a corresponding contempt for anything that savors of taking an unfair advantage. This strong sense of justice and love for a square deal is the reacting force that prevents men from being carried away entirely from their moorings on the tidal wave struggle for aggrandizement and success.

There are few men who would not resent as an insult, any imputation that they were capable of taking a mean advantage, and yet while this is true of individuals, the fact stands out clearly that when interests become aggregated in different connections, as for instance athletic associations, business organizations and political parties, the moral sense becomes overlaid and transactions are tolerated that would not be considered right by the individual in his personal relations.

The object of my communication is to draw attention to a strange anomaly in the business life of to-day. While fair dealing and honest competition are generally accepted as ruling principles in business, there is an increasing tendency and effort to depart from the rule of straight business and adopt expedients to secure an advantage—get the inside track—over a competitor, which are not in accord with the principle of fair play and a fair fight—the effort to get results at any cost—to blind the eyes by a gift.

The ideal of business is to give the best value in the article for the money paid for it. The ideal of selling is the adoption of legitimate ways and means of publicity and energy and push in getting after the buyer. When, however, business is secured, not on the merits of the goods offered for sale, but on the ground of the value of the foreign article that goes with them to induce the purchase—the giving of something for nothing scheme—when to sell a man you need not emphasize so urgently the merits of the goods, as put something into his pocket apart from the deal, then it is that business is getting off the track of straight dealing.

Take a concrete instance in business to-day—The Gift System. Cereals are sold with the promise that they contain gifts of value or their equivalent in coupons that have a money value and are redeemable. When accumulated they can be exchanged for a set of dishes, clocks, pictures, books, etc. Frying pans and sauce pans are given with baking powder; money is guaranteed in packages of tea purchased. Buying tea in this way is like taking chances in a lottery with this difference, that the tea merchant guarantees you will win a prize. Children run to the grocer to buy tea, with the excitement and lust for gain, that the gambler at Monte Carlo feels as he stakes at the roulette table; the difference is only one of degree. Soap manufacturers have to open city stores filled with every variety of article, knives, clocks, dishes, ornaments ad infinitum to redeem soap wrappers.

The question that rises in the mind of the consumer when purchasing an article is "What goes with it?" The purchase does not pivot on the question of quality—of merit—but of free gift, what is given with it. This gift system is not confined to the fake articles or the adventurer, but is adopted and worked out by large reputable corporations and merchants to assist the sale of goods which have real merit, and this is a serious aspect of the case.

It is a gift to blind the eyes it is an effort to secure an end by irregular means, to throw something more than quality into the balance to turn the scale, just as we are told sometimes that votes are secured by paying the voter.

It may be said that a man has a right to do as he likes with his own; if he chooses to scatter his profits in free gifts, why not? The answer to this is, that it is not in accord with the sound business principle of selling goods on their merits. The natural working out of this gift system is, that the unscrupulous manufacturer is tempted to put up inferior goods and sell them by the article given with them for nothing.

Leaving out of the question entirely of the immoral effect of the gift system on the community at large, consider the unfairness of it from the standpoint of fair competition, of fair play and a fair fight.

The large manufacturer decides to take the trade away from his smaller competitor who is putting up honest goods of real merit. He cannot make better goods, but he can throw something into the scale to turn the balance. His poorer competitor cannot afford to do so, or won't buy success at the price and is put down and out. Is this in accord with the principles of fair play and a fair fight? It means throwing all sense of justice, equity and principle to the winds and substituting for it the old adage of barbarous days, "Let him win who has the power; let him take who can"; it is a return to savagery and unrestrained selfishness; it is striking below the belt.

Another phase of business to-day that is also unfair and immoral, is the custom of bonusing travelers to sell special lines of goods. A manufacturer wishes to interest travelers to push his goods, and offers to pay a commission or give gold watches, diamond rings, etc., to any traveler who produces evidence of sales made, and often on his bare statement of fact. The traveler is working for and under the instructions of the house he is engaged by and who may or may not wish to sell the particular goods in question. The traveler acts independently of his house and sells what he likes, what will bring him in the best commission, the best fur cap or waterproof coat. It is within the power of a traveler to do this if so disposed, the house must supply the goods the dealer orders whether it has them in stock or not.

Is there any essential difference between buying a traveler and buying a voter, or in the traveler who accepts a bribe and the voter who accepts the purchase money? The wonder is that the wholesale man will tolerate interference with the man on the road.

Another practice that is demoralizing business and is the reverse of fair play, is tampering with the clerk who sells over the counter of the retail store. The merchant has several brands of tea, baking powder, vegetables or condensed milk on his shelves, because all are in demand. The clerk is tipped to give special attention to one brand. The customer asks for the brand he prefers, and is offered another with the assurance that it is better. The clerk does not know or care whether it is or not, but he is to get a rake-off, and so commits a dishonest and disloyal act for gain. A corrupting part of the system is, that it not only interferes with the loyalty of the clerk to his employer, but it degrades him, and he is less to be trusted than before. He is always ready to be bought; he is always on sale.

This is done—every merchant knows it. This does not mean that every merchant permits or approves of it, or that every clerk has his price, but the temptation is offered to the clerk, the corrupt practice exists, and is worked by wealthy corporations who aim at stamping out competition.

In the clear light of day the giving of a bribe and accepting of it, is acknowledged to be a disgraceful and shameful act, an act that unmans and demoralizes.

These facts have been set forth in the hope that they may provoke discussion in the columns of The Canadian Grocer, that has always stood for clean business honesty and fairly conducted.

It would be the death-blow to this system, and clear the commercial atmosphere, if the merchant guilds would agree to handle no line of goods that had a gift system attached to it, and would discharge any employe who accepted a bribe, be he traveler on the road or clerk in the store.

Let business be conducted on the principles of fair play and fair competition.

A FIELD ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

A letter to The Grocer this week from J. Campbell Black, of Brooke, Bond & Co., from La Paz, Bolivia, who, it will be remembered, spent several weeks in Canada in the spring, tells of interesting political and financial conditions in the various States of South America. Mr. Black is quite impressed with possibilities of trade after the Panama Canal is opened, and says: "You ought to urge Canadian manufacturers to be ready to take advantage of this and to get in touch with the Pacific coast from Panama to Punta Arenas. At the present time," Mr. Black writes, "the Americans ship goods from 'Frisco. Why should Canadian canned goods come from London instead of from Vancouver?"

INGERSOLL AND ITS GROCERS

A Town of Special Departments—Most Stores Handle Crockery—Cut Glass a Paying Proposition.

(By the Canadian Grocer's Travelling Representative.)

Probably the best business town in western Ontario to-day, a town which has passed through the past crucial year with barely a ripple to disturb the serenity of its daily working life is Ingersoll, and grocers and farmers thereabouts know scarcely anything of the word "depression."

The centre of the cheese trade in the western part of Ontario, Ingersoll made money this year and the farmers roundabout have to their credit in the various branch banks somewhere around two and a quarter million dollars. The grocers, too, are well off, or should be, judging from the general appearance of their establishments.

Added Departments a Feature.

It is a town where the grocers have added departments. A. Beatty & Co. conduct a general store with a first-class grocery department. The business just now is in a state of transition, owing to the death of Mr. Smith, the manager. S. M. Fleet has recently added a butcher department, and H. D. McCarty & Son have lately added a bakery, supplying many of the other grocers in town. It is a little early to judge yet as to the success of these two latter departments, but up to the present it looks as though they would be very good paying lines. Nearly every other grocer in Ingersoll carries crockery, china and glassware, and some effective window displays are shown of dinner and tea sets, and odd broken lines of holiday and presentation articles. W. I. Hogarth has a nice window, which he changes every week, alternately using groceries and chinaware. He believes in window display and in keeping his store attractive. P. J. Sherry has a complete grocery and provision store, and with the exception of one or two of the grocers, who handle a few pork lines, is the only Ingersoll grocer who carries provisions. Whereas, elsewhere the usual thing is "groceries and provisions," in Ingersoll it is "groceries and crockery." A. J. Dyer, Chas. O'Neill and McLeod & MacBain are exclusive grocers, and have as attractive stores as are to be found in places much larger than Ingersoll. L. C. Menhennick, H. C. Healy, Jas. Henderson and W. E. Sumner are grocers who have good stores.

Bring Vegetables In.

A peculiar thing about the Ingersoll grocery trade is that while Oxford county is a magnificent agricultural country, very few vegetables and not a turnip are grown within its borders, so grocers are obliged to buy far-afield. The reason of this is not far to seek. Oxford is a dairy county, and this fact is an attraction for the condensed milk factories, which insist that farmers supplying milk to the factories shall not feed turnips to the cows.

And now a word about the milk factories, which at present appear to be cutting quite heavily into the cheese industry. The condensing factory at Ingersoll has 200 patrons who contract to supply daily a certain quantity of milk at $1.40 per 100 pounds. The rate varies for the different seasons. To some farmers this price is better than that offered by the milk factories, although it must be said in all fairness that though the cheese factory price is lower, the farmer may have back his whey, which is fed to the pigs, these in turn being raised and sold to the pork packer. In fact the whole basis of the prosperity of that part of the country is founded on the dairy industry, which has made possible the condensed milk factory, the cheese factory and the packing house, whose products are in demand always, depression or no depression.

Crockery Much in Evidence.

Crockery as a good sideline for a grocery business receives an emphatic endorsement from the grocers of Ingersoll,

H. D. McCARTY.
One of Ingersoll's Successful Grocers.

nearly everyone of whom carries a number of well-assorted lines in stock. In fact, Ingersoll grocers are merchants with sideline specialties.

"How does crockery go with groceries?" was asked S. M. Fleet, who, besides being deputy reeve of the town, is a grocer. "Splendidly; if proper care is taken to carry lines the buying public wants. Of course, it is principally a sideline which has its seasons, but there is no reason why sales should not be made the year round by the grocer who carries good stock. The seasons for best selling are Christmas-time and June and October, these months being especially chosen by wedding parties for their espousals. However, many weddings now take place at other seasons, and at this particular era of our history dishes have a great call for wedding presents. Glassware, too, is a fine seller, more particularly the cut glass lines."

Mr. Fleet devotes one side of his grocery store to the display of china, crockery and glassware. With proper handling and careful watchfulness for the needs of customers and prospective buyers, a profit of one hundred per cent. should be realized on a sale. Now, this seems a big profit, but one must remember that sales of these wares are not so frequent as in some other lines, so a big profit is necessary to induce a grocer to carry the wares.

Good Profits in Cut Glass.

A point in favor of chinaware is that there is no deterioration in the goods—that is, presuming the grocer uses his common judgment in carrying only staple and wantable lines. After some observation Mr. Fleet came to the conclusion that the better grades of cut glass were good lines for him to carry. What forced this conclusion on him was seeing some cut glassware, samples of which were offered him at a nominal figure, advantageously placed in a jewellery store window in town. A price ticket was on each article, and that price showed a clear profit of 300 per cent. Surely, thought he to himself, if my friend the jeweller can get 300 per cent. for cut glass articles I can get 100 or 150 per cent. more readily. So he immediately bought in some samples, and, while still in the experimental stage, he finds that he has justified himself, for the goods go very much faster than the cheaper and commoner glass lines. In fact, the common lines are not wanted when placed beside the brilliant cut glass. Of course, said Mr. Fleet, in conclusion, every grocer must feel out the way for himself, but his experience was that glass and chinaware were good lines to carry.

The other grocers in Ingersoll who have crockery departments bore testimony to the truth of this evidence, albeit, they stated that too many grocers carried the line for a town the size of Ingersoll, where men in other businesses had also added this line.

NEW MARKET FOR APPLES.

A Pacific coast fruit grower is trying a new market for apples, and two trial shipments of 10,000 barrels have just been made to Australia and New Zealand. J. A. Ruddick, chief of the Dairy Division, Ottawa, has received notice to this effect from a Western fruit inspector. The fact that the Canadian shipping season is on while the Antipodean orchards are barren indicates the possibility of the development of this trade, which will be a good thing for the Pacific coast fruit growers if it is developed to any extent.

HE KNEW WHAT IT DID.

A little chap in Philadelphia, whose father is a prominent merchant and, as such, never loses an opportunity to descant upon the virtues of advertising, one day asked his mother:

"May Lucy and I play at keeping store in the front room?"

"Yes," assented the mother; "but you must be very, very quiet."

"All right," said the youngster, "we'll pretend we don't advertise." — Lippincott's.

C. E. Irish, Front St. E., Toronto, is going into the manufacture of mincemeat for the trade.

Window Dressing for the Holiday

The Christmas Season Affords Splendid Opportunities for Developing This Feature of the Business—What Other Grocers Have Done to Attract Customers in Thjs Way—Window Displays in Western Ontario.

Undoubtedly one of the most important features that can be used by the grocer to get the most out of the holiday, or, for that matter, any other season, is his store window. This is about the first thing the people see in entering or passing the store, and first impressions mean a very great deal.

A Christmas Window Dressed by Geo. Rogers, 830 College Street, Toronto.

The holiday season, however, with its wealth of good things to please the eye and tickle the palate, offers a particularly good opportunity for developing this feature. Several examples of what grocers have done along this line have been presented in these columns from time to time. This week a couple of others are presented as suggestions.

The first window, displaying exclusively Christmas goods, was dressed last year by Geo. Rogers, 830 College St., Toronto, and shows several good features, which it is not necessary to explain. Like nearly every window shown, however, this one also has the fault of having too much in it, showing too many lines of goods at once. While the display made is likely to catch the eye and leave a good impression, it has a slight tendency to confuse a probable buyer and is not so forceful as if only half the lines had been displayed.

The second engraving shows a poultry display, which was made by Whitehead & Huether, Walkerton, last season. The idea is not a particularly new one, but it shows splendidly how effective such a display may be made.

New ideas in window display always pay well for the time expended in planing and executing them. This is particularly the case at the holiday season when the public is on the lookout for novelties.

GROCERY WINDOWS IN WESTERN ONTARIO.

(By a Canadian Grocer Representative.)

A visit to a strange place usually has the effect of making a person very observant of passing events—more so, perhaps, than it would do at home. To a mind susceptible to first impressions and to one trained to observe conditions and features in the grocery trade that are away from the ordinary there is one thing that holds first place, and that thing is the window display of the grocery stores. Now, speaking in a general sense, go up and down the land, and having observed well, ask yourself the question: Do the grocers pay the attention to the dressing of windows that they should? Do their windows at all compare with the dry goods man, the men's furnisher, the shoe man, the furniture man, or the dozen and one other tradesmen that might be mentioned? The answer is easy; they do not. And what is the reason? It is not that they are lazy—that is far from the truth, for grocers work, early and late; their work is hard and their hours are long—but because they do not know. They need educating, as did all the tradesmen before-mentioned. The very good window trimmer of to-day in all probability made a mighty poor fist of it when first he tried his skill at setting out goods in a window, but he kept on—kept getting better and better—and success at last crowned his efforts.

Now here are some statements that may not meet with approval, that may appear even harsh; but they are offered with all sincerity. The City of Brantford was said to be some few years ago very backward in showing taste in window display, and of late the merchants there have been coming well to the front; but there is still room for improvement, especially by the grocers. On a recent occasion but a couple of windows were worthy of notice. One was a display of imported fruits by G. Winter, Sons & Co., and the other, a china and crockery display by A. L. Vanstone. Paris and Ingersoll showed some neatly-arranged windows of chinaware, and canned goods and staple lines. But Woodstock seems to stand at the foot for displays in western Ontario ; a number of windows being filled with pumpkins, turnips, squash, apples and many other things rolled in any old way, and some of these windows were seen in pretty nice stores, too. Of course, it would be unfair to say that all the Woodstock stores were like that. Some of the better class, while showing nothing to boast of, still had fair and neat window displays ; and the Coles Co. had quite a pretty window of raisins, currants and peels.

All this is meant to show how important is this first impression. A person of taste, who really might become a good and steady customer, would be dissuaded from entering an otherwise fine store where the goods and prices are right, because of that first impression conveyed in a glance into an untidy window.

In London some very fine grocers' windows are shown at all times, by a number of merchants. Of course, they are the leading grocers, because they started out in the first place to lead, and one of the ways by which they show their leadership is by being up-to-date in window display as in everything else. Others followed and the good work goes on. The time is ripe for grocers to educate themselves along the lines of neat, proper, effective and seasonable window display, and the ripe time is now.

PHOTOGRAPH WINDOW DISPLAYS

Every trimmer should photograph his best efforts. Often they come in mighty handy for references and besides it gives one pleasure to sit down and look over the past records and note the improvement. Many times an old trim will suggest a new idea, and unless you keep your photos you are very liable to forget them entirely. Besides, good window photos are the best advertisement the trimmer has, and will add mightily in securing better positions. An experience has proved that the best results can be obtained by photographing by electric light, provided the window is properly lighted, and making a long exposure, gauged according to the power of the lens and the class or color of goods to be photographed. A window with sharp, distinct contrasts, or one containing light colored goods, does not need as long an exposure as a display of dark colored goods, or one without sharp contrasts of light and shade.

A 15-minute exposure is enough for the average well-lighted window. A poorly lighted window, or one containing dark merchandise, will require a longer exposure—20 to 30 minutes is not unusual. During all this time the camera is exposed people can pass to and fro in front of the camera without spoiling the photograph, provided they do not stand in one place for any length of time.

Sometimes the top of the window is lighted much more strongly than the bottom of it, so that the photographs always come dark at the bottom. This can sometimes be avoided by placing two or three electric lights in the bottom of the window (extensions can be run from some of the sockets in the window), and so shielding them as not to shine directly into the camera. Always remember that the window must be lighted more strongly than any objects across the street, otherwise these foreign objects will be reflected unless the screen is used. Also remember that a long exposure can not be taken if there is even the faintest wind blowing, for the slightest shaking of the camera will blurr the photograph.

ENORMOUS CATCHES OF HERRING

Eighty Tons Per Day Being Taken at Port Stanley—An Unprecedented Run.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Port Stanley, Ont. Dec. 2.—Never before in her history has this place seen such a harvest of fish as she is enjoying at the present time. The natives can think of nothing else than fish, and the nearby settlements have caught the contagion and are talking of nothing else than fish. Down there they are called "jumbo herring," or "Lake Erie herring," to give the fish its more euphonious name. In the hotels it is served as "fresh water cisco," and, perhaps, something else when other supplies run short, and in the Eastern markets it is quoted as "goldeye."

A price of a cent a pound wholesale or retail is set upon the fish at Port Stanley, while at St. Thomas, about ten miles away, the retail price is marked at four cents a pound to those who know and eight cents a pound to those who don't. London's retail price runs nearer ten cents. New York has been buying heavily at a cent a pound at Pt. Stanley. In the first three days of last week the Michigan Central Railroad took out 18 carloads of fish, each car weighing 20 tons, for New York. Detroit, Buffalo and Toronto have also bought heavily, though not to the extent that New York has.

There are two strange things in connection with this large catch. One is the immensity of the catch itself, for which no cause has as yet been assigned, and the other is that the fish confine themselves pretty much to Canadian waters. There are other ports along the Canadian side where the catch is enormous this year, but Port Stanley is recognized as the centre. Though nominally about ten concerns are engaged in fishing, and the employes number but about 80, still a great deal more men are now being taken on to help in gathering in the harvest. Newspaper reports say a hundred tons were bought in one day. This may be true, but it is guesswork, and a reliable figure sets the record at 80 tons. In fact, the day's hauls run from 65 to 80 tons. In good seasons in the past the catches ran from 50 to 60 tons a day, so it can be seen that there is an unusual condition prevailing at the Port.

Some boats come in every day and some every other day—it depends on the size of the craft. The weather has been ideal and has permitted of the nets being lifted three times a day. It is interesting to see the bustle about the waterfront when a boat comes in loaded down with fish. She is hurriedly unloaded so as to get back again to the fishing grounds. The fish are piled all about the town—on the wharves, in the storehouses, in the shops and along the sidewalks. There is more stir about the town than Port Stanley has seen in many a day. The aim is to get rid of all the fish the day it is caught, for so great is the amount of fish offering that the price depreciates even if one day old, and farmers are buying stale fish to feed to porkers at one-half cent a pound, and, in some cases, are given the fish to get them out of the way.

The unusually large catch has amazed the fishermen, and they are unable to cope with the situation. Had they been prepared the fish might have been frozen, or, perhaps, canned, but the only thing that can be done under present circumstances is to ship in refrigerator cars.

The fish are caught in gill nets, and it is said live but twenty minutes afterward. This is the reason the nets are lifted so frequently, and also why the work must be rushed. The fish themselves are a cross between a herring and a whitefish, the head resembling the former, and the body the latter. The weight of the fish runs from 1½ to 2½ pounds. Some idea of the enormous catch may be gauged if we take an average of two pounds for each fish. On the day of the big haul when 80 tons were brought in, the catch numbered 80,000 herrings. The run began on Nov. 20 and is still keeping up.

EDDY'S BUY PREMISES IN MONTREAL.

The three-storey building at the corner of St. Peter and Lemoine Streets, Montreal, formerly occupied by Laporte, Martin & Co., was purchased this week by the E. B. Eddy Co., Hull, for the use of their Montreal branch, which will take possession immediately. The new premises have 131 feet frontage and 116 feet depth. The purchase price was $82,500.

TRADE NOTES.

J. L. Rheaume, Kernie, general merchant, has assigned to Richard Tew, Toronto. The assets are placed at $7,000, which is thought to be slightly more than the liabilities. The cause of the assignment is ill-health.

Mr. Howe, of the Postum Cereal Co., Battle Creek, Mich., paid a visit to Sarnia last week and looked over that town as a possible site for the location of a branch for their industry.

Forty million whitefish spawn have been secured for the government fish hatchery at Sandwich. This is the largest amount ever secured and filled the capacity of the hatchery. Seven seines were at work, and out of nearly 40,000 fish secured not over 100 were destroyed. The fish were secured at Telegraph Island Station, near Deseronto, and at Point Anne Station, Bay of Quinte. The fish will be distributed in the various lakes throughout the Province.

PROVIDING FOR MORAL REFORM.

It is understood that the Dominion Government has under consideration and will introduce at the next session a bill aimed to prevent the system of payment of secret commissions of all kinds, whether in connection with private or public business. The measure is intended to cover such abuses as have come to light in the administration of the Marine Department in the recent investigation at Quebec.

The new bill, it has been stated, will be modelled along the lines of the British Act for "the Better Protection of Corruption," passed in August, 1906. A summary of this will give some idea of how far reaching the measure is.

The bill provides that if any agent corruptly accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain for himself or for any other person any gift or consideration as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favor or disfavor to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or if any person improperly gives or agrees to give, or offers any gift or consideration to any agent as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, he shall be liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine not exceeding £500, or to both. A similar penalty is provided for the giving or acceptance, with intent to deceive an employer, of any receipt, account, or other document in respect of which he is interested, and which contains any statement which is false or erroneous or defective in any material particulars, and which is knowingly intended to mislead the employer.

The expression "consideration" is provided to include valuable consideration of any kind. An "agent" according to the Act includes any person employed or acting for another. A person serving under the Crown or under any corporation or any municipal council or any board of guardians is an "agent" within the meaning of the Act.

The Act has been found to be working very satisfactorily in Great Britain. While comparatively few prosecutions have been made since its coming into force in January, 1907, it has been found that the fact of its being placed on the statutes has had a salutary effect in prevention of such agreements as it was intended to cover.

An interesting point in connection with the Act is as to whether it can be extended to cover the practice of "tipping," which seems to fall under the same class of agreement.

It is understood that Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, is fathering the new bill in the Canadian house. The matter comes up at a very opportune time and should receive the hearty support of both parties. In preparing the bill, however, a great deal of care should be taken. Business conditions in Canada are to some extent different to those in Great Britain, and a measure which is satisfactory there might not be entirely so here. The bill should be submitted to boards of trade, trade associations, and thoroughly practical business men before any definite steps are taken.

A GROWING EVIL.

The transient trader is looming up larger and more numerous than ever in many counties. He plies his calling with diligence and profit. While other merchants rent stores, pay taxes and water rates and hire help, this peripatetic vendor of wares and goods of all kinds goes about in many municipalities unmolested. The tax upon him is usually small and in other cases the authorities appear to be lax about making a levy or putting the machinery of the law in force. The result is that the trader, who is in a community only a few days, escapes taxation entirely, for, when he thinks that the police department is getting active, he moves elsewhere. The average retailer has no objection to the peddler or transient trader, provided he bears his just share of the cost of doing business and pays a fair license fee, but objection arises from the fact that he too frequently steers clear of a license, the amount of which is, generally speaking, much too low. If the average resident would only stop a minute to consider his own best interests he would discover that he can purchase the goods offered by visiting vendors equally as cheap in his own town, obtain better value and have the privilege of exchanging them if they are not exactly as represented, or, if dissatisfied, have his money refunded.

With the traveling representative, who is here to-day and away to-morrow having no personal interest or stake in the locality, his sole object is to sell goods, make as large a profit as possible and then seek pastures new, while buyers have, after his departure, found to their chagrin and sorrow, that the wares have been misrepresented and the prices charged extortionate. The local merchant is not a bird of passage. He contributes a just proportion of the expense of municipal government by paying taxes, local improvement rates, water bills, lighting, heating, etc., besides giving employment to a number of residents. In many instances he has thousands of dollars worth of capital invested; his goods are open for inspection; his prices reasonable, consistent with a moderate profit and the constantly increasing expense of doing business. He is of necessity a friend to the people among whom he resides and to the village or town in which he makes his living. On the ground of public spirit and loyalty to home interests, the consumer is in duty bound to give his support to the local business man in preference to the transient trader or the itinerant peddler.

SECOND GRADE SUGAR REDUCED.

An interesting feature of the sugar market this week was the reduction by the Montreal refiners of their second grades of granulated, beaver and imperial, to a basis five cents below the old price. This brings these sugars thirty cents below the standard grades, and they stand now at $4.30, barrel prices. No reason is given by the refiners for the change, but it is generally attributed to the competition of Scotch sugars, which are said to be coming in somewhat largely at the present time, and which are said to hold their own in price and quality with these second grades of local refined. The change has no bearing on the general sugar market, which remains steady with no prospects of immediate change.

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS.

Suggestions are always in order at Christmas time and if made in the proper way should aid materially in bringing in extra business The grocery store is not usually regarded as the place to go to buy Christmas gifts, but this idea can be largely dispelled A good way to do this would be to publish a list of suggestions in the local papers, or circulars might be distributed bearing these Christmas hints. Lists hung in the store would have a good effect, and if the advertisement mentioned above shows up well, it might be, as is often done, posted on the show case in full view of customers.

With a view to helping busy grocers in the formation of a list of Christmas hints, the following suggestions are given. Some of them may be new, but they are all practicable for the purpose: A box of chocolates, a bottle of olives, a bag of flour, a dainty box of figs, a pail of syrup or honey, a turkey or goose, a Christmas stocking, a can or package of tea or coffee, a dainty bit of cut glass or crockery, a box of cigars, a basket of Christmas fruit, cut flowers. This list may be extended to include many other articles in the grocer's stock. Many grocers have side lines which would make excellent gifts, such as dainty baskets, table decorations, etc. The idea is a good one and should be acted on at once. Practical and sensible gifts are always the most appreciated.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

A form letter came into the writer's hands a few days ago, in fac-simile of correspondence, which is going forward ostensibly from an association of United States exporters to business firms in Newfoundland. An extract from this will show its nature. "Having been advised by the United States consul of your prominent identification with the importation of United States products, I am directed to inquire if you are in a position to take advantage of the valuable services which this institution, supported by United States manufacturers is extending without charge to foreign buyers?"

The letter is at once an evidence of the aggressive business methods employed by exporters in the United States, and is a lesson to manufacturers and exporters in Canada.

Canada's exports to Newfoundland during the year ending June, 1908, were $1,863,784, an increase of about $250,000 over the previous year. This compares very favorably with United States business, which during the same period were $1,177,709, a decrease from the preceding year. Great Britain's export business with Newfoundland for the same time was $1,209,428.

While these figures show that Canada has a very good share of the business of the island colony they show also the possibilities of development. Canada is the natural supply house for Newfoundland and should have a large percentage of its business in nearly every line. It is incumbent on our manufacturers and exporters to study the situation and adopt more aggressive methods.

ENCOURAGE THE CLERK.

The wise grocer will encourage his clerk to compete for one of the prizes offered by this paper for the best window display and the best ad. of Christmas goods in the coming holiday season, particulars of which can be found on another page. To compete for the prize will encourage the window trimmer to put more thought into his work and more ambition into his make up. This will help both employer and clerk.

Discussing this subject an exchange suggests that clerks can improve their efficiency by suggesting ideas and plans for improving the holiday trade to their employer. Writing them out in black and white, it points out, is one of the surest tests of their reasonableness.

Unless you can put your plans on paper you won't be sure that each step is logically developed, that the whole will prove practical and effective. An idea that isn't definite enough to be written down isn't worth while, and the proprietor is anxious to give you credit for all the good there is to your idea if it is only put in such a shape that it can be studied and its value ascertained.

It isn't a bit too early to begin Christmas advertising now—not necessarily in the larger space that you will use for the ten days or two weeks just preceding Christmas, but in space large enough to properly present the advantages of early buying and to hold out temptations in the way of attractive Christmas offerings. Emphasize the early-buying argument; the greater opportunities for satisfactory selections from complete assortments; the pleasure and satisfaction of buying with more care and deliberation than will be possible when the rush sets in, and the comfort and pleasure of it.

Advertise that you will lay goods aside on payment of a small deposit and that you are in a position to deliver goods now and right up to the last minute if necessary.

Do everything you can to make Christmas shopping easy and agreeable at your store. Try to make yours the leading Christmas grocery store in town by offering every help and convenience at your command, and then, for the sake of prestige and future business, "make good" on everything you promise.

LYING IN BUSINESS.

Does it pay to lie in business? Yes—if the business man who practises it has not the ability to get along in any other way.

But it is not a good investment. It rather weakens than strengthens credit, and pays only as long as it is not discovered. Then comes the day of reckoning.

The manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer who has a business which he thinks cannot be built up on truth and square dealing had better sell out at once. He might be able to keep it propped up for a while, but some day it will tumble down and drag him and his reputation with it. And with reputation goes credit. Then he will be poor indeed.

ONE WAY TO KEEP GLASS CLEAR

The merchant sighed, for his window, full of holiday goods, was opaque with frost.

"I'd give a lot," he said, "for some method to keep my windows from frosting over in cold weather."

"I'll let you have the method you want for nothing," said the patron. "Coat the inside of your window with glycerine, and it will keep as clear in Winter as in Summer. I'm a surveyor, and in my trade we always use glycerine on our glass instruments when it's cold."

TRAVELERS DINE DECEMBER 23.

The annual banquet of the Canadian Commercial Travelers' Association will be held on Wednesday evening Dec. 23, at McConkey's, Toronto. A splendid programme is being prepared to include addresses by Hon. Geo. P. Graham and Hon. W. J. Hanna, a bright musical programme will aid in making the function attractive. At a meeting of the committee on Saturday W. J. Minto was elected chairman, W. H. Scott secretary, and E. Fielding treasurer. A complete account of the function will be given in The Canadian Grocer of the same week.

WHAT TO DO IN DECEMBER

This Month the Grocer's Harvest—Make Early Preparations for the Christmas Rush—Plan Window Dressing and Advertising to Suit the Holiday Season.

The month of December is without doubt the one busiest month of the year in the grocery trade This condition is due to the holiday aspect of its latter days. At Christmas time many give a free rein to their sympathetic proclivities, who, perhaps, during the remainder of the year, are not distinguished for such tendencies. Such being the prevailing sentiment of the season, the wise business man avails himself of this annual vulnerability to indulgence, and places his most enticing wares before the people. Many articles which are not salable at another time of the year meet with a ready sale at this season. Consequently this fact enlarges the grocer's opportunities.

Make the Store Attractive.

Perhaps the most essential part of the general scheme for drawing Christmas trade is attractive store decoration. Holly, mistletoe, and evergreens of all kinds contribute to this end The result is a matter which rests with the taste of the decorator, and he can achieve a pleasing effect or not, according to his decorative ability. Many grocers are so busy, or at least think they are, that they do not take time to give this matter sufficient attention. This is a mistake, as it gladdens the heart of all to see the Christmas season observed in this way.

Hints on Christmas Windows.

The window should be particularly attractive, and along these lines, perhaps, two suggestions would not be amiss, each of which has proven its worth. In the first case, the window is suitably lined, and, in the centre of the floor a small table is placed with a dainty set of dishes to represent the Christmas feast table. A few nice flowers on the table always lend an air of refinement. Hanging above this is a fairly large sized card requesting people to buy their supplies for Christmas early. There is another smaller card on the table with this legend upon it: "What about something to put on these dishes for Xmas?" In the soup tureen there is another card with advice regarding the lines of canned and compressed soups kept in stock. On the large platter another telling about their turkeys and so on.

The Confectionery Season.

Christmas is the great confectionery season of the year, and this fact should not be lost sight of. The percentage of profit on confectionery makes it an attractive line to handle. The pretty boxes and pleasing packages which it comes in always lend a holiday aspect to the store interior. Fruit, fine raisins and nuts should have prominent positions about the store.

Get the Books Cleaned Up Early.

In discussing Christmas preparations with a successful old grocer, he stated that he always set aside the last week of November and the first week of December for a thorough clean-up of the books. This, of course, applies only to those who extend credit. Such a course is considered prudent by this gentleman because during the holiday season accounts cannot, owing to pressure of business, be watched so closely; and, in many cases, the increased volume of individual trade added to what already stands on the books renders many a case hopeless. In this way the business is put upon a firmer basis for the Christmas trade.

Moving Window Displays.

Much has been said from time to time regarding the efficacy of moving window displays and their value as an attraction for business. Like everything else, they are valuable if they are cleverly conceived, and present some novel feature. This fact is amply borne out by the spectacle of small crowds which may always be seen standing in front of a window where one is in operation. Movement attracts attention, and when once this is done natural curiosity does the rest.

Along these lines a revolving Christmas tree might be suggested. This can be placed in the window, or in the middle of the store floor. The window, however, is preferable as there it appeals to those who might pass by, whereas, in the latter case, it is interesting only to those who have actually entered the store. Anyone with ordinary mechanical skill can build a stand which will rotate. The power required is very small, indeed, and may be supplied by a small electric motor, clock work, or a faucet motor. The decoration of the tree is a matter which rests entirely with the grocer. Candles add greatly to its appearance, but considerable difficulty in making them maintain an upright position is experienced. This, however, may be overcome by using a very simple little invention made of coppered wire. The wire can be wound around the candles making a socket, then the end of the wire bent into the form of an inverted U with one side extending down for four or five inches and an orange or apple fastened to this end, or in fact anything which is heavy enough will maintain the equilibrium of the candle. In this way the candles always stand erect, and do not lop this way and that, which certainly disturbs the harmony of the picture very much. Another advantage which this feature possesses is the fact that the holders when once constructed are practically indestructible, and may be used for an indefinite length of time.

Get the Advertising Going.

The Christmas season is an excellent time in which to do additional advertising. In some of the smaller towns, suitable dodgers may be printed and distributed while the discreet use of the papers always brings good results.

To recapitulate then, the grocer who wishes to take the fullest advantage of the season, should get his accounts in good shape before the rush commences, in order that undesirable accounts should be kept well within bounds. He should relegate to the background unseasonable goods, and bring forward those that are of a seasonable nature. He should put forth an effort to have his decorations and window dressing characterized by some novel idea, and, last, but not least, anticipate the volume of trade expected, in order that when it does come it may be satisfactorily handled.

RETAIL MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION NOTES.

The Provincial organizer, James Eadie, is this week visiting Norwood, Brighton, Hastings and other places in the interest of the Retail Merchants' Association. He will organize branches in these villages. The association is making splendid progress, several new branches having been formed of late in the smaller centres of the Province.

E. M. Trowern, secretary of the association, will go to Chatham next week where an important meeting of the local branch will be held, and Mr. Trowern will address the members.

The legislation, which will be asked of the Dominion Parliament and the Ontario Legislature is being put into shape for presentation to these bodies at the forthcoming sessions. An outline of what will be asked in the way of amendments to existing acts has already appeared in The Canadian Grocer. The specific wording of the requests will soon be in readiness.

SECURING NEW AGENCIES.

W. H. Escott, Winnipeg, has recently secured several valuable agencies. Among these are the White Swan Spice & Cereal Mills, Toronto, packers of cereals, spices, coffees, etc.; the Gwaltney-Bunkley Peanut Co., Smithfield, Virginia; Paalvast & Van der Vlis, Vlaardingen. packers of Holland herring and mackerel, and F. Fidou & Co., Smyrna, one of the leading packers of figs. Business prospects in the West are very bright now and there are many manufacturers looking for representation in Winnipeg and other western cities.

Mr. W. B. Grant, of Medicine Hat, has resigned his position with the Stewart & Tweed Co., Ltd., and will take a position with Mewburn & Co., wholesale grocers, Calgary.

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, Dec 3, 1908.

POINTERS—
Fish—Declined and in good supply.
California Fruits—Easier.
Eggs—Firm.
Sugar—Firm.
Vegetables—Declined Slightly.
Dried Fruits—Steady.
Evaporated Apples—Firm.

Owing to the close of navigation, this season of the year is marked by some quietness in wholesale circles. Many retailers find, however, on opening their goods, that they have not bought largely enough of certain lines, and these emergency calls afford considerable business to the wholesale houses until after the holiday season. Collections at country points have shown an improvement owing to the fact that farmers have realized on their crops. Locally, most lines have remained as last reported, there being a remarkable lack of fluctuation in prices. Sugar has presented nothing new, with the exception of a better demand among the confectioners. Syrups are slightly more active while molasses remains dull. Maple products, tea and coffee present no new features, likewise spices, beans, honey and poultry. Evaporated apples, although highly seasonable, are not showing as much life as they should. Canned goods are the same with the exception of fish, which are very active, owing to the Advent season, and stock is arriving in good supply and being quoted at favorable figures.

SUGAR—Hand to mouth methods characterize buying at the present time. Confectioners are laying in larger supplies, owing to the approach of the Christmas business, but general trade is only fair. Prices have been fully maintained during the week.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, Dec. 3, 1908.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Beaver and Imperial reduced 5 cents.

Malaga Raisins—Scarce.

Nuts—Selling well; Pecans scarce.

Coffee—Brisk demand.

Tea—High grades scarce.

Business continues without a great deal of change in the wholesale markets this week, with the air of briskness which began to be noted a few weeks ago continuing. There is an active demand for dried fruits of all kinds, nuts, and, with some houses, for canned goods, and in other lines a steady staple business is being done. To a large extent the Christmas buying has already been done, but from now on a fairly good sorting business is expected.

The markets as a whole are pretty steady, though a few lines have varied a little during the week.

SUGAR—The event of the week was the reduction, announced on Monday of St. Lawrence, Beaver and Imperial to a basis 30 cents below the standard granulated. This makes these sugars $4.30, 5 cents below last week's quotation. While no reason is assigned by the refiners for the change, it is generally understood that it has been made to meet the competition of Scotch sugars which are said to be coming in in some quantity. The sugar market generally is very quiet. European beet markets have developed a little firmer tone during the week, but not enough to change the situation at all. There is no sign of any change for some time.

TEAS—The local market is very quiet and wholesalers are not buying much to go into stock before Jan. 1. High flavored teas are very scarce and are exceedingly high, while lower grades are easier. Some cheap Indians are selling, but it is difficult to get teas suitable for the requirements of this market. Japans are firming up owing to a shortage in the season's crop. This is reported at 2,000,000 lbs., but this has not yet been verified.

COFFEE—Local dealers report business exceptionally good, the cold weather seeming to stimulate demand. Prices on this market continue steady. Primary markets show no striking features though advance reports show the probability of light crops in both Santos and Rio this year.

DRIED FRUITS—Demand for nearly all lines of these goods has been quite active during the week and retailers' stocks in some of these must be at least fairly well filled up. There is some talk of a scarcity of figs, of which buying has been very free. Dates also have been moving out well. Some houses are getting rather short on Malaga raisins, and it would be wisdom on the retailer's part to order what he intends of these goods at once. Considerable of these goods were held over from last year and buying this year was rather light. Valencias remain about the same and some houses are still offering pretty good inducements. The pool of California growers continues to command a good deal of attention on the coast. The growers claim to have control of 22,000 tons, or 75 to 80 per cent. of the crop. As yet no action has been taken, but if the combination is adhered to rather material results may be expected.

DODGING.

There is one expression I hear occasionally which exasperates me to a finish. That is: "I overlooked that!" A driver comes in from his trip fetching back with him the order of a good customer who had wanted those particular goods with unusual urgency. He looks at me with self-defensive eyes, and says: "Oh, yes; Mrs. Hendrick's order? I overlooked that!" I want to get you over that expression for one excellent reason. That is because its very wording carries along with it a palliation of your offense. And you will never be a good ban for yourself or anybody else until you have acquired the habit of going squarely at the kernel of the matter when you find your own self to be at fault. Adopt the attitude suggested by the reprimand of the late Professor Bascom. Two students were late for chapel. Bascom asked one why he had been late. "I failed to hear the bell, sir," he answered. "You are not excused!" said Bascom. He asked the second student what excuse he had. "I haven't any, sir," contritely answered the young man. "You are excused," said the professor. And there is the nub of the matter. Once you have fairly and fully acknowledged your fault you are so well on the way to curing it that you need no further correction from the outside. There is a further suggestion here: All true correction of faults of any kind must proceed from within. It is the old theory of helping a man to help himself. Merely to help him breeds dependence and weakness. To help him to do for himself makes a man of him, or at least puts him in the way of becoming a man again. Thus, to come right out with the self-accusation: "Yes sir, I forgot that, and it is my fault, my carelessness that has caused the trouble," speaks of healthful self-punishment which promises well for future improvement. You are so unlikely to commit the same fault again that little more need be said to you. I remember one splendid delivery boy I had some years ago. He reported some shortage. Feeling sure that our double checking system on orders was so good that shortages were not likely to occur, I told him it could not be laid to the store; it must have occurred through some mix-up in the delivery after he got out. He said not a word. But I noticed that thereafter he rapidly went over each crate of goods as he loaded his wagon. He took hardly any time in his re-check, but his orders were thereafter delivered with such accuracy that I was truly astonished, not to say immensely pleased. I had a profound respect for him always, even before that time; I reposed unlimited confidence in him thereafter. He was one of the finest boys I ever drilled and he is to-day holding a heavier position than I ever had to offer him.—Modern Grocer.

WESTERN CANNERIES NEW MANAGER.

Eastern Shareholders Looking Into Finances of Medicine Hat Concern.

The eastern shareholders of the Western Canneries Company have endorsed C. A. Flower, assistant managing director of the company, for the position of general manager rendered vacant by the resignation of F. H. Malcolm. This was done at a meeting held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on Tuesday of this week. A general gathering of the stock holders has been called for December 29th, in Regina, when the recommendation of the eastern men in favor of Mr. Flower will, it is expected, be ratified and the resignation of Mr. Malcolm, who promoted the company, accepted.

At the local meeting A. B. Berry, who presided, said that the share holders in the East believed that the funds of the company had been recklessly expended.

Mr. Flower, assistant managing director, who had called the meeting, said the plant at Medicine Hat was too expensive and well equipped to be injured by competition. He described the proposed canning process to be carried on at the plant. It would take $150,000 to put the proposition on a businesslike and shipping basis. He explained that he had before been offered the managing directorship, but had refused and would refuse until the confidence of the shareholders was his. He was getting a small salary from the company now, but hoped that the plant would be in such shape in a few years that he could rightly ask for a big salary.

F. W. Field, Toronto, gave a history of the company since its inception and suggested that the shareholders should go further into the financial statement, which had recently been presented, a statement which he characterized as the first Western Canneries balance sheet, apparently telling the truth.

At the forthcoming western meeting it was proposed to strike out all articles referring to the late managing director, and the share holders would be able to find out where they stood in the matter of voting power.

WATCH FOR THE RING.

A curious announcement appeared in a Montreal daily recently, in the classified advertising columns. It was:

RING LOST by an employe; same dropped off her finger into the machine and presumably found its way into one of the packages. The management offer five dollars reward to any one returning same.

This ad. was the result of the misfortune of one of the hands employed by the Blue Ribbon Tea Company, who pack their tea in Montreal. The employe hopes that the ring may eventually find its way back to her, though it may be months before the particular package containing it is sold and used. Meanwhile, any grocer who notices a dent which looks like a ring in his tea stock, should immediately appropriate the package for his own use, with a view to earning the reward.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Dec. 1.—One of the matters that is receiving a great deal of attention in Winnipeg to-day is the suggestion by Thompson-Seton that a World's Fair should be held in Winnipeg in 1912 to commemorate the arrival on the banks of the Red River, of the first of the Selkirk settlers. The matter is only in the tentative stage at present, but it is being very freely discussed by the press, not only of Winnipeg, but the West generally, and as yet there are no objections raised that could not be very speedily overcome. The advantages to Western Canada and indeed to Canada as a whole of such a fair, if well managed, can hardly be over-estimated. One of the most sensible suggestions that has been made so far, is that of bringing the two men who had most to do with the success of the Portland fair to Winnipeg to explain methods and give counsel and advice as to the proper means of going about such an undertaking.

There is one thing about such a fair that renders it especially attractive to Winnipeg, and that is that it would no doubt settle the long dispute as to whether the present fair grounds of the city should or should not be moved. In case of a World's Fair, they would simply have to be moved and the erection of buildings suitable to such an exhibition would be of lasting benefit to the Industrial Exhibition that is held here yearly.

By 1912 Winnipeg will have its power scheme in good shape and it will be an excellent opportunity to draw the attention of manufacturers to what the city has to offer along the line of manufacturing opportunity. Another advantage to Manitoba will be the fact that tourist travel will be more concentrated on this province and there will not be the same tendency to rush through Manitoba to the further west that has prevailed heretofore. There are to-day, within a radius of 40 miles of the city, thousands of acres of the finest farming land in the world that is not being cultivated. So many of the farmers coming in are looking for cheaper land; that farms at $30 and $35 per acre near Winnipeg have been passed over by them, but the day of that is passed to a considerable extent and the farmer with a small amount of capital is beginning to realize that 160 acres near a market like Winnipeg is a better investment than 640 in some of the remote districts of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The soil of the Red River valley is as nearly inexhaustable as soil can be, it produces the wheat that has made the West famous, frost is almost a thing unknown, and the market at the doors of the farmers is practically an unlimited one. The thing that has ailed this land in the past is that much of it has been held by the farmers of the old regime, very many of them French half-breeds, and though these settlers have many virtues, active and aggressive farming is not one of them. Within the past few years a number of business men of Winnipeg have been starting farms as sidelines. For example, a man well up in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company has a farm of 1,000 acres not 20 miles from Winnipeg. Though he has to pay a manager and hire all his work done it is paying and paying well. This present year he had 500 acres in wheat and not a bushel of it went below No. 1 Northern. There are other farms of a similar character and slowly newcomers are beginning to realize the advantage of farming in close proximity to such a market as Winnipeg. By 1912 the number of such farms will be increased and there will be enough to show the visitors from the Old Land what can be done in the vicinity of Winnipeg. In this way, particularly, the World's Fair would benefit the city. Everything that enlarges Winnipeg and increases its power as a consuming market is a more or less direct benefit to the country as a whole.

The sale of Winnipeg debentures at 96.25 net to W. A. McKenzie & Co. has been a matter of very sincere congratulation among the citizens. This time last year the city sinking fund had sunk out of sight and there was a very heavy overdraft and altogether things were in a most unsatisfactory condition. With the sale of these debentures the city overdraft is wiped out, and Winnipeg rejoices in thoroughly restored credit a small balance to the good and a clean slate, a most satisfactory condition in which to begin the new year. Not only has Winnipeg done well, but some very satisfactory sales of local improvement debentures in outside towns of the West have been made, and the financial condition generally is of a most satisfactory character in marked contrast to the same date last year.

Alberta wants a chilled meat trade and that Red Deer is the point at which such a plant should be started, seems to have been the very general opinion of a meeting of the Alberta Stock Growers, held at that point last week. There were several men present who had practical experience in such trade, both as to the putting up of the goods and the marketing of the same, and on the whole the meeting was able to report progress. Probably more aggressive steps would have been taken but for the fact that the committee appointed to inquire into this trade last year felt they were not at liberty to report until such time as their special report had been passed upon by the Department of Agriculture. The interest in the chilled meat trade is certainly increasing in Alberta and though the plants for its production may not come this year or next, they will undoubtedly come and come to stay.

Contrary to all expectations, considering the enormous number of boats offering this season, there is going to be one grand scramble for boats for the close of navigation, and already considerable premiums have been paid and others offered and not accepted. Last week the outward shipments from the head of the lakes were over four and one-half millions, and the present week will probably surpass this by many thousands of bushels. Stocks at lake fronts are much smaller than they were last year, in spite of the enormous receipts at those ports and it is understood that 5,000,000 is under contract to be shipped to Buffalo before navigation closes on Dec. 5th. The amount passing Winnipeg to date is over 43,000,000 bushels of wheat alone, and it is questionable if there will be actually two millions in store at the lakes when navigation closes. Receipts at Winnipeg have been very considerably over half a million daily for the past week.

Prices are being maintained right up to the close, but there are not wanting signs that there will be some re-action as soon as navigation is actually closed for the season, though no one seems to expect that it will be anything in the nature of a slump.

During the week the first election of officers for the Winnipeg Grain Exchange which has taken the place of the old Winnipeg Grain and Produce Exchange, was held and resulted in the presidency going to Hugh N. Baird, formerly of Montreal, who represents the Norris Co. at this point. The election was by acclamation, and Mr. Baird is the youngest man to hold that important office in Winnipeg. He is extremely popular with the trade, has good executive ability and a fine presence. The vice-president's chair went to Geo. Fisher, manager of the Scottish Co-Operative Society, which is now erecting so many elevators in the West. Mr. Fisher's election was also by acclamation, and practically carries with it the first claim to the presidency next year. Mr. Fisher has been about two years in Winnipeg and in that time has made for himself a splendid record with the Exchange. He is regarded as a well-posted grain man, careful in his trading, scrupulous in his observance of the rules of the trade, and a thoroughly good all-round man with considerable executive ability.

The American element is by no means so much in evidence in the election of officers and committees in the new Exchange as it was in the old Exchange for the past few years. The Canadian and British element decidedly carries the balance of power in the present executive and very wisely so. There is a sufficient representation of American interests for justice and courtesy and not enough for them to gain so much ascendency in the executive as was formerly the case.—H.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, December 3, 1908.)

With more seasonable weather retailers are experiencing a great improvement in their Christmas trade, and wholesalers are kept correspondingly busy with sorting orders. The approach of the close of the year finds the trade in much better spirits than a year ago. Last December the outlook was very gloomy and uncertain and the trade were inclined to be discouraged. This year conditions are different and the holiday season finds business men in optimistic mood.

GROWING VEGETABLES THE YEAR ROUND.

Carried on With Success by Three Farms Near London, Ont.—A Developing Industry.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

London, Dec. 2.—That Canada is capable of producing, and does produce, vegetables the year round, is a fact that is not generally known, and it may come as a surprise to know that quite a tidy sum is invested in and reaped from the raising and sending to market of Canadian vegetables in winter time.

With the opening of the Great Canadian West the older parts of Canada have had to look to their laurels in the matter of wheat production, and in common with the other Provinces, Ontario in accepting the changing conditions is adapting itself to mixed farming. Some counties in Western Ontario at one time given almost wholly to wheat are now devoting their attention to the dairying industry, although, perhaps, not to the extent they might. Other sections, especially those near centres of population, have gone in for the raising of garden truck, and so well satisfied are the growers that a number of them have been experimenting with winter growing, of course under glass and in hot houses.

At the present time, in the vicinity of London alone, there are three companies which have invested from $10,000 to $25,000 each in farms for the raising of vegetables and greens in the winter time, and it would be no exaggeration to say that from $75,000 to $100,000 is invested in these truck farms in close proximity to that city. There are a number of similar farms between London and Lake Erie on the south, and between London and the Detroit River on the west. It will thus be seen that probably $300,000 is invested in this industry, if so it may be called. That it must pay handsomely is evidenced by the fact that one of the London concerns paid last winter between $4,000 and $5,000 per month for fuel and running expenses.

This industry, so far as we know, has not been mentioned before, not even in Government reports, and even the fact that some of these vegetables won first prize at the recent horticultural show in Toronto went by practically unnoticed. The industry is not of mushroom growth, and the probability is that it was taken as a matter of course. It does show, however, that Canada is capable of producing more than many of us even dreamt of.

The principal lines are tomatoes, lettuce and celery, and also cucumbers and radishes. London, St. Thomas and towns in that vicinity have enjoyed these vegetables for a number of years back, and several years ago they were introduced to Detroit. That city now takes great quantities of them. Last winter some trial shipments went forward to Toronto, and this winter double the quantity will be sent. As to price, they easily undersell imported lines. The retail stores in London let tomatoes go at 10 cents a pound, or three pounds for a quarter, and lettuce sells at two bunches for 5 cents. The quality, size and color are the same as native tomatoes which are offered in early September.

WHAT IS A LEGITIMATE RETAILER?

New York Grocer Obtains Opinions of Trade Leaders and Trade Papers on Much-Discussed Question—Matter Hinges on Where He Buys.

L. J. Callanan, a retail grocer, of New York City, and an uncompromising champion of direct buying in the grocery trade, some time ago issued a circular letter asking, "What is a legitimate retailer?" In a letter to the New York Journal of Commerce a few days ago Mr. Callanan tells something of the replies he received: The letter, which is given herewith, will be of interest to grocers in Canada as well as to those across the line:

"On September 5, 1908, I addressed a letter to the president of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association asking him to define the use of the word 'legitimate-retailer.' He was reported to have said in an address which he delivered at a meeting of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, 'that while this is an organization of wholesalers, we must and should unceasingly recognize and care for, just as far as courtesy and the laws will permit us, the best rights and interests of the legitimate retailers.' I received no answer.

"I also mailed a copy of the letter to several of the trade papers, to the president and secretary of the National Retail Grocers' Association and to several of the presidents of the State associations. The answers which I received to the inquiry are as follows:

"From C. J. Kramer, president National Retail Grocers' Association: 'That where a retailer can buy in quantity he should be allowed quantity prices.'

"John A. Greene, secretary National Retail Grocers' Association, does not come out flat-footed and say that the manufacturer should not sell the retailer at the quantity price. He hedges on it.

Selling Direct to Consumer.

"C. S. Tuttle, president of New York State Association, defines a legitimate retail grocer as 'any one in the business selling direct to the consuming trade, conducting his business honestly, is a legitimate retail grocer.'

"Henry Lohmann, president of the Brooklyn Association, says. 'The dealer who sells his wares to the consuming public only, and not to be resold in the original packages again, is a legitimate retail grocer.' He recognizes hotels, restaurants and cafes or clubs as the consuming public.

"B. Bischoff, ex-president of the Brooklyn Association, says: 'In my opinion, a legitimate grocer is simply an honest grocer, a man who conducts his business in an honest and lawful manner, and by fair dealing and giving correct weight and measure endeavors to build up and hold trade.'

Buys Wherever He Chooses.

"D. E. Barnum, secretary Retail Grocers' Association, of Binghamton: 'A legitimate retail grocer is one who sells to the consumer and buys whenever, wherever and in such quantities as he chooses.'

"Joseph A. Weiss, president of the Rochester Retail Grocers' Association, answered as follows: 'If the question, "Who is a legitimate retailer?" would be answered by a retailer, he would probably say that a legitimate retailer is a grocer who conducts his business in a business like way, viz: who buys his goods at the best bargain and pays his bills when due; who sells at a living profit and refuses to support the dead beats; who respects the law of the country and the law of man, etc.'

"W. B. Timms, of Austin, Nichols & Co., New York, says: 'My individual opinion is that every retail grocer who sells goods to consumers is a legitimate retail grocer. I am sure I don't see how he could be anything else.'

'William Smedley, secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association of Philadelphia, says: 'I do not know what the president of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association means by a 'legitimate retail grocer.' The average jobber is of the opinion that a legitimate retail grocer is one who permits himself to be furnished with goods exclusively from the wholesaler and who also permits a fatherly influence to be exerted over him by the jobber; in other words, a legitimate retail grocer, according to the definition of our friends, is one who does not think or act for himself and who shall remain forever in the place he started.'

"Henry Farmer, Green Island, N.Y., says: 'My definition of a legitimate retail grocer is one who sells his goods to consumers for a fair profit, not trying to cut his brother grocer's head off and is not connected with or backed by any wholesale grocery house.'

Query a Poser.

'The American Grocer, of September 16, 1908, says: 'To the American Grocer a legitimate retailer is one who fairly and honestly distributes food products by the pound, package or other small quantity in such an efficient manner as gives him pre-eminence over the incompetent, ignorant, lazy, shiftless distributors, and who buys his goods in a way which enables him to render the public a satisfactory and imperative service at the lowest possible cost consistent with a fair return for the use of the grocer's time, money and knowledge. Large retail houses have bought for years the carload or maximum quantities established by producers, manufacturers and packers. If the magnitude of the retailer's business permits him to buy in quantity lots, I say, no producer, manufacturer or packer, has business, legal or moral right to refuse to sell the retailer direct. It looks much to me like interference with equal trade conditions to refuse to sell a "quantity" to the retailer. As it is known that the "jobber" enters the retailer's legitimate field, it is exceptionally strong business reasoning to insist that "jobber" and retailer alike should buy to-day the "quantity at quantity price." If the large retailer is unjustly operated against, he may accept the situation, but let him at once get his own brand of a good flour and his own A1 brands of staples, canned goods etc. The consumer of to-day, if he has confidence in his dealer, will accept on trial the retailer's own brands, and proving these good will buy them just as quickly every time. It also gives a definition from a man whom it considers "one of the brightest and best distributors of food products at retail," as follows:—"A legitimate retailer is a merchant who can successfully buy and sell goods and retain a legitimate profit to further promote and operate his business. The manufacturer should sell goods to anyone in the retail business who can dispose of the goods within a reasonable length of time and pay his bills promptly."'

"The Grocer and Country Merchant and Tobacconist, of San Francisco, Cal., answered as follows: 'Who is a legitimate retailer? Well, we know what Mr. Callanan means when he asks the question, so we won't beat about the bush at all. A legitimate retailer or legitimate wholesaler, either, for that matter, is one who buys his goods in the cheapest market, whether he does so by means of an exchange or otherwise. He who fails to observe this rule may be legitimate, according to Mr. Van Hoose's idea, but he is certainly not calculated to last long in the business world.'

Render Public a Service.

"The Grocery World and General Merchant gives an explanation as follows: '"Who is a legitimate retailer?" At first glance the above looked very easy, but custom and the needs of the trade have so broken into the old lines which formerly divided the wholesaler from the retailer that a definition of the modern interpretation of a retailer proves not so easy. The word is easy to define if a retailer is considered as a combination of two functions—first as a buyer and then as a seller. As a buyer, the Grocery World and General Merchant believes that the designation "retailer" should not be used at all; that small and large buyers should no longer be divided into "retailers" and "jobbers." The reason for this is that some retailers buy in the largest jobbing quantities, while some jobbers buy in what are ordinarily considered retail quantities. Hence the absurdity of classing all those who sell consumers as retailers and therefore compelling them to buy of jobbers; also of classing all who sell to the retailer as "jobbers" and permitting them to buy of the manufacturer. In buying there is only one rational way to divide buyers, and that is on the basis of quantity. All who buy more than a certain fixed quantity should be held to be jobbing buyers and should buy direct from the manufacturers. All who cannot buy in such quantities should be denied the right to buy from the manufacturer, but should buy of any other large buyer they like. And that whether the small buyer is usually considered a "jobber" or a "retailer."'

Western Canada Notes

Florida Bananas Coming to Vancouver—Also Quantities of Scotch Sugar—New Wholesale Warehouse in Saskatoon.

VANCOUVER.

November 30.—Bananas by the carload are now being brought in from Florida to the Victoria markets, which is the largest single shipment of this kind received there. The supply has generally been obtained from Seattle or Vancouver. The present shipment is much better than usual. Last year the fruit was too ripe and would not keep. The retail price is 30c.

Regular monthly shipments of sugar from Glasgow are being received in Vancouver, following the experimental consignments. These are made possible by the running to this port of the big liners from Liverpool, which give direct and prompt service. The sugar sometimes arrives in gunny sacks, which is not a favorable method of shipment, as they get damp and the sugar cakes. When the sacks are packed in barrels this condition is obviated.

R. P. Bradley has purchased the stock and goodwill of Mr. Hardy, the Mount Pleasant groceryman. He will enlarge the premises and increase the stock.

Mr. McNair the recent purchaser of Thomas Phillips' interest in the Phillips & Locklin store on Ninth Avenue, has now taken over the interest also of Mr. Locklin. Mr. Locklin will devote his time to his real estate at Point Grey for the immediate future.

J. G. Hutchinson, the pioneer grocer at Hillcrest, which is on Westminster Avenue, just at the city limits, while tearing down a greenhouse last week fell and struck his head on a piece of glass. A nasty gash was inflicted just above the eye, but the optic was not injured.

Nearly every grocer in Vancouver, personally knew Ernest C. Pendray, of Victoria, who was killed on Tuesday of last week, as he traveled here for the Pendray Soap Works, he being a partner with his father and brother. He was seated in a truck, when the horses shied at a passing automobile, and he was thrown out, the wheels of the wagon passing over his head. Death was instantaneous. He leaves a wife and two children.

German-American capitalists, who already operate a condensed milk factory at Mount Vernon, Washington State, have taken over the old factory in New Westminster, formerly occupied by Mr. Payne. Arrangements are now being made with the farmers in the surrounding district for a milk supply, and a fast gasoline boat will be placed on the river. This is not the first venture along this line on the Fraser River. Some years ago a condensed milk factory was established at Mission Junction, but this has not been in operation for some years. The Fraser River country evidently appeals to men in that line of business, as it is a fine place for dairying, and a boat on the river gives a cheap method of transportation through a large territory.

B. H. Fox, secretary-treasurer of the Kootenay Jam Company, Nelson, has left for England to arrange for the issue there of the company's prospectus. He expects to be back in January. In the meantime the work for the new factory of the company is going ahead, the contract for the excavation having been let.

New fishing companies are being spoken of to operate in northern waters with trawlers. It is pointed out that every part of the catch can be utilized in preparing the food fish for the local and Eastern markets, curing the smaller edible varieties, and turning the others into guano and oil.

Some of the apples coming in from Washington State are not of the very finest. Northern Spies to hand are not as well colored as they might be, and the lack of exposure to the sun, while on the tree has the effect of giving them a green taste, which is noticeable in contrast with mellow fruit. The apples, though, are sound and well packed and graded.

Large shipments of apples have been made recently from the Coldstream ranch at Vernon. About 35,000 boxes have been shipped, the distribution being between Winnipeg and Vancouver. Six carloads, or 3,300 boxes, were sent off to England and Australia. It is approximated that the total yield will be about 75 carloads, or 42,000 boxes, giving 560 boxes to a car. In addition, 14 carloads of potatoes were shipped. Samuel A. H. Drew, secretary of the company, states that the price of apples this year was low, and the conditions that are operating to the detriment of the fruit industry in this respect will be investigated during the winter and a remedy sought.

SASKATOON.

December 1.—T. J. Agnew has been elected president of the Farmers' Milling and Elevator Co., of Prince Albert. He succeeds the late Mayor R. S. Cook, who was president of the company since its organization.

H. J. Nosworthy, representing the Young-Thomas Soap Co., of Regina, was in town a few days ago. He stated while here that he would probably open an office in Saskatoon and work his route from here. The advantage of having the different railroads branching from here in all directions makes it easier for him to operate his territory from this point.

A new flour and feed business has been added to the numerous establishments on First Avenue by Thompson & Needham. They will handle hay, oats and stock foods, besides farm produce in the shape of potatoes, butter and eggs in wholesale and retail quantities. Seed grains will also be a specialty. J. C. Thompson comes from Orangeville, Ont., while his partner, C. A. Needham, comes from London.

The A. McDonald Co., wholesale grocers, are now doing business in their new warehouse on Twenty-third Street.

PRINCE ALBERT.

November 30.—With the building of the new line of railway from here to Battleford, the importance of Prince Albert as a wholesale centre has been greatly increased. New territory will be opened up which can best be served from this centre. Already the wholesale grocery trade of this year is better than in any previous season. With the amount of construction work and lumbering going on the outlook is very good for the future.

The local branch of G. F. & J. Galt is now doing business in their new location, the warehouse having been moved to Second Avenue. It was found to be in the way of the new line of railway, and, along with the stock of groceries, it was moved. The occasion was taken advantage of by the firm and an addition was made to the building, which adds considerably to the capacity of the structure. Salt is stored in the big basement, and an arrangement will soon be completed whereby the barrels will be transferred directly from the cars to its proper place.

There is quite a keen demand for good grade wheat for milling purposes. In fact, farmers are getting a good price for their product. This should be a stimulus for grain growers to increase their acreage next year. With the opening up of the new territory by the railway a bigger supply of wheat should be handled in the Prince Albert market. The new source of supply will enable millers to purchase cereals at the country stations along the line. This will give the mills an ample supply of raw material for flour and so to better supply the growing demand. If the demand is to be fully met it will mean a big increase in acreage under crop, as well as more mills in the near future.

KINLEY, SASK.

November 30.—Business in town is improving with the cold weather. This is fast becoming a grain centre and wheat keeps pouring in from all sides to the elevators. This is good for business as the farmers usually leave an order at the stores when they dispose of their grain. The Atlas elevator, which has a capacity of 30,000 bushels, is now complete.

Kinley has now fifteen places of business. Among them are two general stores, one restaurant, one butcher shop and two elevators.

W. Henderson has taken a position in E. S. Rose's general store.

J. E. Dalrymple, assistant freight traffic manager, C.P.R., was in town lately, and it is expected that as the result of his visit there will be a better train service soon.

Quebec and the Maritime Provinces

Grocers Represented in Westmount Council—Brisk Business in St. John—Large Apple Shipments From Halifax.

HALIFAX.

December 1.—The grocery trade is brisk in all lines. The wholesalers report a decided improvement in collections and the prospects are bright for busy times from now until Christmas. Prices on the whole are fairly steady. The moderate priees for dried fruits have made the demand good, and heavy sales are reported in these lines. The new stock of walnuts has arrived and the dealers say that the quality is very fine. The crop of prunes has been shipped and will be here in a couple of weeks. Large sales are reported of beef, pork, lard, flour, meal. The goods are being shipped principally to the outports.

The market is well supplied with all seasonable fruit. Jamaica oranges are now coming in quite freely, but the demand is only fair. They are quoted at $4.50 to $5 per barrel, repacked. Floridas are selling at $3.50 per case, and lemons at $6. Bananas are becoming very scarce and the stock offering is of very poor quality. They are selling from $2 to $2.50 per bunch. Winter pears are quoted $2 to $2.25 per half barrel, and cranberries (Nova Scotia) from $5 to $6.50 per barrel.

Apples continue to go forward to the British market in large quantities, the steamers sailing this week having from 10,000 to 14,000 barrels each. Locally there is a good demand for first-class fruit. There is an unusually large quantity of No. 3 fruit on the market, which the grocer evidently wants to work off before sending in his best stock. No. 1 Kings are quoted at $3, and Spies the same. Some good Gravensteins were offered for sale this week, and they were quickly bought up at $2.50 per barrel. The fruit was in exceptionally fine condition for so late in the season. About three hundred thousand barrels of apples have been shipped from here so far.

The produce business on Prince Edward Island this season is enormous. Up to the present time it is estimated that two hundred thousand bushels of potatoes have been exported. In addition, large quantities of turnips, oats, hogs, sheep and poultry have been sent away from the island. So far, this season 80,000 bushels of island potatoes have been received here. The receipts of oats are also very heavy, nearly 24,000 bushels coming here from the island. Potatoes are quoted at 30 cents per bushel. The steamers sailing for the West Indies and Havana are taking large quantities of produce. The shipments of potatoes to the Cuban market are very heavy. They are nearly all Nova Scotia-grown potatoes and they command a good price. Cabbage are now coming to the market in large quantities.

The receipts of fresh laid eggs are very limited. Case eggs are in good supply and are quoted at 25 cents per dozen. During the week fresh laid stock retailed at 40 cents per dozen.

Butter shows little change in price. It is in good demand and all stock marketed is quickly bought up. There is barely enough creamery butter coming to the market to supply the local demand.

Sugar is firm, and no immediate change is looked for as regards price. The West India line steamer Ocamo, which arrived here this week, landed 12,514 bags of sugar for the Acadia Sugar Refinery Company.

The fish business is rather dull at the present time. The market is heavily stocked with dry fish and the prices are very low. Large cargoes of dry codfish are now being marketed here, but the exports are comparatively light. There is a good demand for pickled fish, such as mackerel and herring. Nova Scotia mackerel in the Boston markets are bringing good prices. Fresh fish are scarce, halibut being particularly so. There is a good demand for fresh cod, haddock and halibut. Smelts are also very scarce.

It is estimated that upwards of twelve thousand quintals of dry fish were landed from vessels at Halifax this week.

The fruit and confectionery business in the old post office building at Bridgetown, which has been conducted during the past year by Mrs Longeley, has been purchased by the former proprietress, Mrs. A. J. Weir, who is opening a new stock for the Christmas trade.

ST. JOHN.

December 1.—Business continues brisk and collections are fair. There has been but slight change in prices during the past week. In the produce market eggs are exceptionally high, 50 to 60 cents a dozen being the retail quotation for fresh stock. Butter is also high and is retailing at 28c to 34c a pound.

The steamer Talisman, of the St. John-Boston-Cuba line, sailed for Havana Friday, November 20, taking away 200 drums of fish, 100 tons of hay and 5,000 barrels of potatoes. On the steamer's last trip from St. John she also had a full cargo, three-quarters of which was supplied by St. John merchants. The service is proving an even greater success than the promoters had anticipated and there is now talk of securing a steamer of greater capacity. It would not be surprising if a much larger boat is on the route in a short time.

The Maritime Commercial Travelers' Association will hold its annual banquet this year in the Royal Hotel, St. John, on Thursday, December 17.

The committee who have the arrangements in hand are now negotiating with a number of notable personages to attend and address the gathering. R. E. March, of Hampton, who was recently elected president, is the first New Brunswicker to hold that office. He will preside at the banquet. The last time St. John was favored for the occasion was four years ago. Last year's affair was held in Halifax.—W. E. H.

MONTREAL.

December 1.—The last ocean-bound boat of the season left port on Wednesday last. This was the Numidian, of the Allan Line, bound for Glasgow. In reviewing business for the year, George Hannah, passenger manager of the line, said. "Unlike the years 1906 and 1907, we are unable to report an increase in passenger traffic, and the passenger business of the year will share with all other businesses in reporting diminished business. The year 1907, its immediate predecessor, was, it is said, the greatest in the history of St. Lawrence navigation. A few years previous, business had been steadily growing from year to year, the general prosperity of the country drawing to itself large bodies of immigrants from Europe, especially from Great Britain."

Continuing, Mr. Hannah reviewed the year's business, giving figures which showed a large falling off, and in closing remarked: "It is unfortunate that the St. Lawrence route cannot provide facilities for this large efflux of people, and that annually we have to close the port in the very midst of a very large traffic. It is to be hoped the prophecy of our chief engineer of the harbor will be fulfilled at an early date, when we can at least keep navigation opened on the St. Lawrence from the port of Quebec until the middle of December, and thus be able to add to the numbers, practically the entire movement for nine months of the year, beginning April 1, instead of May 1."

W. Wesley Galbraith, of William Galbraith & Son, St. Peter St., has joined the ranks of the benedicts, having taken a wife in the person of Miss Helen Katherine Hausen, of Westmount. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. Corrigan, of the Westmount Methodist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Galbraith left for New York and other points in the United States.

Nelson Bickerdike has opened a meat provision business at 272 St. Paul St. Mr. Bickerdike engages in this business during the winter while navigation is closed, being a shipping inspector during the season.

Perhaps one of the most attractive business premises and show rooms in the city is that of the Magi Caledonia Water Co., St. Catherine St. W. The window is always neatly dressed with bottles of Caledonia water, arranged with geometrical precision. The whole place presents an appearance of quiet dignity and good taste.

Frank Cote, representing R. E. Boyd & Co., St. James St., has returned to the city from a trip through the Eastern Townships.

The grocery and provision business has a good share of representation in the Westmount City Council. The destinies of that city have been presided over for the last year by a prominent wholesale grocer of Montreal, namely, William Galbraith. In view of the expiration of his term of office, John McKergow, of A. A. Ayer & Co., was approached by a large number of his friends who requested him to accept nomination for the Mayoralty. This honor, however, Mr. McKergow felt disposed to decline, and T. A. Trenholme, the big Montreal dairyman, was asked to accept the nomination. Two other gentlemen have been put forward by their friends as candidates for the position so an interesting time is expected in this quarter where municipal contests have always possessed considerable virility.

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I.

November 30.—J. C. Manuel is making a specialty of butter, cheese and meats. He believes in getting after the business neglected by others. He handles things in a neat and attractive manner, a very important feature in a present-day grocery.

Last week A. Maclean & Co. had a unique sausage window. While very simple in character the effect was good. This week they are showing a select lot of dried fruits.

Granulated sugar still retails at five and one-half cents, and it is to be hoped that no grocer will get reckless and cut prices.

In the provincial elections held last week, Archibald J. MacDonald, senior member of A. A. MacDonald & Bros., was elected junior member for the Georgetown district. Mr. MacDonald is a Conservative and was only defeated once by a majority of one in his forty years of political life. He is a brother of Senator MacDonald, of Charlottetown.

The grocery store on the corner of Kent and Queen Streets, Charlottetown, has changed hands. It is now owned by Herbert Chappelle. Mr. Chappelle is a bright young man and intends to treat the public with the best and with promptness in delivery. Judging from what he is doing he does not intend to neglect advertising anyway.

Sanderson & Co., Charlottetown, have advertised a fifteen days' sale for cash only. The bargains they are offering in new dried fruits and staple groceries should pull trade.

It is estimated that about 1,200 tons of cheese and 250 tons of butter will represent the dairy output of the island this year. The average price of cheese was about 11¾ cents per lb., and at the last sale for the season a few weeks ago, 12 1-16 cents were paid. The cheese factories have closed and butter making is now in full swing. The price for creamery butter is from 26c to 27c per lb., and the prospects for winter butter making were never brighter. The value of the cheese exported for the year will amount to about $280,000, and of butter about $135,000.

L. A. Haszard has opened a new grocery at 173 Grafton Street, Charlottetown. It is his intention to carry a full line of groceries.

The local market stands as follows:—Eggs, 20c to 22c; butter, 21c to 27c; oats, 40c to 41c; potatoes, 18c to 20c; pork, 6½c to 7½c; hay (pressed) $8 to $8.50; geese, 8c to 9c; turkeys, 11c to 12c; chickens, 9c; fowl, 6c to 7c.

Business, now that both the federal and provincial elections are over, is good; collections are fair, and should there be good roads the prospects were never brighter for a bumper Christmas trade.

A prominent shipper, of Charlottetown, estimates that about 200,000 bushels of potatoes were exported from the island this fall. Of the early varieties the Dakota Reds proved the most profitable. Owing to the dry season, the potatoes contained more starch than usual, and the factories ground up a record quantity. Of late the farmers have not been bringing many to market, owing to the uncertain weather, and to the fact that the price, 18c to 20c, is not a strong inducement. It is evident that a large quantity will be held over until the spring.

A few smelts are being shipped already by express to New York, notwithstanding the mild weather.

London Grocers Win Bowling Match—Ottawa is Fighting the Peddling Nuisance —Guelph Has a New Butter By-law on the Market.

LONDON.

December 1.—Wholesale men are complaining that business is somewhat disappointing, the past month, as a whole, not being up to the mark. Those of them who are ordering goods do so sparingly, and to meet immediate wants, stocktaking will shortly be the order of the day. Retail trade in the city is quiet.

The London Grocers and St. Thomas bowling teams met here in a return match on Friday evening, the Londoners winning by a total of 215 pins. Millsen, of the Grocers, distinguished himself by making the high single score of 198, and tied with Collins for the high aggregate. The score:

The quarantine at border points on cattle coming in from the States of Pennsylvania and New York is having a stimulating effect on local markets, and an advance in prices is regarded as certain. It is reported that the packing companies have also received largely increased orders, and are sending out special agents to buy up cattle. About twenty cars of Canadian cattle left this city Friday night by the different railways for eastern points, and although the railways are losing to some extent in through traffic as a result of the quarantine, there is compensating advantage in the increased traffic they are getting at different points throughout this district.

It is now definitely announced that the chief condition upon which the Canadian Packing Company will rebuild its burned factory here is that it be given power to establish and control a public abattoir. As the City Council some years ago failed to induce the Legislature to grant such a privilege to another private concern, it is difficult to see how the packing company can hope to secure it now. The inclination of the legislators is in favor of leaving such establishments solely in the hands of the municipalities, as it is feared that, controlled by a private company, it would become a monopoly.

At the next meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association steps will be taken to, if possible, stop price-cutting, which is reported to be quite prevalent in the outskirts among small dealers.

GALT.

December 1.—November has gone and Galt merchants report a most gratifying increase in business over the same month last year Of course times this year were considerably better. All the stores are well stocked up for the Christmas trade and the month of December promises to be ahead of the same month in any previous year. To help this expectation along there is the fact that there are no unemployed in Galt, a statement which can probably be made by no other town in Ontario at the present time. There is no evidence of the stringent financial conditions which prevailed at this time last year, when the general opinion was to the effect that Ontario was destined to witness a five-year famine. That impression has been dispelled and the country, as far as can be ascertained, is most optimistic over the future. And so passeth the financial depression of 1907-08.

The market on Saturday was exceptionally large. Poultry and fresh meat were the features. Chickens sold at from 40c to 75c each. The very young birds, which carried a guarantee that they were tender, were retailed at 12c per pound. Eggs were 30c per dozen, and from present indications it looks as though the price of this necessity will reach a record figure during the coming winter. Butter advanced from 28c to 30c per pound, and it is just possible that a further advance will occur in the near future. However, the many creameries established through Waterloo County during the recent year will probably operate in keeping down the price of butter. Beef sold at 6½c to 7c per pound, and pork at the same figure. Potatoes were 70c per bag.

Speaking of the high prices demanded for farm produce during the present year, in conversation with your correspondent, John R. Blake, Galt's police magistrate, gave some interesting information regarding the prices prevailing 35 years ago. "At that time," said the magistrate, "you could buy eggs for from 8c to 10c per dozen, and at times I have seen them selling at six dozen for 25c. Butter, and the very best at that, was 15c per pound, and often two pounds for a shilling. Potatoes could be had in any quantity for 15c per bushel, and beef by the quarter was 2½c per pound. The farmers at that time drew in the best of hardwood, which was worth $2.50 per cord, and I have often seen as many as fifty loads lined up on the market. Other prices were equally low, a quart of the best rye whiskey could be had for 35c." On being questioned as to the difference in prices now prevailing, the magistrate gave it as his opinion that the increases were due to the phenomenal increase in exports. "In those days the farmers for miles around had to depend upon the towns nearby to purchase their produce. Now they don't have to move off their farms. An agent comes around and his butter, eggs, etc., are bought, packed and shipped to the Old Country. In those days," concluded Mr. Blake, "the boy with five cents a week spending money was counted as a prince among his companions."

The Galt Poultry Association have just completed a three-day poultry show, which was a big success. There were over 1,000 birds on exhibition and the organization will have a neat little surplus. Some little trouble was experienced in securing the market building for this event, as it was feared that the odor would be disagreeable to the marketers, but by the liberal use of disinfectants the building was in fine shape for the Saturday market. The show will be an annual affair.

Do the correspondents of The Grocer study carefully what their contemporaries in other towns and cities have to say weekly? If not, they should do so. Conditions prevailing in other towns have a direct influence in their own town, and to be able to review the condition of trade with any degree of accuracy they must necessarily be well informed on conditions generally throughout the Province. And the best way to get such information is to read what fellow correspondents report.

The municipal elections are drawing near, and in a number of towns the Retail Merchants' Association are considering nominating a candidate for aldermanic honors. The merchants of a town are necessarily vitally interested in all public events, and it seems only right that they should have a representative on the municipal board. The Galt Association will consider the matter at their next meeting.

It is understood that Ald. Radigan, the Main Street grocer, who has served faithfully during the past year, will again be a candidate for the Council, and his record should entitle him to be returned. He has a host of friends who will probably return him to office.

The Chatham correspondent is advising purchasers to give the merchant their street and number. Chatham merchants should be well satisfied that the streets are named and numbered. Galt, progressive in almost everything else, still retains the backwoods system of giving locations by the statements that So-and-So lives two doors past the ———— church, or three doors from the corner of such-and-such a street. It is possible that the Council of next year will remedy this state of affairs.

Apples are a scarce commodity in Galt just at present. That is real good apples. Of course you can get the small, scabby variety in abundance, but if you want Russets or Greenings, they will cost you $3 per barrel, and Spies are even higher. Again the export trade seems to be taking from the home consumer.

The Guelph correspondent had a real inspiration when he suggested that the merchant give "the boys" something other than the usual box of cigars. The boys would undoubtedly appreciate the smokes, but a book or a subscription to The Grocer would be equally appreciated and of a more lasting character.

The new oranges are coming in, but as yet they are extremely small and sour. The merchants are somewhat at a loss to explain this, but they confidently expect that the next shipment will be up to the standard. That they are exceptionally small may be gathered from the fact that an Italian vendor who holds a stand on the market was heard explaining on Saturday morning that he was not selling lemons, but oranges.

A number of local grocers are laying in a supply of Christmas stockings—those receptacles which hold everything from a little whistle to a bologna sausage. The demand for these novelties is said to have been large last year.

Miss Lottie Smith and Miss Isobel Anderson, who preside over the office staff at Sloan's, are enthusiastic supporters of The Grocer, and eagerly await its arrival each Friday.

OTTAWA.

December 1.—The Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association, held its semi-monthly meeting on Wednesday, November 25. When the question of peddlers, hawkers and transient traders, came up for considerable discussion. This question has been a sore one for some time to the retail merchants—and when brought before the City Council in February last, they were turned down by that body on account of the by-laws being in such a state that no one knew where they were at. However, a committee appointed recently laid the case in the hands of A. E. Fripp, M.L.A., with instructions to hunt up the old by-laws governing the peddlers, hawkers and transient traders. These were laid before the grocers on Wednesday last, and the opinion was generally expressed that the by-laws affecting the privileges of such classes of traders should be changed. It was suggested, moreover, that the condition of market by-laws generally demanded attention as the frequent changes and amendments made in connection with them had left them in more or less confused shape. The association had in its possession for use in its consideration of the question of amending market by-laws, an opinion from its solicitor, who reviewed certain sections of the laws as they stand at present and offered suggestions as to the course to be pursued in regard to modifications. The matter had been referred to a committee at a previous meeting, and the report was presented by Secretary A. G. Johnson and H. C. Ellis. It was shown that in the present position of the by-law defining the rights of peddlers it was possible for a market vendor to pay his market fee, $10, and then dispose by house to house sale of anything remaining unsold at the close of the market. This regulation served as a loophole for evasions of the real purpose of the law. Mr. Fripp expressed the opinion that the law was intended to confer a special privilege on farmers who did not sell all their produce on the market. The Transient Traders' Law, it was shown, had also proved defective in one respect in that it did not furnish a basis on which a person of the transient trader class taking orders in the city and sending the goods later could be convicted. The final action of the association in the matter was to leave the communication from Mr. Fripp in the hands of the executive, with instructions that it consider the question in the light of its information and report concerning further action. Generally speaking, Mr. Fripp's advice was to the effect that legislation be sought from the Legislature granting permission for the municipal authorities to enact such by-laws as were desired. The association decided also that the cooperation of other retail associations in the city, who are concerned in the matter, be sought.

It may be a little early to think of the Queen's birthday, but the Retail Grocers are going to do all in their power to try and prohibit the sale of firecrackers, as merchants are in a state of uneasiness around that date, and unable to enjoy the holiday, fearing fire on their premises.

Duncan Bell, manager of Bryson, Graham's grocery department, has the sympathy of the Ottawa grocers in his recent bereavement by which he lost his son through drowning, a fine young fellow only 19 years of age.

GUELPH.

December 1.—The new butter by-law, allowing the police the privilege of confiscating all short weight butter on the Guelph market, was passed by the City Council after a great deal of comment last Monday night. Some of the aldermen thought it would drive some farmers away from the market, but those few who would not come for that reason we are perhaps better without.

The Preston Retail Merchants' Association, according to notices in their windows, will not in future buy tickets or advertise on programmes for local entertainments or fall shows, except where the association as a body sanctions it.

The retail merchants ought to take up the matter of having Wyndham Street and the business sections watered after the regular season is over. Last Saturday, for instance, the dust was something awful and was piled up in doorways and on the outside displays in inches almost. It would not cost very much for those odd days and greatly improve the conditions, both for the merchants and also the great number of shoppers.

The great Winter Fair and Fat Stock Show this year promises to be equal to or better than ever this year. A great many new features are again to be introduced, among them being lectures on the butter and cheese business, and the gro-

A FINE TORONTO GROCERY—Store of D. W. Clark, 248 Avenue Road.

Chas. E. Buckler, representing the Park, Blackwell Co., Toronto, has been in the city for the past week calling on the trade and reports on business favorably. The boys are always glad to see "Buck," as he always has with him the Quaker Oats Smile—and that laugh!

E. Vandiver, of Bon Ami, has been calling on the trade. He is still as short as ever in size, but able to send in the long orders.

President Wm. York, of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association, has returned to his business from Boston, where he had been visiting his daughter, a nurse, who has been seriously ill with typhoid fever.

The first orange benefit this fall was held on Saturday, and quite a large number were sold.

A local grocer had a new customer call the other day and leave quite an order to be charged. He then called up the grocers in the neighborhood where the party lived to find out something about their credit, and found out they were not good pay, so, of course, did not fill the order. Another grocer called up by 'phone and warned a brother grocer that one of this kind of people had gone down in his neighborhood to live, but even after the warning the grocer was done to the tune of $20. In that case there is not much sympathy.

cers are all making preparations for the increase in trade which always comes with the crowd. Special sales should be in order from now until after the Fair.

The grocers will be all glad to have The Canadian Grocer take a fall out of the peddling nuisance.

Last year at Winter Fair time the local grocers and butchers allowed the Toronto people to gobble up all the turkeys and choice fowl at only a shade better prices than they had to pay at Christmas time themselves, and then had to scour the country within a radius of 50 miles on the day before Christmas for turkeys at any price to fill their orders, and, in some cases, were unable to do so. Some of the turkeys did not arrive until 11 o'clock on Christmas Eve also. What is the matter with getting after these choice fowl which are always at the Fair and keeping the best for our own trade and letting the other fellows do the chasing after the inferior quality? The farmers nearly all bring in their best before the last day, even if they do not show them.

The retail merchants at their last meeting spent the evening in talking municipal affairs and decided to take an active part in the coming municipal elections.

The market on Saturday was well attended and business was good in the stores, but there were no changes in prices.

STRATFORD.

December 1.—At the Saturday market eggs were few and expensive, only the lucky ones getting away with a dozen at an outlay of less than 30c. The egg scarcity has been noticed for the past two weeks, but it seems to be improving very little and the price is going up each week. Fowl of every kind was plentiful. Chickens, ducks, geese or turkeys could all be procured at a reasonable rate, and there was a good demand. The vegetable market was much the same as last week. Potatoes sold from 60c to 80c per bag, the other prices remaining the same. The greatest change noticed was the price of live hogs, which dropped from $6.10 to $5.75. The market was overcrowded, the Whyte Packing Co. having more than they could handle.

Four carloads of California oranges landed in Stratford during the last ten days for Jas. Lloyd, wholesale fruit dealer. Mr. Lloyd must expect Santa Claus to distribute a lot of oranges for him in this district.

Scooping is the order of the day now with most grocers. The Xmas fruits are all in, and raisins, currants, peels, icings, candies and nuts are finding their way into 1, 2 and 3-lb. parcels. Everybody is getting ready for the Xmas rush. The show windows and store interiors are receiving special attention, and when everything is finished Stratford's stores will present a gala appearance in keeping with this Yuletide season.

The McLeod Milling Co. report good business, their average shipment of flour being two cars a day. In the near future the company intend increasing the capacity of their plant from 300 to 500 bbls. per day.

The R. S. Jones grocery has undergone a slight change within the last few weeks. Anderson Stevenson has become a member of the firm and will undertake the general management, while R. S. Jones will look after the financial end. The firm's name will remain unchanged.

A few of the stores have fine window displays this week. H. T. Barker has two good windows. The background of one is very prettily made; cornflake cartons form a half circle, with a complete circle enclosing a cross on top. The Barnsdale Trading Company's large centre window is showing some fine fruit. White and red form the color scheme, which is carried out even to the price tickets which are white ink on red cardboard.

This year, as in previous years, the seeded raisin boxes have had some rough handling In one grocer's shipment of 25 boxes the ends of no less than 10 boxes had been broken open, and, in some cases, the packages had been emptied out on the floor. If the wholesalers or brokers would advise the shippers to put large nails in the boxes it would often save loss to the grocers.

For a few days during the past week there appeared to be a date famine threatening the city. The wholesalers and a number of retailers alike were minus the palm fruit. One lady mentioned having visited four stores without being able to procure any.

BRACEBRIDGE.

December 1.—Trade here has been rather brisk lately owing to fear of early closing of navigation, heavy shipments of flour, oats, baled hay and merchandise leaving the town wharf daily.

Ed. Kirk, of Kirk Bros., and W. J. Reid, of Hutchison Bros., have returned from a successful hunting trip, the party of seven bringing out twelve fine deer.

Peter Hutchison spent a few days in Toronto last week on business.

Armstrong & Gillespie are having the interior of their store remodeled and repainted, which, when finished, will make it very attractive.

Merchants in town are already arranging for Christmas displays, which this year bid to be greater than ever.

One thing a merchant can do in cooperation with other people in making the front street attractive in any town, is the arranging of window displays, making in itself a welcome to visitors. In Bracebridge window dressing is becoming one of the main factors of attraction in the stores.

I have noticed in some of your correspondence reports of the reduction of peddlers' licenses. I think this a very grave offense, one which the merchants should fight against. My idea is that a license cannot be too high to protect the merchants, who pay such large taxes in all places.

HAMILTON.

As usual the cutting starts on fruit. One grocer succeeded in getting a lot of low grade Valencias which he has put out at 4 lbs. for 25c, but these kind of people do as much harm to themselves as to others and the price of good raisins here is such that any respectable grocer can sell 3 lbs. for 25c and look happy, and to tell the plain truth, I think the consumer is very much pleased with this price, considering the excellent quality of the fruit. The stores are all preparing for the holiday business. People are buying fruits freely and I think the Christmas trade will be as good as last year.

In canned goods prices are sagging. We expect to see tomatoes at 70c before 1st January. They are offering pretty close to that now. Some excellent tomatoes have been put up this year; one line in particular, put up in a new factory; the finest hand-packed goods I ever saw. Peas and corn are selling freely, in most cases at 3 tins for 25c.

A suggestion has been made that all peddlers shall wear a badge, and that all peddling wagons should bear license card and number for the protection of all who have dealings with them. I would like to hear what some of your correspondents think of this.

KINGSTON.

December 1.—Now the winter is setting in, burglaries are in order. Sneak thieves tried to get into Crawford's and Reddin & Co.'s warehouses last week, but the only "Comfort" they got was opening soap boxes. The rummaging and looks of things next morning when the doors were opened and the "Sunlight" let in was a "Surprise" to the clerks and storehousemen.

Carloads of Delaware potatoes are coming in. I am told they are one and the same as Green Mountains. They are bringing 80c to 90c a bag.

Albert Glover brought a car of apples in last week. He has the finest building for storing in the city.

The retail shoe dealers, after a year's experience of selling for cash, have decided to continue the good work and have published the following resolution in a local paper:—"That the merchants' determination to continue the cash system be properly advertised so that they would not be put to the unpleasant necessity of declining to send goods on approval or to charge the same." Will grocers ever reach this happy state? No bills, no books, no hooks, no crooks; nothing but the sunny smile that does not come off. I hope some improvement will come. Retailers have accounts out for months and even years. It is our own fault. We are too easy and afraid of losing trade.

The same old trouble is again asserting itself, viz.: poor parchment paper on rolls and prints. Will the country grocer never learn that it is poor policy not to buy better butter paper. It is one of the most annoying things in the trade for the city merchant to get butter wrapped in poor paper. Often he gets mad and writes the sender to take it back, as he can't be bothered scraping it off. Bad packing is another grievance. Rolls and prints are thrown into a big packing case like cordwood and when opened up are twisted and distorted like a railway wreck. The manufacturers should stop making only the pure parchment. That's the proper way to stop it.

Fred. Armstrong, of Warren Bros., Toronto., was here a few days last week and booked many orders. He has a way of meeting one you can't help but like.

Grocers are filling up their cellars with potatoes, expecting cold weather soon.

W. Richardson has opened up a grocery on Stuart Street.

The citizens want either D. Couper or C. J. Graham to run for the mayoralty. The former is a leading grocer. The latter, once a grocer, now is a large property holder and contractor. Both strenuously opposed the compulsory by-law. D. Couper can hardly spare the time, as he has a lot to attend to, being secretary and treasurer of several societies. If he gets in he will be Dig N Hustle.

ST. CATHARINES.

December 1.—New laid eggs, 40c per dozen. This was the price many paid on the market Saturday last for the genuine article. The grocers report a splendid sale for case eggs, at from 27c to 30c per dozen. Naturally the economical housewife will use case eggs wherever possible when new laid stock are so high in price.

Andrew Foster & Co. have moved from the corner of James and King Streets to King Street, directly opposite the market. Their new store has been refitted and redecorated throughout and looks quite inviting. It is a splendid location for both farm and city trade.

The grocers of Niagara Falls report that many of their customers are being offered canned fruits and vegetables by the case at wholesale prices direct from a canning factory.

PETERBORO.

December 1.—"The Christmas trade is going to be done within the two weeks prior to the holiday," was the remark made by a local grocer to the correspondent a few days ago. As the grocers all know, the trade either extends over a period of six or eight weeks, or it is done within a fortnight. The latter appears to be the case in Peterboro this year, principally because the householders are desirous of keeping their money as long as possible, and also because it is not quite so plentiful as in former years. Last year a local merchant was short $2,000 a couple of days before Christmas Saturday, in comparison with his sales of the previous year, but when the Saturday night arrived he had made up the deficiency, illustrating the fact that purchasing is sometimes peculiar. The grocers find that there are not very large quantities of fruit being sold as yet, but they expect business to become brighter in a couple of weeks' time.

Large quantities of apples are being brought in from the country for shipment to Montreal.

CHATHAM.

December 1.—Christmas trade among the grocers is still rather quiet, though a big business is anticipated when the rush actually commences. Local grocers are many of them bidding for the Christmas trade already by means of suitable window displays, while quite a few have commenced their Christmas advertising. Nevertheless, the public has not yet responded to any perceptible extent, though there has been quite a little extra demand for raisins and currants. Customers, especially those from the country, are still prone to defer their Christmas purchases till the last moment. A merchant who doubled his advertising space some days ago and commenced to bid for the Christmas trade states that the result has been evidenced by a largely increased number of people who have come to look at Christmas goods; but that sales have been only slightly augmented, the public evidently desiring to find out first what the more dilatory dealers would have to offer later in the season. Nevertheless, merchants who have commenced the campaign early are quite confident of securing good results, as the Christmas season is still young.

Richard Reaume, St. Clair Street, has joined the ranks of the advertising grocers, and is making good use of newspaper space just now. Vegetables, butter, eggs and other farm produce at rock bottom prices are featured by Mr. Reaume.

J. W. Dyer, St. Clair Street, is making considerable use of "locals" in pushing his Christmas trade.

Lorne A. Cummings, who has been conducting a small grocery at the corner of Raleigh Street and Lorne Ave., for some months past, made an assignment to W. G. Burrows under date of Nov. 24. The creditors' meeting took place at Chatham on Dec. 2, Dec. 14 being fixed as the date of distribution. The liabilities are placed at $900, while assets are given as $290. Mr. Cummings was a popular young fellow and rather aggressive in the conduct of his business, but he was hampered by lack of capital to start with, and by illness in his family.

Edward Crompton has purchased R. H. Johnston's grocery business at Bothwell, and is now in possession.

Frank C. Peck, the Jeannette's Creek grocer, has added a Stimpson computing scale to his store equipment.

J. Clark & Sons' grocery at Ridgetown had a narrow escape from a disastrous fire last week. A lamp, left in the cellar, was accidentally upset, the burner catching fire on the outside. Wm. Noble, a clerk, with prompt presence of mind, carried the lamp outdoors, and the balance of the incipient blaze was quickly extinguished.

E. Hanson, the Wheatley grocer and general merchant, opened his handsome new store on Saturday. A big grocery and crockery department is a feature. Mr. Hanson started business in 1892, and his trade has steadily increased. The new store has over 7,000 square feet floor space.

The splendid sugar beet crop throughout this part of the country this year has revived the talk of a Chatham sugar factory. The district helps supply three factories, the Wallaceburg concern, and two in Michigan, 700 carloads being shipped over the G.T.R. alone. It is believed that the beets which now go to Michigan would be more than ample to supply a local factory, and Chairman W. H. Westman of the civic industrial committee, is now corresponding with four different American concerns, with a view to having a factory located here.

Though it is very difficult to secure definite figures on the subject, there is little doubt that this year's bean crop is considerably short of expectations, and little, if any, in excess of that of last yeat. Individual yields vary according to the location from poor to good. On the whole, there is less fault found with the quality than with the quantity. Marketing is a trifle slow, the prices offered here ranging from $1.40 to $1.55 a bushel, the latter for choice hand-picked.

A. J. Holland, popularly known as Bert, who formerly conducted a grocery in Blenheim, passed away last week at Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he went some two months ago in search of health. He was 31 years of age.

A missionary campaign in Canada on behalf of British manufacturers is foreshadowed in a letter recently received by Wm. Anderson, president of the Chatham branch of the Retail Merchants' Association.

In the Sept. 4 issue of The Canadian Grocer appeared a strenuous letter from Mr. Anderson with reference to the poor quality of Canadian fruit jars, a subject which has excited much vigorous comment the last few years in the ranks of the retail trade. Mr. Anderson has just received a response which not only shows the far-reaching nature of The Grocer's circulation, but further indicates an early entry of British competition into the glass jar field in Canada. A few days ago Mr. Anderson received a letter from Walter Stark, of Toronto House, Stanley Avenue, Wallasey, Cheshire, who states that he expects in the course of a few weeks to tour Canada in the interests of British manufactured goods. He will represent a list of British manufacturers, and will endeavor by means of free lectures, illustrated by magic lantern slides, to interest Canadian retailers and consumers in British goods. He intends also to show what is being done by British manufacturers in the line of benefitting their employes by providing for manufacture amid surroundings conducive to good health and happiness; this, with a view to leading Canadians, particularly in the West, to build on "Garden City" lines. Literature will also be distributed. Mr. Stark will also aim to secure Canadian agents for British manufacturing firms, with a view to pushing and handling their Canadian trade. Incidentally, Mr. Stark writes as follows with reference to the fruit jar question: "It so happens that I can have agencies for an exceptionally desirable line of British made fruit bottles for sterilizing, and a splendid French bottle with screw rings, similar to your Gem bottle, but very superior in every respect. I am sure you will understand me when I say that I cannot afford to waste time over this line, but if the trade will support me, I shall be prepared to put a line of bottles before them that will be very much to their advantage in every respect." The writer also solicited information with respect to Canadian prices for these goods and the method of handling, asking Mr. Anderson to lay the matter before the Chatham Retail Merchants' Association.

ST. THOMAS.

December 1.—Both markets were very largely attended on Saturday, but prices remained mostly unchanged and there were no features to break the usual routine. Eggs were unusually scarce, however, and sold for as high as 32c per doz.; butter, 27c to 28c; potatoes, 90c per bag of 90 lbs., notwithstanding the fact that two of the leading butcher shops were selling eggs retail at 25c per dozen, and butter 27c per pound. Poultry was in large supply, but were disposed of, chickens, 35c to 40c; ducks, 50c to 60c, and geese at from 90c to $1.10.

The St. Thomas Pork Packing Co. held their first annual stockholders' meeting on Saturday, and it was well attended, a tasty luncheon being served. Quite a number of grocers were present. Objections were raised to the practice of selling the hotels, and the excuse offered was that other packers sold hotels. It is expected that such a practice will be discontinued, as the president and board stated that they were in favor of protecting the retailer.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Dec. 2, 1908.

Owing to the inactivity of the cheese market at the present time, which is due to the close of navigation, considerable speculation regarding the size of stocks held in Canada, is being indulged in. Some sources of information seem to think that the figures would compare favorably with last year, but from other sources, and, in fact, the large majority of cases, the opinion is held that there is a shortage as compared with last year. At present it is rather difficult to arrive at a fair estimate, as some time ago considerable cheese was bought up which dropped out of sight. There is, however, more or less of this sort of buying done every year, and it is just this which makes a fair estimate of the size of stocks difficult at the end of the season. Total receipts of cheese since May 1 up to Nov. 28 were 1,889,697 boxes, as against 2,045,552 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. The local market is quiet and steady, with Westerns quoted at 12¼c to 12½c, and Easterns at 11¾c to 12c.

The butter market locally is very active with a good demand for the best grades, especially of creamery stock. The tendency at the present seems to indicate a slightly quieter condition, as many have laid by good supplies, and are not buying so heavily at present. Dairy lines are in fairly good supply, and not as much in demand as creamery lines. Considerable business has been doing with outside points, much stock going both east and west. Stocks held here are estimated at 60,000 to 70,000 packages, which, it is thought, will be just about adequate for requirements. There is a general feeling that the expected stringency in the butter market will not materialize, in any case, not to such an extent as was anticipated. This condition of affairs has been a source of considerable relief in some quarters, where a shortage was expected. It is thought that prices have gone about as high as they are likely to go. Receipts of butter for the season since May 1 up to Nov. 28 were 393,665 packages, against 391,099 packages for the corresponding period of last year. Locally the market is firm, with finest creamery quoted at 27c in round lots, and 27½c to 28c in a jobbing way.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, Dec. 3, 1908.

The exceedingly good local business enjoyed by Canadian packers for several weeks past has fallen off noticeably during the week and has caused rather a change in the situation. Up till this week the packers were taking all the hogs that came in and were kept busy supplying the immediate demand at home and building up their stocks, sending only a normal amount of their product to the British market.

The fact that fresh meat, venison and poultry have been so plentiful recently has taken the consumers' attention from pork products, and the demand has fallen off materially during the week. With a heavy run of hogs last week packers were forced to make other disposal of their produce, so somewhat large shipments are being made to the British market. Conditions are none too favorable for this class of business. The Danes and Irish have both been sending in pretty heavy supplies and the market is pretty well supplied. Fifty to fifty-one shillings are being offered for Canadian bacon, and this is none too attractive for the packer. However, as a result of the above-mentioned local conditions the goods must go forward.

Last week with the price from $6 to $6.15 f.o.b. saw the heaviest deliveries for a good many weeks. The beginning of the present week also saw a beginning of a similar heavy run and it is expected to continue. Prices, however, owing to the packers' stocks and the large supply of hogs have dropped to $5.75. Packers expect that this week will see the end of the heavy run and that supplies of live animals will be lighter hereafter. This will put another phase on the situation.

The New York Journal of Commerce, in its weekly review of the situation in United States markets, says:

"Wholly by way of surprise Saturday's receipts of hogs at Chicago were unusually small, being posted on the Produce Exchange as 9,000, in place of the 23,000 expected. It is thought, however, that the holiday had interfered with the loading, which would account for the sudden falling off. As a matter of fact, there were more than twice as many left over from Friday. The prospects for Monday include 46,000, so that the run will undoubtedly come up to the average. The weights show an improvement, being 212 lbs., against as low as 204 earlier in the season. While nothing like settled conditions are expected until the heavy arrivals begin to show a permanent falling off, which, in the opinion of many, will not be until well along into January, the market, nevertheless, responds even to a momentary lessening of the supply. Saturday's speculative market was very firm at the opening and a good buying demand developed, which advanced prices 12 to 20 points, but when the heavy run for Monday was indicated, the market immediately re-acted and lost all that it had gained since the opening."

BUTTER—Creamery butter, on account of its scarcity, is firm and may sell in come cases a few cents above quoted prices, but dairy butter is more plentiful and much of it, as usual, is not good. It is the opinion of dealers that prices of butter will not go higher. A large percentage of the people cannot afford to pay these high prices and will use less, and in consequence the supply will exceed the demand.

EASTERN FISH MARKETS BRIGHTENING.

Fred. Magee, Pt. Elgin, N.B., and Pictou, N.S., an Eastern packer of lobsters, whose brands are widely distributed through Canada, was in Toronto this week, passing through to Chicago and Winnipeg. Mr. Magee reports as misleading the prevailing impression that the lobster catch is greater this year than last. The general depression in trade throughout the world has curtailed the consumption of luxuries of which lobsters is one. Conditions now are improving and an appreciable change for the better has been noted during the past three months. Fish markets are brightening up generally. Prices undoubtedly have reached rock bottom, and stocks are out of first hands and pretty well consolidated in the hands of the large packers.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Reduction of Mexican Wheat Duties Firms Markets—Cutting in Eastern Provinces—Oatmeal Declined in Montreal.

There is little change to note in any of these markets this week. A decline of 10c on oatmeal in Montreal seems to be more or less local, there being no indication of any easier markets in Ontario.

The flour trade continues good, with excellent demand from country points. More attention, too, is being paid also to export business, which has assumed a more satisfactory basis, and considerable flour is going forward to British points. The announcement on Tuesday of the reduction on Mexican wheat duties caused a slight firming up of the markets generally in sympathy with the spurt in foreign markets. The effect, however, is not expected to be materially felt in Canada.

Reports of cutting in flour in the eastern provinces are verified here, and there seems to be somewhat of a little war going on. This, however, is not likely to affect western prices.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Export enquiry has led to a few sales, stock going forward to England and South Africa. Up till the present, bids have not rendered the export business profitable, but lately they have assumed a more attractive appearance. Locally trade is good as there is considerable stock going forward to country points, stocks being extremely low in these quarters.

FLOUR—The situation remains practically unchanged, with prices steady, though the feeling is somewhat firmer as a result of the discussion of a reduction in duty by the Mexican Government. Business is a little less brisk than for several weeks, but millers generally are keeping busy filling up their stocks. Some attention is being paid to export business, sales being made in Glasgow and other British cities on a good basis.

REDUCTION OF MEXICAN GRAIN DUTY.

The duty on grain entering Mexico has been reduced from $1.50 gold to 50c gold per 225 lbs. to become effective December 15, and to continue in force until April 30. It is thought this is held out as an attraction for Canada's wheat but as navigation has closed, and rail rates are so high no advantage is likely to result to Canadian shippers.

TAKING NEW POSITION IN WINNIPEG.

Newton A. Hill, who during the past five years represented L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, in Central Ontario, Manitoba, Northwest and British Columbia, has severed his connection with that company to assume the position of head buyer for Foley Bros., Larson & Co., Winnipeg. In assuming this important position Mr. Hill brings to it a ripe experience as a thorough grocer, one who has served his time behind a retail counter, through the jobbing house, then as traveling salesman in different sections of Canada. He represented H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, for a number of years on the ground just vacated, and both his Toronto and Montreal principals speak of him with the highest terms of satisfaction for his conscientious work, and his tact and judgment. As a grocer Mr. Hill is thoroughly acquainted with all lines, and for many years has made a specialty of high-class and fancy groceries, which his connection with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie gave him ample scope to do. The Canadian Grocer wishes him every success in his new sphere.

MAY CANCEL TREATY WITH FRANCE.

Government Will Act if French Senate Refuses to Ratify New Agreement.

Will the treaty of 1893 between Canada and France be abolished as a result of the French Senate refusing, so far, to ratify the French-Canadian trade convention or the new treaty of 1907? If the latter is not endorsed by the French Senate at an early date, it is likely that the treaty made fifteen years ago by Sir Charles Tupper will be abrogated.

Under the conditions of the latter treaty Canada is practically precluded from entering into any preferential tariff agreements with other foreign countries, because of the clause in the treaty which compels Canada to give to France and her colonies the benefits of the Canadian minimum tariff against any other country.

In the new treaty negotiated last year by Hon. Messrs. Fielding and Brodeur this clause was eliminated, and the way was opened for Canada to enter into reciprocal trade treaties with Germany, Belgium, or other countries, if so desired, without at the same time being compelled to extend to France all the concessions granted to these countries. The treaty of 1893 is of little practical value to Canada, the only item of export benefiting to any extent by the reduced French tariff being lobsters. Consequently, if the French Senate continues its opposition to the new treaty Canada will lose nothing by the abrogation of the existing treaty, and will be in a position to consider reciprocal tariff proposals next year with other European powers.

No definite news, says an Ottawa despatch, has been received from Paris as to whether or not the French Government can induce the Senate to ratify the treaty during the present session. The tenor of the last despatch received, however, indicated that there was a fair prospect that the opposition to the new treaty may be withdrawn, and news of its ratification may be received at any time. The Senate has been in session since October.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Good Demand for Christmas Fruits—Vegetables a Little Easier—Advent Season Brightens Up Fish Markets.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Changes have been numerous this week. Prices have shown a tendency to ease off in some cases, while other lines have firmed up. Among the latter, apples are most prominent, many varieties have advanced $1.50 a barrel. Cranberries of the Cape Cod variety are selling at $12 instead of $10, as reported last week. The orange market is in a healthy condition, and there are many lines offering at reasonable prices. Lemons are quoted at $3 in the 300 size. Bananas are cheaper by 25c. Other lines have not altered. Demand has been good.

VEGETABLES—Leading lines are a little easier this week, with the exception of Spanish onions, which are a little higher now, selling at $3.25 to $3.50. Leeks are offering at 10c to 15c, and parsnips are bringing 60c a bag. Beets are easier at 60c; also onions in large bags, which are offering at $1.25. There is a good demand for potatoes, which has kept the price firm. Other lines are unchanged.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Florida oranges are arriving in good condition and with less decay than other years, and are selling for $2.25 to $2.50, a little lower than last week. There is said to be the best crop since 1885. California navels are ripening very slowly owing to the very warm weather. Contrary to the general opinion, oranges keep growing during warm weather and ripen and color in cool weather. Although some of the Northern navels are arriving, it is feared that very few of the good Southern deep-colored varieties will reach us in time for Christmas. The increase in the quantity of fruit consumed from year to year is remarkable. Six years ago the first car of grape fruit (Shaddock) was sold in Toronto. Now from 12 to 15 carloads are used. On the whole, there is very little change in the market. Almeria grapes were quoted last week for $5.25 to $5.50, this week they are held as high as $7. Apples are firmer, the inferior grades being pretty well off the market.

change in potatoes, which are of excellent quality, and only the Ontario product is handled, at from 65c to 70c per bag by the car, and 75c to dealers delivered in smaller quantities.

FISH—Owing to the mild weather the frozen fish trade is slack. The closed season for trout and white fish now being over, and the weather favorable, it is expected that a good supply of fresh stock will be in in a few days, which will sell for 10c to 11c a pound. THE SITUATION IN POTATOES

An Early Season Demand for Eastern Delawares — Later Prices Advance and Ontarios Are Also Held Firmly—Peculiar Local Conditions.

A great deal of speculation regarding potatoes has been and is going on up and down the country this fall, more especially in Ontario and the Maritime Provinces, and many grocers are asking themselves and others, "Where are we at?" and "What is a reasonable price for us to pay for potatoes?"

An answer to these questions is rather difficult to give off-hand, especially so while buying is purely of a speculative character, and not based on the law of supply and demand. There is, too, the matter of locality to be taken into consideration. However, a brief review of the season's operations may help in deciding what is to be the ruling price of potatoes this winter.

Taking the world's crop as a whole, this year sees a larger number of potatoes marketed than was the case a year ago. This is due principally to the more favorable weather conditions which have prevailed. Europe reports a bumper crop, and it is not unlikely that a larger quantity of European tubers will find their way across the ocean to the cities of the Eastern States than ever before. New York has already commenced to import—somewhat earlier than in the past.

U. S. Crop Only Average.

In the United States generally there has not been more than a fair average crop of potatoes, and in some localities it has been decidedly short, while almost every district in Canada reports a very full crop. The Southern and Atlantic States have seasons of their own and need not be taken into consideration, but the Eastern and Northern States put their potatoes on the market about the same time as Canada does, and so are quite a factor in determining the ruling price.

The west and central potato territories of the United States report only a fair average, and the great potato states of New England, with the exception of Maine, have been very short. As a consequence, Boston has been buying in New Brunswick and eastern Canadian Delawares have been finding their way as far south as Philadelphia.

Maine, on the other hand, has a record crop this year, some 16,000,000 bushels being dug this season, a large proportion of this coming from the famous potato section in and around Aroostok county. But while this is the case in Maine, the surrounding states do not come so well to the front, and the demand is not at all satisfied. This accounts for the demand for eastern Delawares.

Eastern Delawares Advanced.

Of course, this exportation of Canadian Delawares affects the Canadian markets further west. Until the summer of this year, even until the early fall, New Brunswick Delawares were in great demand in Quebec, and in Ontario as far west as Toronto. The hotels, clubs and practically all the big buyers in Toronto would have none but Eastern Delawares, but with the advent of United States buyers in New Brunswick the price advanced, and to-day it would cost at least 87 cents a bag to bring a carload to Toronto. This would mean a retail price of say $1 a bag, and no one wants potatoes at that price—not just now, at any rate. This gives a chance for Ontario potatoes to come into their own, and they have shown that they can command as high a price as 85 cents a bag, though the range is from 75c up, carlots may be had around 70c, and it would not be surprising to find that some arrivals come in at 65c. Even this last figure is a 5-cent advance over the price of some few weeks ago. At the present time Toronto is drawing potatoes from within a radius of 100 miles of the city. This means a bigger demand than usual on some smaller centres within that circle, with a consequent higher price.

Good Stocks in Western Ontario.

The Ontario markets west of Toronto appear to show somewhat of a glut in the potato line. A number of Brantford and London grocers bought at 75c, thinking they had a good thing, and shortly thereafter the price dropped to 60c, owing to the big supplies locally, and perhaps in some measure due to the fact that Michigan has a larger crop than was at first anticipated, which precludes the possibility of any large quantities of Ontario potatoes going to the markets of Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo or Buffalo this year. However, 60c was too low entirely for any potato, and more especially for the Caradoc township tuber, which is the standard of quality in western Ontario, so the price has advanced 5c and the indications are that a further advance of 5c per bag will take place within a few days in the larger market centres west of Toronto, and a still further advance before Christmastime. The men who bought at 75c, if they have confidence, may not be so badly off after all, in fact, they should pull out even at least. Many grocers in the London district who held off while the market was declining, hoping to buy at rock-bottom, are now stocking-up at 65c.

A Good Price in St. Thomas.

One strange feature in the potato situation is shown in the case of St. Thomas. There the season opened at $1.25 a bag, which dropped to $1.15 when supplies became freer. The farmers kept the price at this figure, although the highest price obtained in London—16 miles away—at the same time was only 85c, which was afterwards cut to 75c. There appeared to be a chance for someone to make money, especially as things continued thus for several weeks, until a couple of grocers brought in two cars from London, and immediately the St. Thomas price dropped to 85c. Now potatoes can be had at about 5c above the London figures, and this seems reasonable, because while the distance is not great, still it is a little too far for freight-handling competition between railways and teams.

Hamilton and St. Catharines do not appear to have been so badly off, as the Niagara district produces a native potato which is of a standard high enough to grade well and there has not been the great fluctuation noted in other centres.

After considering the question from the standpoint of farmer, dealer, grocer and consumer, it seems likely, yes, probable, that prices will firm up, and when they do that 75c is not an unreasonable price for the grocer to pay for potatoes in Toronto, and 70c in the larger centres west of that city, with a range of 5c above that figure where good native potatoes are not procurable.

TRAVELERS AND FIRE ESCAPES.

It seems that many hotels in the province have not proper fire escapes. They must comply with the law, otherwise commercial travelers intend to blacklist them. The hotelmen must provide suitable apparatus and the men on the road will back up the movement for the enforcement of the regulations. Any house that has not fire escapes will be "listed." A big deputation will wait upon Hon. Mr. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, in the near future to see if the License Department cannot bring the offending hotelkeepers to time.

Speaking of a recent experience, a grip man, who has spent some years on the road, said: "In some instances the apparatus they do provide is a joke. I took a room in a small town hotel not long ago, and noticed a coil of rope in the corner near the window. It was the fire escape. I caught it and gave it one little jerk. It snapped like a piece of twine. Suppose I had thrown myself out the window in case of fire, trusting to the strength of that rope. It would be my finish, all right."

TRADE NOTES.

John Schmidt, grocer, Toronto, has sold to L. Blueman.

H. D. L. Boxall, grocer, Toronto, has been succeeded by F. LaPlante.

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

The Manufacture of Peanut Butter, Its Food Value and the Various Ways in Which it May Be Used.

PEANUT BUTTER—An article that of recent years has come somewhat largely into use for various purposes, and yet something which grocers generally know very little about is peanut butter.

The composition of the article is simple enough—it is simply peanuts ground to a paste—but the various processes in its manufacture are worth noticing. The best quality peanut butter is made from No. 1 Spanish shelled peanuts, these being richer in oil than the Virginia variety. The shelled nuts are divided into three grades, No. 1, including only perfect, unbroken nuts and no foreign material, and No. 2, which has a percentage of nuts which have been split in cracking and some slightly withered. Of course, the butter can be made from any class of nuts, but it has been found of advantage to use only the best. Some manufacturers blend the Spanish and Virginia nuts.

The first process in the manufacture of the product and the only one in which there is really any secret, is the roasting. On this depends the quality, and the work must be done by an expert, just as in the case of coffee, The roasting is done quickly and is continued till the nuts reach a rich golden brown.

After the roasting the nuts are run through a fan-like machine, which blows off the husks. They then pass to the grinder. While any fine pulverizer will do the work ordinarily, special machinery has been built particularly adapted to the oily, sticky nature of the product. After grinding, a percentage of pure Liverpool salt is added, and the fine, oily paste is ready to be packed in jars or bottles for sale.

Peanut butter has been found by actual test to contain thirty-five per cent. of oil. The presence of this oil is often very noticeable in jars which have been undisturbed for some time, when it will rise to the top and it will appear as if a quantity of olive oil had been poured on top of the product. Many grocers have wondered at this and suspected it was a sign of something wrong. It is really an evidence of the purity of the product. This should be pointed out to customers. A thorough stirring will cause the oil to disappear and mix with the paste.

The food value of peanut butter is one of its striking features. Prof. F. E. Jaffa, of California University, in a recent report to President Roosevelt, stated that as a result of tests he had found ten cents' worth of peanuts to contain more than twice the protein and six times the amount of energy-producing material contained in a porterhouse steak. Ten cents' worth of peanut butter, about a third of a pound, contains about 2,000 heat calories. The same amount expended for eggs, for instance, brings back only 400 calories; for sirloin steak about 600 calories, and for milk about 1,400 calories. The economy of peanut butter as a body-building material is thus at once evident.

The uses to which the product is being put are becoming quite varied. Primarily, of course, as a convenient filling for sandwiches, its convenience and excellence are readily recognized. Latterly many people, particularly those of the less wealthy classes, are beginning to use it in place of cow's butter on bread. In the United States it is also coming to be largely used as shortening for cooking, and for this purpose it is said to make a ready substitute for animal fat. Reduced to a cream, with water, it makes a good salad dressing, and sweetened with sugar, it is said to do well as a cake filling. Handled in other ways it adds a distinct flavor to candy and sauces.

PERSONAL NOTES.

D. G. Whidden, the Sweet Milk Condensing Co., Laurentides, Que., was in Toronto this week.

A. G. Williams, manager of the Dillon Grocery Co., Dillon, Sask., was recently married to Miss Margaret Christman, of Elmira, Ont.

T. W. Robinson, one of the leading merchants of Moose Jaw, who has just returned from a five months' trip through Great Britain and Europe, and who is spending some time in Toronto before returning to the West, was a caller at The Grocer office this week. "There is no country like Canada," said Mr. Robinson. "I was in Norway, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Italy, France, Spain and Great Britain, and nowhere did I see such opportunities as are offering here. If the people of some of these countries could see the possibilities in Canada there wouldn't be anybody left there." Mr. Robinson is a striking example of the results which come from close attention to business and application of modern methods in the West.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

"Canned by Griffin"

Until you break the shell of a nut you are wholly in the dark as to the quality of the meat therein. A fair exterior often covers an unsatisfactory interior. Quality depends largely upon reputation—you've got to be guided by that. Be guided, then (if seeking highest quality in Canned Fruits), by these three words, "Canned by Griffin," and you'll be absolutely safe.

Griffin's Canned Fruits

Purity is a paramount quality of Cox's Gelatine and the maintaining of that purity is the unalterable purpose of the makers. The Standard is fixed—it does not deviate a hair's breadth from year to year.

COX'S

THE PURE GELATINE

COX'S

As sugar is sugar and tea is tea, so Gelatine is "Cox's" the world over. By it all other brands are judged.
It is always the same pure Gelatine.

Are Your Credit Customers Safe?

No! They'll run you into bankruptcy in a jiffy if you'll let them. And still you can't get too independent with this class of trade—it is good money when it does come.

ALLISON COUPON BOOKS

point the way to safety. They guard against loss, they hold the credit customer in check, save time, money and trouble.

How They Work

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

Quality Always Tells

Whatever other attraction your store may have for customers there's one attraction you cannot get along without —quality. In the long run, quality is what keeps you in business.

Old Homestead Brand

Canned Fruits and Vegetables are all that can be desired by your most fastidious customer. The contents of every Old Homestead can have been selected with a view to pleasing the purity-loving consumer. Our method of processing is characterized by the most scrupulous cleanliness, while our entire plant is sanitary and thoroughly up-to-date.

Get After the Peddler

Reach out after the tea trade he is getting—the trade that rightfully belongs to you. But how is this to be done? Only by educating your customers to purchase goods the peddler cannot buy. You can never hope to win back the peddler's tea trade by selling bulk teas. The peddler sells that.

Concentrate your energy and selling force on pushing a tea of supreme quality—well advertised and having an enormous sale—a tea the peddler cannot buy. Such a tea is

"SALADA"

The most profitable tea for a grocer to handle. For seventeen years it has maintained its prestige as the highest grade tea. A constantly increasing demand shows its great value to every grocer as a sure trade-winner. With "SALADA" you serve the public well, and the peddler can't take your trade.

As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty-mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident—its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

It Is Never Safe To Assume That Your Customers Will Not Buy Better Tea

Never take it for granted that your customers will not buy a better grade of tea. If you are not trying to sell it to them, your wide-awake competitor is very likely to be. The safe way is to push your tea trade steadily toward a higher level. Another very important reason for it is that nothing else will inspire as much confidence in you and in your store, give you as firm a hold upon your present trade and draw as many new customers to you.

There is also a larger profit in selling high grade teas.

It shows good business judgment on your part to sell the very best tea possible at the price. A personal test of Red Rose Tea will convince you that it is the best tea on the market in each of its different grades. In recommending Red Rose Tea to your customers your reputation for selling good tea is assured.

TRY RECOMMENDING RED ROSE TEA to your customers. Keep it up for two months and see the improvement in your tea trade.

Mail orders have our very prompt attention.

Save Your Elbow Grease

PATENT APPLIED FOR

The Kaiser Wax Pad AND IRON CLEANER

The Cleaner that Cleans Well.
The Wax Pad that Waxes Well.

REQUIRES BUT HALF THE TIME TO DO AN IRONING.

Every Housekeeper dreads ironing day, especially so, when she has a lot of Shirt-Waists, Mens Shirts, Collars Cuffs, etc. to Iron; She always wants to obtain a high gloss finish equal to First Class Laundries, and after hard work by the use of Common Wax, a lot of rubbing and Polishing utterly fails.

The Kaiser Iron Cleaner & Wax Pad will clean and smooth the rough and rusty places that have accumulated since the last time they were used By rubbing the hot Iron quickly over the corrugated surface you remove immediately starch or rust. You will be delighted when you try the Iron to see how smoothly it slips over the linen and the result will be no difference from first class laundry work. When the wax is entirely exhausted in the outer 2 Layers on both sides, remove it—and you still will have 2 Layers left.

WHY YOU SHOULD USE IT.

The cost to use it is almost nothing.
The Iron does not adhere to the fabric.
It imparts a splendid perfume to the clothes.
It saves a great deal of hard work in Ironing.
It gives an excellent lustre to the Linen or Muslin.
The Clothes will remain clean and neat much longer.
It gives the Clothes a much better finish than by any other method.
It makes the Iron pass smoothly over the surface and does not leave any black streaks or spots.

Every Housekeeper that cares to do Good Work should have one. We claim there is nothing on the market is its equal to the KAISER IRON CLEANER & WAX PAD, for quickness, convenience, satisfactory work or economy.

Manufacturing Beet Sugar in Canada

A History of the Industry and Its Development With Particular Reference to the Several Factories Involved—Ontario the Principal Field of Industry, Though a Factory is Operating Successfully in Alberta.

Written specially for Canadian Grocer.

Eight years, approximately, have passed since Canada first experimented with home-grown and home-manufactured sugar, and even yet it is a debatable question in the minds of many whether the experiment is a failure or success. The answer to that question, "failure or success?" depends largely on the enquirer's viewpoint.

From one point of view, it may be claimed that the experiment was a success as much as four years ago, through the undeniable circumstance that, four years ago, one of the factories proved that beet sugar could be made in Ontario at a profit and has, incidentally, continued to prove this fact, by continuing to make and sell it at a profit

From another point of view the claim may be made that, because of the five factories established some years ago, only two are at the present moment in successful operation, the experiment is a failure.

It is not my purpose to answer the question, but merely to present the actual facts, as nearly as they can be ascertained.

Inspired by Michigan.

The Ontario beet sugar industry drew its inspiration from Michigan. There, the industry is from all accounts a success, over 50 factories, it is claimed, being in operation. Michigan capitalists were largely interested in the first factories established in this country; and even before that, beets were grown in Kent for the factory at Marine City.

The pioneer of the Ontario industry was D. A. Gordon, M.P., of Wallaceburg. Mr. Gordon had been in close touch for many years with Michigan capitalists, having interests of his own in the State. He was ambitious also to build up the town of Wallaceburg, of which in 1900 he was mayor, and of which he has been for the past 20 years or more the moving spirit. The idea suggested itself to him that sufficient sugar beets could be grown in Kent to enable a factory to be run in that county on a paying basis. The one location for such a factory, was, of course, Wallaceburg. To a man of Mr. Gordon's civic patriotism, that conclusion came quite naturally. Accordingly the Wallaceburg Sugar Company was incorporated some eight years ago.

BEET SUGAR IN CANADA—Factory of the Wallaceburg Sugar Co., at Wallaceburg, Ont.

Other Companies Started.

A number of other Ontario beet sugar companies were formed shortly after, and four factories in all were actually erected.

Wallaceburg and Dresden have been historic rivals in the northern part of Kent County, and, with Wallaceburg the possessor of a sugar factory in the making, it was but natural that the sister town of Dresden should want one. Wallaceburg had voted its factory substantial aid; and when Dresden received a proposition from Captain Davidson, a wealthy Michigan capitalist, to establish a sugar factory in that town on certain terms, the proposition was enthusiastically endorsed. A loan was granted, and in addition exemption from taxes for a certain period of years.

Wiarton, likewise, granted certain concessions to secure the location of a sugar factory there, while the fourth factory of the quartette—though not the fourth in point of time—was established by the Ontario Sugar Company at Berlin.

Behind the establishment of these factories were many influences. Civic patriotism and the desire of municipalities more or less enterprising to secure big industries, played the usual part. Enthusiastic kings of industry, who saw in Canada a big market for home-grown sugar and did not stop to count the cost, placed themselves behind the movement. And, finally, there was a certain amount of real business sense involved as well—that business sense, the possession of which has spelled the making and the lack of which has spelled the downfall of many an industry.

Were Many Obstacles.

The newly-formed companies found, in many cases to the surprise of capitalists concerned, that the beet sugar business was a very serious proposition. It was not, as quite a few enthusiasts had pictured, merely a matter of squeezing the beets, drying the juice, and selling the sugar.

In the first place, before any sugar could be made, the factories had to secure their beets. The sugar beet was a new proposition to the farmer, and one at which he looked rather askance. A few beets had been grown in Kent for the Michigan factories; elsewhere, the sugar beet was a crop absolutely new and untried.

Having secured the beets, the manufacture of these beets into sugar involved chemical processes which required the services of experts. These experts in turn commanded high salaries and were hard to procure, most of them being Belgians and Germans, with extensive experience in the factories of European countries.

And finally, the sugar had to be sold —in the face of a deep-rooted prejudice in the public mind in favor of "cane" as against "beet" sugar.

To combat these three obstacles involved the expenditure of large sums of money. At the outset, a big investment was required for the factory, and a still bigger investment for the machinery, practically all of which was imported. Then, to secure the beets, missionaries, technically styled "agriculturists," were sent out among the farmers, and large sums spent in educating the farming community with regard to the crop. Even more money was required for the running of the factories and the manufacture of the sugar; and finally, it was only after considerable expense that an effective system of handling the manufactured product was built up.

Must Secure Beets.

A vital matter was the securing of sufficient beets for the factory to be run profitably. A beet sugar factory, let it be understood, is a stupendous concern. During the season it runs night and day without cessation, as long as the beet supply lasts. In addition to the investment in the factory and plant a heavy fixed initial expenditure is involved, which is practically the same, whether the factory runs five weeks or five months. A factory must run in the neighborhood of three months, anyway, before it can show a profit.

And, to run, the factory must have the beets. To secure these beets was one of the titanic labors which confronted the Canadian beet sugar magnates at the outset of their operations.

A few beets had been grown in Kent for Michigan factories. The Germans about Berlin, probably had some conception of the nature of the crop, as a result of the success of the industry in Germany. Otherwise, it was an absolutely new thing in Ontario. And the Ontario farmer naturally "shied" at the innovation, preferring someone else to do his experimenting for him.

BEET SUGAR IN CANADA—Factory of the Knight Sugar Co., at Raymond, Alberta.

A Difficult Task.

The writer has a vivid recollection of the efforts made in 1900 and 1901 to educate the farmers of Kent with regard to the growing of beets. The first year the two Kent factories were in operation, only a few farmers took hold. In Kent beets insufficient for one factory were divided between two; and the result was, in each case, a short and consequently unprofitable "campaign." Farmers complained that the growing of beets was too expensive and too laborious, and that the crop did not pay. Either the farmer had to employ help at high wages—wages high, not on account of the value of the work done, but on account of the scarcity of help —or else he had to work himself in a manner which, though it came naturally enough to the trained Belgian, was to the Canadian farmer intolerable.

Nevertheless there was a larger crop in 1902 than in 1901. Farmers who had grown a few acres profitably increased their acreage; syndicates were formed to handle large tracts of sugar beets; and many farmers, out of curiosity, put in small plots of one, two or three acres, just for the sake of experiment.

Turning Point in 1902.

The year 1902 was probably the turning point in beet growing, so far as Southwestern Ontario was concerned. It is true that many large growers lost money. The syndicates, particularly, employing men and boys to cultivate the beets at wages out of all proportion to the possible returns, went behind. But 1902 was a very wet year, the almost continuous rains throughout the summer proving disastrous to cereal and other crops. The beets proved probably the sole exception. Farmers who in the spring had sown a few acres with the utmost reluctance, in the fall were vehement in their declarations that sugar beets were the safest crop they had ever known.

From that moment the beet-growing industry ceased to be a doubtful experiment and became an assured success. The importation of skilled Belgian laborers helped to solve the problem of cultivation. The fact that the price was fixed beforehand contrasted favorably with the fluctuations in price to which wheat and other cereals were subject. At the session of the Tariff Commission at Wallaceburg in 1905, emphatic testimony was given by farmers as to the profitable nature of the crop. Profits ranging from $50 an acre up were cited. And, since 1902, the acreage in Southwestern Ontario has steadily grown; and beets are grown as far north as Huron and as far west as Elgin and Middlesex. To-day the expensive agricultural staff is being dispensed with by the Wallaceburg factory, and farmers are invited to send in their contracts by mail, instead of waiting to be solicited, as in other years.

Training to Manufacture.

After securing the beets, the next problem was their successful manufacture. At the outset, there were probably not half a dozen Canadians who understood the making of beet sugar, if, in fact, there were any at all. The Michigan methods were by no means the most approved. Experts had to be imported, some from the States, many (and these the most expensive) from Belgium and Germany. In short, the Canadian manufacturer had to place his trust in foreigners. The only remedy was to educate Canadians in the science of sugar making. This has been and is being done, particularly at Wallaceburg, the foreigners being gradually replaced by Canadians. D. A. Gordon, M.P., manager of the Wallaceburg factory and probably the one Canadian best versed in the industry, has several times visited Europe, inspecting the German and Austrian factories, and studying the industry, and the result has been to decrease the expense and increase the efficiency of the Wallaceburg concern.

Marketing the Product.

Nor with the crop of beets sufficiently large, with the science of manufacture mastered, and with the expenses of manufacture reduced to a minimum, were the difficulties of the Canadian beet sugar companies over. There still remained the task of selling the product.

Manufacturers found that there existed in the public mind a strong prejudice against "beet" sugar. This originated it is understood at the commencement of the European industry, when the first importations of beet sugar were made from the Old World. The science of manufacture was then in the experimental stage, and the product as a result was inferior to the "cane" sugar to which the people had been accustomed. The prejudice was steadily and sedulously fostered by the refiners, even after the raw beet sugar largely took the place of the raw cane; and the public, accustomed to regard cane sugar as superior and all refined sugar as cane sugar, looked askance at the home manufactured product which was unmistakable and unequivocally a product of the beet. Unfortunately for the native industry, the early product of some of the Canadian factories by its inferiority helped to enhance the prejudice.

Furthermore, the attitude of the wholesalers toward the new industry apparently savored of hostility. In the end, the Canadian manufacturers had to build up their own selling system. There was a time indeed when in Chatham, approximately 18 miles distant from Wallaceburg, it was impossible to procure from the grocery trade a pound of Wallaceburg sugar. That time is long since past, however, and, though the home manufactured product is as yet a comparatively small item, the original difficulty in finding a market has passed away.

Government Aid.

Such were the difficulties which faced the industry, and which have been conquered, thus far, by only one factory: namely, the Wallaceburg concern.

The establishment of a new industry—particularly of a new farming industry—measurably justified Government assistance. This was given at first in the form of a bounty. Later, this bounty was done away with. Instead, however, the Government permitted the Canadian manufacturer to import at a reduced tariff rate two pounds of raw sugar for every pound manufactured in the country.

A Peculiar Difficulty.

A difficulty with the Canadian factories right from the start lay in the fact that they operated only three or four months in the year. The sugar "campaign" opened the latter part of September. It closed in February. This was under the most favorable conditions; in the early years of the industry the campaign was usually finished before Christmas. Hence, a big factory and much expensive machinery, involving a large investment of capital, must lie idle three-fourths of the year; owing to the fact that no means had been devised of keeping the beets so that they could be manufactured all the year round. In Germany some growers "pit" the beets, just as potato growers do in this country; the pits being opened as occasion demands. In addition, branch factories are established at convenient points throughout the beet country, in which the process of reducing the beet to sugar is carried on to a certain point; the product then being stored to be later refined at the central factory.

By this means the European factories are enabled to operate practically all the year round. The industry in this country has not, however, reached the same advanced stage.

May Import Raw Sugar.

The Dominion Government, however, by permitting the importation of raw sugar for refining, put the industry on a more paying basis. The Canadian factory was enabled to run practically all year round. At the same time, the move encouraged the growing of beets, owing to the fact that the amount of raw sugar, the importation of which was permitted at the reduced rate, was based on the amount of sugar manufactured from Canadian beets. To secure this raw sugar on favorable terms, the Canadian manufacturer must buy the farmers' beets and manufacture them into sugar. The scheme is worthy of an artist. Under it the Wallaceburg factory has, since Feb. 1, 1908, (up to about a month ago) imported 19,000 tons of raw sugar, the amount of the tariff paid at the reduced rate being $167,764. If this system of aid be continued, the industry should inevitably grow, till, in time, with factories throughout the country and with a large majority of the farmers engaged to a greater or lesser extent in beet raising, the importation of foreign raw sugar may be done away with altogether.

The Dresden Factory.

Much has been made of the failure or withdrawal of several of the factories established shortly after the Wallaceburg concern.

The first of these factories to withdraw from the field was the Dresden concern. As previously stated, Dresden gave it financial aid, also exemption from taxes. A factory, probably at that time the finest of the four, was erected, and manufacturing operations were commenced.

But, after operating a year, a hitch occurred between the company and the town. The latter discovered that, under the strict letter of the agreement the municipality was able to collect taxes from the company. The municipality forthwith insisted on doing so. Protests were in vain.

Captain Davidson, the "man behind" the factory, decided on strong measures. Possibly the fact that the supply of beets grown in Kent was insufficient for the two factories had some influence on him. Anyway, the taxes were paid—and the Dresden Sugar Company and the municipality parted company. The factory was dismantled, and the machinery removed to Janesville, Wis., where it is now running. The town, which had enjoyed a glorious boom while the factory was building, enjoyed a second and almost equal boom from the fact that labor was required to pull it down. Incidentally, the Wallaceburg concern benefited, securing an increased acreage of sugar beets.

The Wiarton Concern.

Another factory had been established at Wiarton. According to the statement of a gentleman interested, the factory was built on too small a scale to enable the manufacture to be carried on profitably. Furthermore, the territory around Wiarton was unsuited for the growing of beets. These are the two explanations given for the failure of the northern company. The fact is indisputable that it failed.

The Wiarton machinery was shipped to Los Angeles, California, for use in a distillery, being sent out of the country as "returned American goods."

The Keystone Company.

In this connection, the history of the Keystone Sugar Company is of passing interest. This was a concern which first endeavored to locate near Whitby and Oshawa. The plant of the Wiarton factory was to be purchased and improved. Negotiations were entered into with the municipality of Whitby, but these eventually fell through. Later, the company endeavored to secure certain concessions from Chatham. A by-law providing for a $75,000 loan was submitted in 1906 and defeated. Later it was again submitted and carried by a narrow majority; but the terms were never taken advantage of, and the concern, becoming involved in difficulties, was eventually wound up.

The Berlin Company.

The history of the Berlin company is even more familiar to the average reader. From time to time references to this concern have appeared in the columns of The Grocer. Though it has met with difficulties, it is nevertheless unfair to pronounce it a failure. A reorganization is now understood to be in progress. With an excellent country to draw from, in the heart of a people of more than average intelligence and industry, the concern should eventually succeed. What has been done at Wallaceburg can be done at Berlin.

The Raymond, Alta., Factory.

The Knight Sugar Company commenced operations at Raymond, Alta., in 1903, began, in fact, when there was no town in sight, this ultimately growing up around the factory. The company are operating with a good deal of success, though their output is not exceedingly large. The sugar manufactured is sold to a great extent in the country adjacent to the factory, though some quantities are shipped to the coast.

What of the Future?

These are some of the salient facts in connection with the industry; some of the obstacles which it has met. The future of the industry is still problematical. Under careful management the Wallaceburg factory was, prior to the institution of the clause which provided for the importation of raw sugar at reduced rates, a success. It enjoyed several good seasons. It has benefited as a result of the clause permitting the importation of foreign raw sugar. While this permits the factory to run a greater part of the year, at the same time there has been a development in the manufacture of sugar from Canadian beets.

Will other companies, taught by the mistakes of their predecessors, repeat the success of the Wallaceburg concern? This is a question which time alone will answer. At the present moment there seems little indication of the establishment of new beet sugar factories in Ontario. The financial stringency has, of course, hindered the enterprise of capitalists who might otherwise have been tempted to enter the field. Nevertheless, there is perennial talk in Chatham of the establishment of a beet factory there, in the heart of the beet-growing country, and, with a steady increase in beet acreage, a second factory in Kent may eventually be forthcoming. In any case, the Canadian industry has, despite many obstacles, made a beginning.

JOBBERS GET PROFIT ON "FREE DEALS."

At the convention of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association of the United States, at Atlantic City, in June, a resolution was passed regarding the allowing of a profit by the manufacturers on goods handled under "free deals."

The executive committee of the association has been carrying on a campaign among manufacturers to have this recognized and the first fruits of this came to light this week in a circular letter from Secretary Alfred Beckman. In it he advises that hereafter the Diamond Match Company will allow a profit on all free goods handled by distributors within their territory.

THE WISE SPIDER.

The spider wove his filmy web
Across an open door,
Through which a merchant found his way
Into and out his store.

"Don't weave your web across the door,"
A bee was heard to say;
"Because, before you've got it done,
'Twill all be swept away."

"I guess I know what I'm about,"
Replied the spider wise;
"I know the man who runs this store;
He doesn't advertise."

HANDLING BISCUITS AND CONFETIONERY

Grocers Should Study Their Biscuit Trade With a View to Better Profits—Suggestions Regarding Arrangement—Confectionery a Profitable Department.

During the holiday season, when the introduction of a more varied line of stock becomes practicable and in fact essential, the grocer has an opportunity of observing the advantages and disadvantages which certain new lines have brought him. Invariably after the rush of the holidays he may find that he has introduced a line for which the demand continues and in this way a new source of profit is established. In some few cases the venture may not have proved profitable. The general increase in profits, notwithstanding this, is ample to compensate him for these small losses, and he proceeds through the year with a new line which has proved profitable after the Christmas trial.

Every practical grocer carries throughout the year a fair variety of biscuits and confectionery which is augmented at times to meet the extraordinary demands of the public. Within a certain compass these are staple articles and should be kept by every grocer. When the profit bringing aspect of them is considered it is found that they are first class lines, consequently it is well to do a little experimenting in order to get the best results from them. In the first place, biscuits of all descriptions are rather difficult to look after, and suffer immensely if not handled with the utmost care. Customers when buying biscuits like to get them unbroken and fresh, and if the retailer can always insure these two qualifications he will build up a good business. To do this, however, requires some experience.

The class of goods that it is possible to carry depends in a large measure on the community in which the grocery is located. Cheap boarding houses and other institutions of this sort require a cheaper grade than private houses, but if a grocer is going to derive the best results, it is necessary to educate the people to use the better lines. The possibilities of profit are much better with the better grades, and there is always the satisfaction of knowing that the "memory of quality remains long after the price is forgotten."

It has been everyone's experience to go into a grocery and ask for a pound of abernethys perhaps and see the clerk move eight or ten cases before he came to the one which was wanted. This proceeding is a waste of time, to say nothing of the patience which it tries. A good way to overcome this difficulty is to have the boxes placed in racks constructed for the purpose. When this is done any box which is required can be easily secured. This method, however, applies more especially to the large wooden boxes in which the cheaper grades and the large sellers are shipped. The small tin boxes are usually placed to good advantage on the ordinary grocery shelf. One grocer had a temporary partition placed in the centre of his store, and the shelves were constructed for the purpose of displaying biscuits. This plan was found to work very successfully. The entire stock could be seen at a glance, and the boxes were kept in compact shape, thereby insuring a fresh appearance when taken from their place, and not affording much opportunity for dust and dirt to collect.

Dealing with boxes which are generally of the imported class is more difficult, as they are not always shaped like the domestic stock, which have become practically standardized. From these observations it is fair to assume that the biscuit end of a grocery business can be profitably run if a few essential precautions are noted. Primarily it is necessary for the grocer to exercise good judgment in selecting a stock suited to the community in which he is established, then he must learn about the quantity which goes into consumption and regulate his stock so as to always have biscuits which look and taste as though they were fresh, even if they are not.

Another point which it is very essential to observe is precaution against breakage. Nothing seems to arouse the ire of a woman quite so much as to send her biscuits which are a little stale with a large percentage of broken ones among them. If this is done she always imagines that to their other bad qualities there is added a generous coating of store dust, and no one knows except those who come in direct contact with customers of this sort, to what lengths the imaginations of such women can lead them. In view of this fact it is wise for the grocer to observe the prudence contained in the old adage, "Avoid even the appearance of evil." In addition it has been proven beyond all doubt that the greatest satisfaction and the greatest profit accrues from pushing the sales of the better grades of stock.

Too much cannot be said about the value of a good confectionery trade to a grocer where there is an opportunity of cultivating this field. At Christmas time when all sorts of fancy boxes are available and practicable for sale, the margin of profit is large. If a grocer considers this fact and thinks how much easier it is to hand a customer a box of chocolates and knows the profit derived therefrom as compared with the number of pounds of sugar, tea or the gallons of kerosene he would have to sell, all doubt will be dissipated and he will avail himself of this opportunity to increase his income.

Lamps placed along the lower edge is one of the latest improvements in show window lighting. To be effective, they should be screened from view by either a permanent fixture or a shade which can be raised slightly above the line of the lamps.

The Talking Point

The Story of a New Product, Its Failure in the Face of Price Competition, and How a New Sales Scheme Saved It—A Lesson for Travelers and Salesmen in All Lines of Goods.

By Frederic Benjamin in System.

"They're good fixtures," repeated Jim Hanning. "There's nothin' the matter with these fixtures. If the salemen can't sell 'em, is it my fault?"

"You're the head of the department—you're responsible." Radcliffe bit the words off short. "You said you could make a good thing of this fixture department. You haven't done it. I gave you a good shop, good men, good material. You're turning out the goods all right—but—"

The helpless look on the face of his big superintendent showed Radcliffe the futility of pursuing the subject further along such lines. Hanning was a good shop boss—none better. He could turn out good fixtures. He was a genius, in his way, at designing labor-saving machinery and short-cut methods of putting the work through. No waste in mechanical operation, no error in designing, no lack of shrewdness in buying raw material accounted for the present condition of affairs. But the department was a failure. Competitors were getting the orders.

Radcliffe, as the head of the National Company, one of the largest electrical jobbing houses, knew nothing of the fixture business. His salesmen had pointed out that other jobbers were making money in electroliers, and the year before, after only the most superficial inquiry, he had decided to enter the field as a manufacturer. Results were far from satisfactory. The competition was keen, the margin of profit insignificant. Finally the situation had grown so acute that he seriously considered closing out the line and accepting his loss. This idea was uppermost when he summoned Hanning to what the boys called the "grid."

"I don't know what's wrong. Maybe I'm too old," said the mechanic, speaking as much to himself as to his employer. "Business is different from what it used to be. Maybe I better quit trying to be a manager and go back to the bench."

"Jim, look here." Radcliffe shook his fist at the big Irishman. "This is no time to talk like that. You're no quitter and neither am I. The whole proposition gets down to this—either it is costing us too much to make fixtures, or everybody is selling at a loss. We've been underbid on every good contract for the past four or five months. Yesterday we lost the Lakeside Building order—two weeks ago the Grand Hotel got away from us. On both those jobs we figured practically at cost. Now we're in the wrong somewhere. Are you sure you can't trim costs in the shop?"

"Not without taking it out of the goods." The superintendent was on his own ground now. He knew that his shop was right. Small economies might be effected, but nothing which would permit the National Company to meet the prices of competitors and retain any margin of profit.

"All right, Jim. Think it over. We've got to know the answer to this problem before the first of next month." The words were a dismissal.

That night a general letter went out to the National salesmen: "Look into the fixture business. Spend whatever time is necessary to find out why we are being constantly underbid. Compare our goods with those of all competitors and report fully."

II.

When George Thurling, of Territory Number Three, read these curt instructions, he whistled, for fixtures embraced the one line which interested this erratic traveling man. As a salesman of wire, construction material and supplies, he was not a success. "Too blamed reticent," a customer said of him once to Radcliffe when the general manager called to straighten out a tangle, "too blamed reticent and too almighty superior."

But if he lacked in that boisterous good-fellowship which must mark the successful road man of a jobbing house, he made up for this in the greater accuracy of his information regarding the many lines he sold and more thorough knowledge of his customers' needs. This accuracy and thoroughness he had brought to the study of the fixture problem. He had compared goods and prices; he knew how and why contracts were let; and he knew how he could make money on them if he were given charge of the department with a free reign and fair support.

"If I write in to the house and tell 'em what I know, they'll think I'm crazy," mused Thurling as he studied the general letter. "If I don't report at all, they'll fire me. If I simply side-step the question and go on trying to sell supplies much longer, I'll either go crazy for sure or get fired anyway within a couple of months. I guess I'll go in and hit Radcliffe for a job in charge of the fixture department."

It was a bold step for the weakest salesman on the National force to take, but Thurling knew fixtures—knew them better than Hanning, who made them—and he knew the fixture sales problem better than Radcliffe.

"The man who said, 'Knowledge is power,' is going to have his theory tested pretty hard," he muttered, and having reached a decision, he tossed his clothes into a suit case for the journey home.

III.

Thurling's reception was no better than he had expected. Radcliffe was annoyed—Hanning sullen.

"Not a manufacturer in this district is making money on fixtures," was his first statement.

"Did you spend ten dollars to come up from Latonia to tell us that?" snapped Radcliffe.

"Nobody is making money and nobody can unless they raise prices. Nobody can raise prices except us."

"We're too high now." Radcliffe's tone would have warned any other man to back down.

"We can go fifty per cent. higher and get the business."

Radcliffe was now thoroughly exasperated. "What the deuce have you got up your sleeve? You talk like a man in a padded cell. How can we raise our prices and get business that's slipping away because we're too high already?"

"Mr. Radcliffe, you once told me that all you needed to sell goods—any goods—was a talking point. You have no talking point in your fixtures. You're sending us out to fight cut-throat competition on a cut-throat basis. There are twenty fixture houses after every job we bid on. All any of 'em talks is price—price—price. And we talk price. The fixtures are bought on exact specifications, so there is no chance to trim a little profit out of the goods. What are you going to do about it?"

"What talking point is there besides quality and price?"

"Quality and price are not talking points at all in this line, as you well know. The specifications of the buyer take care of the quality. And our competitors seem to be taking care of the price. The talking point I have to suggest is—illumination."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Talk about the light our fixtures give, not about the fixtures themselves. If we—"

"Bosh!" exploded Hanning. "I've been in the fixture business over twenty years and I never heard of such a thing, and—"

"And now you're up against it cold and stiff because your department is losing money and you can't help yourself." Thurling was beginning to warm to his proposition and the words came fast.

"The old fogies in the fixture business—and that means everybody doing business in these parts—have been selling bent tubing and spinnings and cast brass ornaments for the past twenty years and calling 'em fixtures. They think that's the whole proposition. Now, I know that we can get up a line that'll look a little different, that'll take only the new high-efficiency lamps, that'll be sold complete with reflectors which throw the light down on the floor instead of up on the ceiling.

"When we go after a contract, we won't talk quality and we won't talk price. We'll say, 'Look here; this fixture will give you twice as much light as the ordinary fixture and it will only take half as much electricity to keep it lighted.' We'll tell 'em how good the light is, how small their electric bills will be, how scientific the fixture is. We'll razzle-dazzle 'em till they forget all about price."

Old Jim Hanning shook his head dubiously. Radcliffe studied his salesman.

"Isn't that a good deal of a confidence game?" he asked, finally.

"Depends on what you call a confidence game. If you mean a skin game—no, for we can do all I say and more."

"You see, Mr. Radcliffe, I've been studying this problem a long while, I'm not much of a salesman unless I have a good strong talking point. I'm not a mixer. I can't sell on my personality. But give me a line of argument—give me a foothold where the other fellow can't get in—and I'll sell fixtures."

"What the trade wants is price," began Hanning.

Radcliffe turned on him sharply, "Can you give us any better prices?"

"No, but nobody ever heard of a scheme like this. I never—"

"Jim," said Radcliffe, slowly, "you've said enough. I'll admit this scheme sounds foolish—I don't like it a bit more than you do. But it's new and Thurling is risking his job to tell us about it. If he can show us a way to make this department pay, he can do more than you, for all your twenty years' experience. I'm afraid of new ideas, but I'm more afraid of dry rot. Go ahead, George, and tell us the details."

There were not many details to tell. Thurling had studied his plan out at some length, but it was all vague and untried. He had a principle—that was all. Finally it was decided to make up some samples along the line suggested and try them out on the Crandell school board—the next big contract, and one which Radcliffe was sure the National Company could not get.

"Thurling," said the Old Man, as he gave the orders for the trial, "you are a peculiar proposition. You bring in a fool scheme which you can't explain and ask me to back you to the limit. The Crandell school job is all you get. Jim will give you sample fixtures; the cashier will give you anything up to a hundred for expenses. Go ahead. If you don't win out, don't bother to come back—we shan't want to see you."

IV.

When Thurling called by appointment upon the school board of Crandell there were with him several workmen carrying boxes, coils of wire and kits of tools.

Their appearance caused a mild sensation. Other fixture salesmen had come and gone, but none had more than the conventional portfolio of photographic reproductions of fixtures, views of well-known instalations, testimonial letters and price books.

"Gentlemen," said Thurling, "I am not here to talk fixtures. I am not here to show you artistic creations in brass or copper. I am here to give you a demonstration of the science of illumination.

"This board thinks it is buying fixtures. It isn't. It is considering the question of illumination for the beautiful new schoolhouses of the progressive City of Crandell. And this question is divided into two parts—the lighting equipment and the cost of operating that equipment.

"I have studied your conditions here at some length. Last year, you paid eight cents per kilowatt for electricity. Your bills for current amounted to something over $18,000.

"I can give you better illumination—more light, better light—and save you fifty per cent on your electric bills."

"How?" Schwartz, the proprietor of the city's largest department store, was chairman of the school board and his curt inquiry came like a pistol shot. He knew something about electric light bills. The cool statement of this young salesman touched an interest deeper that the lighting of the city school. If that statement were true it meant that he, Schwartz, could save thousands each year in the lighting of his store. The others were no less keen. Each in his business wrote a fat cheque monthly in favor of the lighting company.

"How?" repeated Thurling. "That is what I am here to show you. I propose to demonstrate, here and now, the truth of my claim. If I prove it, I expect the school contract—a contract, not for a certain number of fixtures at a competitive price, but for scientific lighting equipment which will save you thousands of dollars in electric bills and give the children in your schools a quality of light which will not injure their eyesight."

While he was still speaking, the workmen were deftly unrolling wire, bringing forth tools and equipment. A ladder was procured, packages which had been laid in the hallways brought in, and within a very few minutes one-half of the school room in which the board was holding its meeting had undergone a transformation. While his assistants hurriedly arranged the collapsible fixtures which they had brought, and hung them temporarily in place, Thurling outlined his plans and principles.

He explained that the ordinary fixture is designed without reference to illumination and that the ordinary fixture-maker was concerned only in the problems of design and manufacture. The National Company, on the other hand, advocated. first a new electric unit in the way of a lamp which would give much more and better quality of light at less consumption of current; it offered fixtures designed to accommodate these new lamps and sold them fully equipped with scientific reflectors made to throw all the light downward evenly over a large area, making a combination which for efficiency and economy could not be equalled. He pointed out that his company was placing at the Crandell board's disposal all the knowledge and experience it had gained in years of work in the electrical field and frankly stated that, while another fixture house might later offer to duplicate the National equipment, it was significant that none had heretofore suggested the use of any but the old-style fixtures, inefficient lamps and wasteful reflectors.

"In short, gentlemen," concluded Thurling, "the National Company comes to you with a proposition to supply foot-candles of illumination on the desks of Crandell's school children. Others offer you so many pounds of metal hung against the ceiling. Which will you buy?"

A long black curtain had been hung by the workmen from ceiling to floor and extending down the length of the room. On the one side were the National's "illumination units"; on the other, the old fixtures. As Thurling put his question, the electrician snapped a switch and the new lights blazed forth. The school board, sitting on a platform at the end of the room, gaped in astonishment.

Then began a session that lasted long after midnight—a session in which every detail of the equipment was examined and which ended in every member of the board pledging the contract to the man who at first seemed to have performed a miracle.

A more impetuous man would have wired Radcliffe of his success with the Crandell school board, but Thurling waited until he had the signed contract and then sent it with a characteristic letter:

"The enclosed contract seems to demonstrate that my plan of selling illumination instead of fixtures is correct. I am now figuring with Schwartz & Company for a complete equipment of their department store, and with Jackson, of the State Insurance Company, for the lighting of the new office building they plan to begin next spring, If I get these two jobs I will feel that there is something in the new sales scheme."

To which Radcliffe wrote a reply addressed to "George Thurling, Manager Fixture Department."

DELIVERING GOODS BY AUTO.

One of the most prominent and successful retail grocers in Greater Boston has been experimenting lately in the delivery of orders to his customers by automobile instead of horses, and he tells us that the result of his experiments thus far has been such as to justify him in making the statement that the time is not far distant when the automobile will be generally used for delivering goods to retail customers. He began his experiment by purchasing an old model second hand machine and he is so well pleased with the results that he contemplates shortly purchasing several new up-to-date automobiles for delivery purposes. The automobile with which he has been conducting his experiments represents in money investment less than one-quarter of the amount invested in the four horses which he has heretofore employed. That in itself is almost sufficient to justify the change from teams to automobiles.

This automobile has been and is doing the work of four horses, and at the outside it consumes between three and four gallons of gasolene, at nine cents per gallon, which is to be compared with the cost of feed and care for horses. It can be readily seen that the expense of fuel for the automobile is such a trifle that it is scarcely worthy of consideration. One item which has figured in these experiments is the repairs to the machine, but these repairs have been made necessary largely because it was a second hand machine; but with expenses and repairs included the expense of the automobile has been a trifle compared with that of teams, and it has done the work, as we have stated, of four horses. With a new machine the repairing would be infinitesimal, and it seems to us that it requires no argument, simply a plain statement of facts, to show that the automobile is not only entirely practicable for delivery purposes, but that it is to a high degree economical.—American Grocer.

STEADILY ADVANCING TEA MARKETS.

The exceedingly high prices to which high grade Ceylon teas have attained during the past month or so is attracting a good deal of attention from tea dealers the world over. While Ceylons have been firming up materially for some time this has been particularly noticeable recently. The general quality of teas on the market for November and December has been much inferior to those offered during August and October and as a result teas possessing distinct quality and flavor and which have been much in demand and hard to secure, have advanced from 2c to 4c over the prices during the earlier months. High grown Broken and Orange Pekoe Ceylons are two lines in which this is particularly noticed and it is stated by close students of the markets that this class of tea is higher to-day than it has been for seventeen years.

Just how hard these teas are to secure was evidenced in a reply received from London a short time ago by a Toronto buyer, who inquired for 300 chests of a high standard grade. The reply stated that in a recent sale of 30,000 packages, only 76 chests of the standard had changed hands.

On the other hand, as is a usual condition of the Ceylon tea trade, when the standard fine teas are bringing abnormally high prices the good, useful, but less expensive grades, show good value at fair prices. From the standpoint of value, common grades of Ceylons have been comparatively cheap, although recently they also have felt the advance and are now standing at least ½d higher than the price of two or three weeks ago. The general trend of prices is shown by a cable from Colombo, received by local brokers on Tuesday, which said: "Market firmer on all grades."

The general opinion of well-informed tea merchants, both at home and abroad, seems to be that we shall see steadily advancing markets until the middle of June, when teas will be more plentiful. The general belief is that until this time available stocks are insufficient for the present rate of consumption.

LOWER THE DUTY ON FRUIT JARS.

During the past summer and early fall letters appeared in these columns from retailers all over the country protesting against the unsatisfactory fruit jars supplied by the Canadian manufacturers. The complaint was general and was concerned not only with the conditions of the fruit jars themselves, but also with the unsatisfactory packing done, all of which was the cause of considerable loss to the retailer. Furthermore, with the large demand for jars consequent on the low prices of all classes of fruit the past season the supply of jars was quite inadequate to meet retailers' demands.

While the latter trouble was only prevalent this year, and was undoubtedly due to some extent to the peculiar conditions of the season, the former one is no new story. Year after year the retailers and the public have been complaining of the quality of the jars, but the Canadian manufacturers have taken no notice, evidently resting securely in their position as holding practically a monopoly of this business here.

This should not be allowed to continue for another season. The matter should be looked into and the duty lowered to permit of reasonable competition from manufacturers in other countries.

During the past season a fruit jar manufactured in the United States was pushed to some extent in Canada and gained some hold on the market. With a reasonable reduction of duty this jar would mean serious competition for the Canadian manufacturers, and would probably mean a more satisfactory Canadian product It is understood also that manufacturers in England have heard of conditions here, and are preparing to try to do business in these goods during the coming season.

The Government should take this matter up at the coming session. There is no object in protecting Canadian industry when that protection does not seem to be appreciated. A lower duty would have the effect of bettering conditions immediately.

MAKING THE ASSOCIATION A SUCCESS.

The Retail Grocers' Association, of Nashville, Tenn. has adopted a scheme for brightening up its regular meetings which might be adopted with a good deal of profit by some of the less active associations in Canada. At its regular meetings every week or two regularly appointed debates on trade questions are held. Such subjects as "Does Price-cutting Pay?" "Is it Profitable to Buy Futures?" "Is the Credit System a Desirable One?" have already been discussed, and, according to reports, the programme on these evenings has attracted a large attendance and has been of much profit to the members. The members to represent each side of the debates are chosen at the previous meeting and are supposed to carefully study the subject in the meantime.

The question of how to make a grocers' association a success is a big one. Some organizations run over-largely to the social side in an attempt to attract and hold members. This, however, can never achieve satisfactory and permanent results. The retail grocer, is a hard-headed, as well as a hard-working member of society, who, if he spends his time in trade meetings, wants to get something really worth while for it. An association which provides this is one which will give its members food for thought, and point out new ideas for him to develop in his own way. This is just what is being done in the work of the Nashville Association.

SUGGEST PLUM PUDDINGS.

There's a line of goods handled by retail grocers which ought to be going out well just at this time of the year if a little of attention is paid to it. That's plum puddings. These are put up in several ways to meet different tastes and ought to prove very attractive to the housewife if brought to her notice. Being ready for use they obviate the necessity for a great deal of the work of preparation involved in the home-made article, and make the holiday preparations easier. Being manufactured in quantity also, by firms who stand behind their product, the quality of the article is assured. These goods are one of the many lines in the grocery store whose use can be cultivated by a little education of the customers and which will give back good profits to the retailer.

SELLING GOODS BY TALKING POINTS.

An article appearing in these columns in last week's issue headed "The Gift and Graft System" and dealing with certain trade features which have come to be somewhat questionable, has aroused a great deal of interest and some favorable comment. Several of the points mentioned dealt with schemes for making certain goods more attractive by using features apart from the goods themselves to attract interest, and thus increase sales.

These schemes, and all similar ones, are primarily simply attempts to meet competition. They may or may not serve their purpose. We are not concerned with that here. What we do maintain, however, is that if his goods are right the manufacturer or merchant need not resort to any of the methods referred to to do good business.

The chief point emphasized in selling goods should not be price, the factor which is harped upon in the great majority of cases. First of all the goods should have a good basis of quality on which to rest and then the points in which they are superior to other goods of the same kind should be brought out. To put the matter in another way, the seller should have talking points, at least one, perhaps more, in reference to his goods, which can be hammered into the buyer. There is nothing more convincing nor more likely to produce sales than for a manufacturer to be able to say his goods are better than the other man's and to tell why.

These distinctive points of superiority should be kept before the possible buyer continuously. They should be advertised and advertised persistently, so that the buyer cannot help but know them. They should be hammered in again by the salesman when he calls and should be used at every opportunity.

A story, bringing out the details of this argument, showing its possibilities and what one man did along the lines suggested, appears on other pages of this issue.

A REVIVING NATION.

Spain, the country from which the grocers of Canada get so many of their supplies, such as dried fruits, oranges, onions, and olive oil, is passing through a stage of evolution. Barren land and desert wastes are being made to yield bountifully of various kinds of farm and garden produce. Cattle raising has taken quite an impetus, and within five years the number of persons employed in the mining industry has doubled.

Our own trade returns show that Canada is also doing larger business with Spain, our exports during the last fiscal year being larger than for several years, while our purchases from Spain were the largest on record.

Some years ago Lord Salisbury placed Spain among the world's decaying nations, but it is evident that nations as well as individual business men can take on fresh life when they will to do so.

MORE CHRISTMAS GIFT SUGGESTIONS.

A list of goods which grocers might suggest to their customers for Christmas goods were given in these columns last week. It was suggested that while the list included goods found in every grocery store, there were other and more expensive goods which would be suitable for rather more pretentious gifts. Some of these are given herewith: Fancy layer raisins, English Stilton cheese, fancy caddy of tea, boxes of Christmas crackers, plum puddings in boxes and bowls, iced Christmas cakes, fancy satin-lined work baskets, glove and handkerchief boxes filled with confectionery, mince meat in jars, baskets of figs, bottles of stuffed figs and dates, etc.

SHARP PRACTICE DOESN'T PAY.

Unfair methods in dealing with customers should be shunned by retailers who would hold their friendship and business. The following incident was related a short time ago which gave one merchant a black eye with the particular patron and probably was the cause, also, of his losing more business, as well.

The Hardware Trade tells of a farmer who had run up an account of, perhaps, twenty dollars. It was at a time when he was hard up and the merchant who had trusted him before, gladly extended credit. A definite time was agreed upon for payment as the market on some stock he owned was too low for immediate sale. As it was in winter the dealer proposed that sixty days would give the farmer sufficient time to get his stock marketed at good figures and the latter readily assented to the plan.

Within a fortnight after this sale had been made, the farmer, wishing to realize a little money with which to purchase some necessary provisions, hauled a load of wood to town and placed it on sale at the market. The retailer was apprised of this fact and going to the farmer offered him $4 a cord. His offer was accepted and the wood hauled to the rear of his store. It measured a cord and a half, and six dollars was the resulting value of the load. Nothing was said to him about paying for this by giving credit on the other account until the wood was corded up in a pile. Then the farmer asked him for payment and was informed that due credit would be given. A heated exchange of words followed, but the merchant would not give in, and so the farmer was credited with the amount on the books.

Three days later the farmer sold some stock and settled his bill in full. He then went to a competing store and purchased goods for cash. Things were coming easier for him now and he was therefore able to buy on a cash basis. But the dealer whom he considered had taken such underhand means did not get his business.

This particular merchant had a reputation for such practices and seemed to pride himself on the methods he used in making collections. The farmer, who had traded with him for twenty years, sometimes for cash and sometimes on a credit basis, had always been prompt in making payments. So a good customer was lost through a misconceived plan of effective collecting.

THE WOMAN TRAVELER.

Some surprise was created at a recent meeting in Toronto of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada when the question was raised as to the advisability of admitting women as members.

The female drummer has made her appearance in Canada, but not in large numbers, and, perhaps, she soon may be raising her voice in favor of having all the privileges of the association extended to her.

Across the border women are following this calling and are making a success of it, too. Woman has invaded practically all ranks and professions hitherto monopolized by males, but in some locations her entrance has only begun. The commercial representatives on the road may, ere long, have new opponents to meet, rivals who will test the mettle and salesmanship abilities of many old-timers. There are certain classes of goods in which the female vendor might have a decided advantage over her male competitor, particularly in ladies' wearing apparel, for the seller of the garments could present their superior qualities and natty appearance more effectively than the lords of creation. Added to an excellent and representative line of samples, a winsome personality, a pleasing smile and a smart appearance, and who, for one moment, does not think the man on the road would have to look to his laurels?

Shipping Flour to Great Britain Via Vancouver—Fruit Growers Want Reduced Express Rates—New Council of Travelers in Saskatoon.

VANCOUVER.

December 7.—Thomas Duke has purchased Reed's store in the Orange Block, corner of Hastings Street and Gore Avenue. Mr. Duke is one of Vancouver's best-known citizens, having for years been head of the City Grocery, corner Westminster Avenue and Pender Street. Since he sold out there two or three years ago, he has been in the real estate business. Mr. Duke is also a prominent Orangeman.

James E. Walsh, manager of the freight department of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and R. W. Breadner, manager of the traffic department of the same organization, who were in the city this week, had a conference with Western members of the Manufacturers' Association, and on Tuesday evening were at the Board of Trade, where each delivered short addresses, and were accorded votes of thanks. The principal matter discussed was an unconditional bill of lading, and this was endorsed by the board.

H. Moss, of Victoria, who is bringing in sugar from Greenock, Scotland, where it is manufactured by the Glebe Manufacturing Company, is placing yellow on the market also in addition to the granulated. It sells for $4.50, which is 15c less than the local article.

Christmas trade is opening up fairly well, and the outlook is that it will not be anything behind last year, and, perhaps, more. There are no unusual conditions so far.

The Fruit Growers' Association of Ontario, which is making an effort to have the express rates on fruit reduced, are being seconded by the B. C. Fruit Growers' Association. The different organizations in the Province are being asked to co-operate in the endeavor to secure better rates on fruit from the coast to the Prairie Provinces. Some years ago the rate was $2.50 per 100 pounds, but now it is $2.65. As a result of the rates, the American fruit growers had the advantage, and were able to undersell the growers in Canada. Eastern Washington and Oregon have large areas in fruit, with a very considerable amount of planting continually going on, and increased markets are necessary. They are looking for these in the developing Prairie Provinces east of the Rockies, and have their own distributing men there. British Columbia, as well as Ontario growers, for all benefit by the Northwest trade, want either lower rates or a larger duty on fruit to keep the home market for the home producer.

Wilson's Cash Grocery, of Kamloops, reports that the system is meeting with approval. One has but to look at the fine character of the stock in this store to learn the advantages of such a system.

The first shipment of Canadian flour to the Old Country via Vancouver was made by the Columbia Flour Mills, of Enderby, on the last outgoing boat. It is expected that this is but the beginning of an extensive trade along this line.

Cigar making is becoming more and more a lucrative business in interior towns. In the Okanagan district, there are several factories, and three men are employed in the Cranbrook Cigar Factory, one of the latest to start up.

The death took place last week of Emil Gustav Kuester, a pioneer of Kaslo, where in 1893 he established the grocery and bakery business of Reidel & Kuester. From the time the town started up until three months ago, the firm continued in business, when an assignment was made. Deceased, who was 51 years of age, was a native of Berlin, Germany, and resided in Butte, Montana, before coming to British Columbia.

The fruit pack in the Chilliwack Valley for the present season, while not so large as last year, is evidently satisfactory to the growers, since the lessons learned through the experience of other years has resulted in more pains being taken with far away shipments, and, consequently, fewer losses have been suffered. It would be difficult at present to approximate the amount shipped out, as more private growers this year handled their own crop and found local markets through commission merchants that in most cases proved satisfactory. The branch of the Farmers' Exchange, however, handled the greater bulk of the crop, and was able to find outside markets. If the farmers had been left to themselves in such cases the fruit would doubtless have been wasted. The Exchange, which was organized two or three years ago, has demonstrated that co-operation in fruit growing has proved eminently satisfactory and is a great benefit. It has brought about uniform packing and grading, and when the commercial end of the business is looked after from a central exchange a glut of the market is prevented in any one place and a fair price received all round.

SASKATOON.

December 5.—Arrangements have now been made between the G.T.P. and the Saskatoon Forwarding and Storage Co. whereby the latter will handle shipments of goods which have to be prepaid out over the new railway. The freight sheds of the Grand Trunk Pacific are some distance from town and shippers found it inconvenient to frequently send out small shipments. The Forwarding Company will now receive them from the merchants and see that they are shipped. The new arrangement has proved satisfactory.

A few nights ago the travelers who make Saskatoon their headquarters organized "Saskatoon Council, No. 445" of the Order of United Commercial Travelers of America. C. W. Rice, traveling representative, was present on the occasion and the council starts with a membership of 28. Officers elected were: Senior counsellor, E. M. Snell; junior counsellor, W. E. Thompson; past counsellor, R. Jackson; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Strickland; conductor, F. M. Waldron; page, J. Noel Nivin; sentinel, M. E. Rous. The new organization will meet once a month.

PRINCE ALBERT.

December 5.—A new bakery is being established in town, thus making the fourth in this line of business.

Jacoby Bros., of Allan, have sold their grocery business to J. N. Beaver.

The Hudson's Bay Co. are now established in their new store. J. H. Anderson is in charge of the business. The building is of brick and is 56x86 feet. The grocery department, which is situated on the east side of the store, is well laid out with a fine stock of groceries, which are shown in up-to-date fixtures.

Halifax Wholesalers Busy With Christmas Orders—October and November Good Months for St. John Merchants—Notes From Montreal.

ST. JOHN.

December 7.—Wholesale grocers here report that business for the months of October and November was the best that it has ever been in those months, and they look for a continuance of good business until the week before Christmas, when it is expected to slacken off as usual. There has been a disposition on the part of the retailers all summer to buy from hand-to-mouth, and, as a result, stocks were depleted considerably and purchases in the past two months were rather heavy.

Dried fruits were late coming to the market this year, but they are all in now.

Fall business has been nicely cleaned up and a lot of the coasting schooners have made their last trip of the season and gone into winter quarters.

Changes in prices have been very few lately. Cornmeal is a little lower and pure lard is down ¼c, and compound has declined ½c. Eggs and butter are still very high.

H. H. Butler has purchased the retail grocery business at the corner of Wall Street and Paradise Row, formerly conducted by Mr. Rich, and previous to him by Hogan's.

John A. McAllister, head clerk for W. A. Porter, was operated on at the hospital recently for appendicitis. He is resting comfortably and will probably be at work again in a couple of weeks.

Dr. Hayes, and W. Tabor, representing the White Candy Co., St. John, appeared before the City Council at Moncton, December 3, with a proposition to remove their industry to Moncton, the company asking the city for free light and water for ten years, and guarantee of six per cent. bonds for $40,000 redeemable in equal parts in five, ten, fifteen and twenty years. They stated that the White Candy Company intended removing from St. John, because they could not get the help they required to operate their factory at full capacity. There was no question of competition between St. John and Moncton, as manufacturing centres it was purely a question of securing hands. The company wished to expand its business, but could not under present conditions. The hands now employed were working double shift, but the orders could not be filled. Running full capacity, they would employ about 100 hands and pay out about $20,000 in wages yearly. The Council took no action, but decided to take the matter into consideration.

A statement of the customs revenue collected at the Port of St. John for the month of November, 1908, shows a decrease of $19,749.90. The amount collected in 1907 was $109,342.27, and in 1908 it was $89,592.37. Excise revenue for the same month also shows a falling off. This year's amount was $20.500.55, as compared with $25,191.69, a decrease of $4,691.14.

The C.P.R. steamer Empress of Britain, which was the first of the winter-port steamers to sail for England, took quite a large cargo, including 24,000 bushels wheat, 468 bags clover seed, 3,016 bags of feed, 355 sacks of peas, 720 bales of hay, 223 barrels and 851 boxes of apples and 117 boxes eggs, as part of her Canadian goods. There were 661 boxes meats, 500 boxes lard and 1,970 cases grape nuts from the United States.

HALIFAX.

December 7.—The grocery trade is brisk in all lines and the wholesale dealers are now rushed filling Christmas orders. Prices are generally firm, though in some lines they are a little lower than they were a year ago. This is so in the case of dried fruits, which, as a result are selling quite freely. The prospects are good for a continuance of a brisk trade from now until the close of the year, and collections on the whole are quite satisfactory.

Complaint is general among the dealers and consumers regarding the high prices asked for butter and eggs. The jobbers complain that they cannot buy butter at moderate prices, and the opinion prevails that the farmer must be holding back his stock. This was an exceptionally fine year for dairying, the crops being abundant, and in consequence there should be a good supply of butter. Such does not appear to be the case, however. At the prevailing prices there is no money in handling butter. Creamery prints are quoted at 28c to 29c; creamery solids at 27c to 28c, and dairy in large tubs, 24c to 25c.

There is no improvement in the receipts of eggs and prices still rule high and are likely to remain so now that the cold weather has set in. New laid are quoted at 30c to 32c, and limed at 24c. Cheese is steady at 13½c to 14c for large, and 14c for twins.

Trade is brisk in fruit and vegetables. The jobbers are stocking up with potatoes as the price is low and they expect by the spring that there will be a heavy advance. Winter apples are now bringing good prices in London and heavy shipments are being made. The crop of early apples has been disposed of at fair prices and the indications are that winter fruit will net good returns. The steamer St. John City, for London, took 14,000 barrels of apples this week, and the Furness liner Rappahannock, sailing for the same port, took 25,000 barrels.

Five refrigerator cars, containing one thousand bags of potatoes, arrived here this week from Pictou for shipment to Havana.

Lemons have dropped 50 cents per case this week and are now quoted at $5.50. Florida oranges are quoted at $3.50 per case, and Jamaica's (repacked), $4.50 to $5. Tokay grapes are $3.25 a keg and Nova Scotia cranberries from $5 to $5.50 per barrel. Bananas of poor quality are bringing from $2 to $2.50 per bunch.

Prices on flour and feeds are very steady. There is a good demand, and a large amount of stock is being turned over. The leading brands of flour are quoted at $6.50. Rolled oats are $4.50 to $5, and cornmeal from $1.75 to $1.80. Beans (prime), $1.85 to $1.90 per bushel; hand picked, $2 to $2.05. Split peas are quoted at $5.40 to $5.50 and whole from $4.40 to $4.50. Middlings are selling at $28 to $29 per ton. Bran, $24.50 to $25, and hay per ton, $10 to $12.

The Allready Pure Food Company, of Bridgewater, N.S., is rushed with orders from Montreal and other Canadian cities. The firm anticipates a steady demand from now until after the holiday season.

Lunenburg County is now shipping apples to the London market. During the week W. A. Hebb, of Bridgewater, shipped seven carloads.

At the Marine and Fisheries Department inquiry, held here this week, several grocers who furnished supplies were called to the stand to testify as to their dealings with the department. The dealers who did the largest business were Isaac Creighton, P. T. Shea, John F. Ryan and Howard Wentzell. Some of their accounts covering three years totalled five thousand dollars. They only charged the ordinary prices, and in some cases only secured the tenders after close figuring. None of them gave any presents to the employees of the department or entered into any compact with them. Counsel for the Government tried hard to find some clue that everything was not right, but the grocers, to their credit it must be said, came out with flying colors. There were no rake-offs, the grocers conducting their affairs on straight business principles.

Principal M. Cumming, Secretary for Agriculture for Nova Scotia, in his report to the Government on the crops in this Province says that the farmers have had a most successful year. The apple yield for home and foreign consumption is 600,000 barrels. Butter is estimated at 106 per cent. as compared with last year. The quality is placed at 105 per cent. The output of cheese was about the same as last year, and the quality also equal to that of last year. Owing to the large amount of butter that is made at home dairies and privately marketed, it is difficult to arrive at a definite estimate of the total output of dairy products.

MONTREAL.

December 8.—S. Robinson, Esplanade Avenue, Annex, one of the best-known North End grocers in the city, has sold his business to J. Hurteau. Mr. Robinson has decided on this course owing to failing health, and the desire to retire from active business. Mr. Hurteau, who is a young man, received his business training with Mathews, Fortier & Monette, provision dealers of this city.

M. Defayette, grocer, of Laprairie, found a tarantula's nest in a bunch of bananas recently. Thinking it to be a piece of cotton batting he started to put it in the fire, when a large tarantula sprang out and ran rapidly away, took refuge first in a show case of candy, and afterwards climbed on the top where one of the daughters of the house saw it. She thought it was an artificial spider and started to poke it with a pin. The spider jumped back and then sprang at her fingers, but she had fortunately seen the first movement and escaped in time. The tarantula, which runs as fast as a mouse, is still at large in the store, but Mr. Defayette intends to make systematic search for it.

The usual quiet has followed the close of navigation, but there is a healthy feeling pervading the wholesale trade. One large house has been busy filling orders for the Northwest. Perhaps in this respect the grocery business has been more fortunate than other forms of business who report considerable dulness during the week.

Country merchants have at last awakened to the fact that they must lay in some winter stock. This fact has stimulated the wholesale grocery business considerably. Collections are reported better than for some time. They have, nevertheless, been improving for some time, which has marked the degree of circulation of money obtained by the farmers for their crops.

J. B. Berthiaume, corner of Park Avenue and Prince Arthur Streets, has sold his business to Duquette & Falcon. Questioned about his future movements, Mr. Berthiaume stated that he intended to do nothing for some time, at any rate, and had no definite plans for the future.

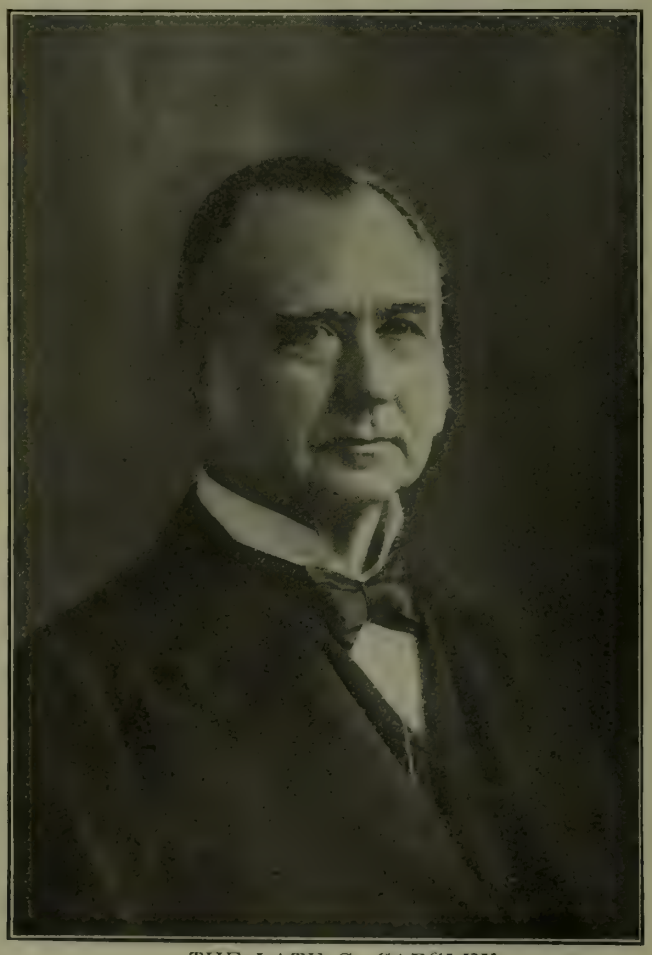
Jos. Raymond, St. Timothee Street, manufacturer of jams, preserves, polishes, etc., carrying on business under the style Jos. Lamoureux, has made a voluntary assignment. Kent & Turcotte are the liquidators.

country."

We regret to learn of the death of Miss Olive Packard, only daughter of L. H. Packard, Rosemount Avenue, Westmount. Miss Packard had been ill for about a year, but lately had been much better until this final failure of her health, which ended in her death. She will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends, among whom she was very popular.

QUEBEC.

December 8.—The Quebec Grocers' Association held a very important meeting last week under the presidency of J. Boyce, vice-president of the association.



THE LATE S. CARSLEY,
Head of the S. Carsley Company, Montreal, Who Died on Friday, Nov. 20.

There was a good attendance, and Theo. Boland, vice-president of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, and P. J. Cote, president of the local branch of that association, were among those present. One of the important matters brought up for discussion was the recent notice published in local newspapers to the effect that the sale of meat, poultry and provisions was not allowed in yards or streets under pain of penalty, and the grocers consider that the carrying out of this by-law would seriously affect their trade, as arrangements had already been made with farmers for the exchange of provisions for farm produce. If instructions were given to carry out this by-law, the grocers would suffer considerable damage and they decided to ask protection from the city.

Another important question discussed at length was the weight of butter. Complaints have been frequently made that butter is sold under weight, but the grocers contend that they are in no way to blame for this state of things and state that the manufacturers and wholesale dealers are responsible for these abuses. The grocers have decided to protect their interests, and a special committee was appointed to study the municipal by-laws regarding their trade, and will meet the civic by-law committee later.

Winter Fair Brightens Business in Guelph—Toronto Grocer's Christmas Celebration—Chatham People Buying Early This Year.

LONDON.

December 8.—The grocery store at the northeast corner of Waterloo and Oxford Streets has changed hands again, J. S. Rosser having disposed of it to Mr. Flood.

Thomas Shaw, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, is being urged to offer himself as a candidate for election to the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Shaw would certainly make a capable representative.

The slaughter of cattle that the United States inspectors are making in their efforts to stamp out the foot and mouth disease is almost certain to have the effect of considerably increasing the price of Canadian beef. Already there is considerable demand for Canadian cattle and as the demand at home is practically equal to the supply, there is sure to be a scarcity and a consequent advance in prices. The market is already much firmer, and in the course of a week or so butchers will likely be putting up prices.

All branches of the grocery trade have been rather quiet the past week, but the coming of sleighing, which is now all right, heavy snow having fallen yesterday, will brighten things up. Retailers are confining their buying to sorting up orders for Christmas fruits, the prices of which are unchanged. Haddies are coming in freely, but in spite of keen competition prices are a little higher.

A change has taken place in the management of the Canada Spice & Grocery Company. C. T. Lee, until recently bookkeeper for the company, and formerly proprietor of the New York store, has succeeded A. T. Cleghorn, who has gone to the Western States to engage in a similar business.

Clem Garvey, city traveler for John Garvey & Co., wholesale grocers, had an exciting experience one day last week. He had left his horse standing in front of Hargraves' grocery when it became frightened and ran away, and before it was recovered had run a couple of miles. Neither horse nor rig was damaged.

KINGSTON.

December 8.—While our citizens were enjoying their slumbers after the cares and toils of Saturday the firemen were battling with the flames which were fast consuming the block on the corner of Princess and Ontario Streets. The fire destroyed the Wormwith piano works and the wholesale warehouses, offices, fixtures and stock of W. G. Craig & Co. The loss to both concerns will be heavy. Craig & Co's warehouses were well filled ready for winter trade. When they get into new premises with new stock and new fixtures they will feel that old things have passed away and a new regime has begun.

Eight hundred pounds of whitefish seized just as they were being shipped from one of our wharves last week shows the vigilance of the fish inspector. They were shipped here from Deseronto and were caught out of season.

David Gibson, a grocer for many years but now retired, was given special mention at St. Andrew's dinner here last week. He is the oldest living member of the society here. As a business man he did business on straight lines, as was so ably pointed out in the last issue of The Grocer by "M. C. T.," Montreal. That article, or series of articles is one of the best I have read in your valuable columns for a long time. Every honest-thinking grocer, whether retailer, wholesaler or manufacturer, should read it, cut it out and frame it.

I am glad to see prominence given in your paper to the peddler nuisance. Our city is over-run and our officials don't seem to worry over the fact.

CHATHAM.

December 8.—"No news this week. We are too busy," was the remark of Wm. Anderson, president of the local R.M.A. to The Grocer representative this afternoon. "I don't know how the other merchants find it, but we have been doing exceptionally well the last two weeks, and the outlook is for a good Christmas business." Other grocers had very similar reports to make as to the state of business just now. Already the Christmas buying has commenced, and raisins, currants, peels and similar lines are moving out rapidly. One grocer stated that he would have to re-order before the close of the season. "Either they are buying more this year," he added, "or else they are buying earlier." The general indications are that Christmas buying has commenced earlier this season than usual. Evidently the constant preaching of the "early buying" doctrine is having good effect in Chatham.

Mr. Nichols, of A. M. Smith & Co., London, the Red Band Man, is calling on the local trade this week.

Quite a flurry was caused among local hog raisers and pork buyers last week by what was apparently a new regulation in connection with the Meat Inspection Act, and interprovincial shipments of hogs. Since the Act was passed, buyers have been shipping very largely to butchers in Quebec, with whom they found an extensive market for dressed hogs, and they claim that they had the assurance of the Minister of Agriculture that to this class of shipments the regulations regarding inspection did not apply. With the opening of the dressed hog season recently, these shipments were recommended and quite a number of cars had been sent out when a local firm were surprised to receive notice that no shipments for Quebec or other points outside of Ontario could be received by the railways unless first inspected, and that they were to be proceeded against for violation of the Act. The local buyers had a busy time notifying the hog raisers to stop further killing of hogs, and trying to secure the free passage of dressed hogs already shipped. As usual, the hand of the packers was scented in the enforcement of the regulation, which locally was generally understood to be a new amendment to the Act, passed during the last session. Buyers and hog raisers in this section, since the agitation against the Act last fall and winter, have very readily suspected the department of playing into the hands of the packing houses. The difficulty was accentuated by the fact that no provision was made for the local inspection of these shipments. However, the shipments already made were ultimately permitted to go through; and a local inspector was provided. Prior to the trouble in question, the market for hogs had suffered a slight decline, live hogs selling at $5.75 and dressed at $7.35 a hundred, and the buyers anticipated that the market would remain steady at these figures. Now that the difficulty has been smoothed over, it is expected that the market will return to the normal figure. Deliveries during the previous week were quite large.

Gilbert John Taylor, popularly known as "Gib," passed away at his home here last Thursday night, aged 59. He was an experienced salesman, and for several years past has traveled for F. X. St. Charles, wholesale liquor house, Montreal. About 12 years ago he was engaged in the grocery and coal business in this city. I. M. Taylor, formerly a grocer here, and J. P. Taylor, now engaged in the same business on Park St., are brothers.

A market development in the handling of Canadian grown tobacco is reported from Essex. Many farmers are erecting drying barns and experimenting in up-to-date methods of curing the home-grown product. There is a curing station at Ruthven under the supervision of a Kentucky expert. Co-operative methods are also suggested. Faulty methods of curing have been the bane of the local industry in years past, and this move is an indication that the growers realize the fact, and are taking action to correct the fault.

The clauses of the Pharmacy Act relative to the sale by grocers and general merchants of goods classified as drugs formed the theme of some hot invective at the meeting of the Kent County Council last week. During the last few months quite a few rural merchants in the southern part of this county have been fined under the Act; and this and the methods employed, particularly the methods, have aroused general resentment among the farmers. The following resolution was unanimously adopted: "That a petition be presented to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, praying for the amendment of the Pharmacy Act, so as to enable merchants and storekeepers to have, keep and sell such drugs and medicines as carbolic acid, hellebore, iodine, quinine and all kinds of compounds and essences—in addition to those enumerated in Schedule A of the Act. That Section 9 of Chapter 16 of the Act, passed in 1905, be repealed. That all prohibited drugs be specifically named and set out in Schedule A of the Act, so that there may be no doubt of what may not be sold. And that no part of the fine should go to the prosecutor or to the College of Pharmacy." Reeve Galbraith, of Howard, who moved the resolution, backed it with a red hot speech, in the course of which he presented strong letters from his constituents and denounced the methods of Detective Grant in securing convictions. "When one considers the fact that the men who cleared the land and now occupy it made the drug business possible, the Act as it now stands is not only iniquitous, but an insult to the rural population of the Province," was the strong statement of one writer.

E. Duffy, of Brigden, has sold his general store, and will return to Chatham, where he will likely re-enter the grocery business.

W. J. Cain, of Port Lambton, advertises for sale his grocery and general store with meat market attached.

Geo. Stephens is opening a fruit and confectionery store in the Clarke Block, Main St., Dresden.

On December 2, Mrs. T. W. Smythe, wife of the Wellington St. grocer, had the misfortune to fall, breaking one rib and dislocating her left arm.

Chatham grocers were pleased this week to receive a visit from James O'Hagan, associate editor of The Canadian Grocer.

Wallaceburg is likely to have a creamery next year. Geo. Wooliver has disposed of his coal business and intends to go more extensively into dairying, with a view to establishing a butter factory in the near future.

W. L. Hope, the Merlin butcher, is established in handsome new premises in the Oddfellows' Block.

J. Sims, traveler for the Mooney Co., Stratford, who had the misfortune to break his leg in a runaway accident near Merlin last April, recently sustained a fall at his home at St. Mary's, as a result of which he broke his leg again. He was only out a short time after his first accident.

TORONTO.

December 8.—"MacDonald's Annual Christmas Celebration," is the heading of a dainty invitation folder which was distributed early in the week by H. G. MacDonald, 223 Sorauren Avenue, to announce his Christmas reception, which was held yesterday, to-day and to-morrow, Dec. 10, 11 and 12. Besides a bright store, Harry MacDonald has a fund of bright ideas and this is the result of one of them. While he goes into the matter quite extensively, he says the amount of business attracted well repays him. Last night the store was a very attractive spot. As the circular says, "It is full of just the right things for Christmas," and with tasteful decorations of plants in bloom, palms, ferns, and Christmas tree decorations this was well borne out. In one corner a first-class orchestra gave an extensive programme of popular music and in another department demonstrations were given of Red Rose Tea, Cowan's Cocoa and Pure Gold Jelly. Naturally the store was a good deal crowded but Mr. MacDonald with characteristic good humor kept everybody in a similar condition. Undoubtedly several hundred people, including a good many new customers, will visit the store before Saturday night. Mr. MacDonald may not be the originator of this reception idea in the grocery store, but he seems to carry it out more extensively than anyone else has yet done.

J. W. Silverthorne, of Burford, has purchased the grocery business of R. B. Warbrick, 234 Broadview Avenue, Toronto, and will take possession immediately.

The Wilson, Lytle, Badgerow Company, vinegar manufacturers, Front Street West, Toronto, have written to the Board of Control asking for a rebate on their taxes since 1901. They point out that the controllers in 1898 passed a resolution fixing their assessment on land and buildings at $18,540 for ten years, excepting for school rate and personality. In 1900 they were allowed a rebate of $80, but since that time the company has overlooked the matter, and has paid taxes on a revised assessment. The matter was referred to the Assessment Commissioner.

The Dominion Government is bound to see that its food laws are observed and as a result of special vigilance in this direction a Toronto grocer and his agent were each fined $25 and costs in the police court on December 4th. They were charged with selling print dairy butter as genuine creamery. This offence is punishable under a special Federal Act passed three years ago known as the Inspection and Sales Act, in connection with the crusade for pure foods. The defendants, who pleaded guilty, were John Lyons, grocer, 587 Dundas Street, and Wm. Duckworth, who represented himself in the transactions as agent for the Wm. Duckworth Produce Co. The charge was laid by D. M. McPherson, of Lancaster, Dominion inspector. This is how the game was worked: For some months the inspector, whose duty it is to enforce the food laws, has been trying to run a clever but criminal trick to its source. Consignments of dairy butter were being received in Toronto from Grand Valley, Ont., but without any city address. Upon their arrival a local driver would mysteriously cart them away. This went on for months past, and according to the Crown prosecutor has been carried on for years. The packages were opened in Lyons' store and there began the process of converting cheap dairy butter into creamery by the application of a creamery wrapper, The Federal law forbids such a proceeding. In this way Lyons and his confederates were making the difference between the two grades, which came to nearly seven cents a pound. Following the case further, Inspector McPherson learned that in Grand Valley a man named Samuel Duckworth was stationed as Lyons' local agent, and had little trouble in buying up large consignments of dairy prints, which he sent on to Toronto to be made into creamery. In Grand Valley he posed as the representative of "William Duckworth & Son, Toronto," a firm which has no existence here. A neighboring firm in the same town, the Grand Valley Creamery, which conducted a legitimate creamery business, gave the Federal authorities information as to the nefarious working of the scheme, and aided in tracing it to a finish. The maximum fine under the Federal Food Act of three years ago is $50 and costs or one month in jail. The magistrate for the first offence consented to cut the amount in two, making it $25 and costs for each defendant.

ST. CATHARINES.

December 8.—The grocers report Christmas business as quiet although an improvement is expected this week. Factories here are not rushed with orders as they should be at this season, consequently many men are out of employment. While prospects are not any too bright for a large Christmas business yet it certainly looks as though the grocers of this city had decided to take whatever comes their way without putting forth any extra effort to make things lively. With one exception, not a single grocer in this city is advertising his Christmas groceries nor booming business in any way. A few attempts have been made at dressing windows with Christmas fruits, but in the majority of instances the windows are crude affairs, without price tickets and selling arguments. I often wonder if the men who are continually saying that times are dull know that quite a quantity of high class groceries, and in some instances staple lines, are being purchased in Toronto and shipped into this city. This trade should be gone after. It will help do away with the dull times and put business on the increase. The way to go after it is to dress the windows tastefully, attractively, and let the public at large know what you have to sell. If you want business, go after it.

Mrs. Kilroy has recently moved her stock of groceries from the corner of Niagara Street and Welland Avenue to Welland Avenue near Geneva. She reports business in the new stand equal to that in the former and the move has proven a money-saver in rent and other expenses.

D. B. Philipps has opened a grocery, drug and confectionery store on the corner of Niagara Street and Welland Avenue. Mr. Philipps recently disposed of his drug store on James Street and decided there was an opening for a store such as his at this section of the city. He reports business up to his expectation.

Loury & Son, proprietors of the general store at St. Davids, have purchased the butcher shop at the corner of Erie Avenue and Huron Street, Niagara Falls, Ont. Before securing this store a small frame building had been used on the city market for the disposal of meats, for which a nominal fee had been paid the city. Recently a new by-law went into force bringing the market rent to ten dollars per month. Rather than pay this fee for such limited quarters a store was sought out. Loury & Son are large buyers of cured meats as well as curing quantities themselves. Having a permanent branch at Niagara Falls will no doubt prove a paying venture to themselves and convenience to their patrons.

Christmas poultry will be high on this market if present prices are maintained. Turkey is quoted at 22c per pound.

HAMILTON.

December 8.—As a measure of protection the grocers are again preparing a delinquent list, and are going to try to prevent the professional dead-beat from getting in on them as in the past. At the first meeting of the association in the new year, each member proposes to hand to the secretary a list of twenty or thirty names of those who he knows to be unworthy of credit. The secretary will tabulate these, and any member can find out by telephone whether the applicant for credit has his name on the list, as more than half of the bad debts are contracted by this class of people. The arrangement should prove of great service to those interested. If the grocers would compare the names of their bad accounts they would find that most of them are owing bills to a good many in the trade.

As the municipal elections draw near the grocers are discussing the question of putting up some of their number for aldermanic honors. The president, John Forth, is being pressed to let his name go before the people, but with his usual modesty he declines, but he yet may be induced to run, and if he does it is a foregone conclusion that next year he will be Ald. Forth.

Trade is good here and it looks now as if business would be better than last year. Our markets are very large, and prices in butter, eggs and poultry are at the top notch. The stores are all taking on a nice bright look for the holiday trade.

W. W. Carruthers, formerly manager for W. R. Bridge, has bought out one of Mr. Mundy's branch stores, on the corner of Bristol Street and Sanford Avenue. Mr. Carruthers has been connected with the grocery trade nearly all his life, and knows it from A to Z. His friends wish him success in his venture.

The Canadian Grocer deserves the thanks of the business men all over Ontario for their enterprise in publishing the provisions of the law relating to peddlers. These should be thoroughly studied and suggestions made to the local member of the Ontario Legislature in every riding as the matter will likely be taken up at the next session, and the statutes revised. Be ready to protect your own interests.

PETERBORO.

December 8.—There is a merry "raisin race" on at present among some half-dozen of the local grocers. Raisins have been selling at 3 pounds for 25c, but recently one of the grocers lowered the price and began to sell an extra pound for the same money. Two or three followed suit and sold them at the same figure. But to cap the climax, another offered the public 5 pounds for 25c, which was a cent and a quarter less than the wholesale price. Where the race will end is a conjecture if any more advances are made. A Grocers' Association working smoothly should eliminate such differences.

Generally speaking, the trade among the grocers is good, but collections are reported somewhat slow. With the approach of the holiday season business is reviving and the coming two weeks promise to be very lively.

Local grocery windows are handsomely dressed at present, representing the season. One of the neatest is that of Geo. A. Goheen, whose display window contains Christmas goods of various kinds. "Merry Xmas." written with lumps of white sugar is the feature of the decorations.

BRANTFORD.

December 8.—The merchants report that Christmas trade is opening up splendidly. While the people do not seem to be buying in so large quantities as formerly, all the merchants anticipate a rush during the next two weeks. Last Saturday's business was good, and the market was largely attended, although prices remained practically the same. Butter was 26c to 28c per pound, fresh eggs 35c. Some of those offered for sale were very small in size, which caused our market inspector to suggest that they "sell eggs by the pound," then the people would be sure to get their money's worth.

M. McCarron, representing the Wallaceburg Sugar Co., reported selling two carloads of sugar in this city last week.

Alf. Patterson, the William St. grocer, has opened up a branch store at No. 2 Darling St., the Opera House Block, with a line of groceries and confectionery.

GUELPH.

December 8.—The Guelph Pure Milk Company, which was organized in the city a few weeks ago under conditions which were "heralded" forth as being most favorable for trade and for the betterment of the milk supply of the city has already gone to the wall. The company has disbanded completely and gone back to the old system. The fact that the public did not take to the new idea is the main reason given, but sooner or later a concern of this kind is going to make a success in this city, and it seems a pity these young men were not more successful. They had rented a store and fully intended going into the egg and butter business in connection with the milk. There is not the least bit of doubt if they had tided over the winter and worked together it would have been a success. There is now a good opening for such a business to be properly handled here under Government inspection, and it is very badly needed. We have some good local milk dealers, but some not so good also.

A new radial line is projected from Woodstock to Guelph by way of Galt, to connect with the Berlin, Galt & Hespeler system, and our local business men are getting very active as there is talk of this line going north as far as Arthur, taking in Elora and Fergus also which would mean a great boom to local business interests.

This is Winter Fair week, and the city is already crowded with visitors. The snow, which arrived Sunday, was just one of the most to be desired blessings that could happen for the success of the Fair. There is good sleighing here now and it is still snowing and turning colder, so everything looks very bright for business. The farmers who drive into the city do a great deal more business in the grocery stores than those who come by train.

There are five candidates for the Mayor's chair already in the field, and there is room now for a sixth. We need a grocer.

The Wydnham Street grocers have all made an extra splash in the way of displays in their windows this week for the benefit of the large number of visitors in the city, and all look fine. Bobbie Millar, at Geo. William's, has probably the finest display of fancy goods in his window. Archie Groom has followed up in the tracks of his predecessor and makes the finest display of canned goods in the city in his store. They are a credit to him. Benson Bros and Jackson & Son show a nice line of Christmas fruits, while J. C. Chittick has also a fruit window. J. A. McCrea & Son and Peter Anderson have nice crockery and china windows. The idea of leaving the windows and stores lit up in the evenings from now till Christmas would be a splendid idea, and would easily pay for itself. The Retail Merchants' Association should never have allowed those old home week lights to be taken down from this main street. The grocery stores are all a credit to the city, this year especially.

The grocers are requested to take particular pains to note the extra samples of grain and corn seeds, also the seed potatoes at the Fair.

Some grocers are already kicking because Christmas Day falls on Friday this year and the Saturday's business will be a failure. Well, suppose for the sake of argument now, we say it is a failure. If all the merchants are agreed that the Saturday after Christmas is going to be a failure and there won't be any use in keeping open, why not make a splash for one year and close from Thursday night at midnight till Monday morning, and take a holiday and give your clerks a chance also. The public would appreciate it and the idea of knowing you were going to be closed would add an enormous lot unto the Thursday's orders, knowing that they had to get supplies for three full days. That is the only way I can see to stop all argument and suit everybody.

PROTESTS AGAINST THE PEDDLING NUISANCE

The Itinerant Vendor's Competition Felt in Ingersoll — Why Should He Go Practically Untaxed?—What a Deseronto Merchant Thinks.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Ingersoll, Dec. 8.—The latest cry about the peddling nuisance comes from this town, where the peddlar is making himself and his work felt, and many merchants are asking why they should allow themselves to be taxed for the public upkeep while birds of passage under the guise of peddlars who reap all the benefits towards which the merchant contributes, pay nothing for the privilege and cut into the business from which the merchant makes the money to pay his taxes.

It appears that it is not unusual for a peddlar to go to the country at break of day with a wagon-load of sundries, returning at sundown with an empty wagon but a well-filled purse. During the night the wagon is filled again and ready for the next morning. No one will deny that it is a benefit to the housewife to have a dealer call and show and sell his wares without any exertion on her part, but then all the grocers in town are quite willing to call and do the same thing. They do not think it fair, however, to tax the man who sells in a store and allow the man who sells from a wagon to go free. Some of these peddlars handle a great variety of articles, and some few are even said to dispose of patent medicines, taking orders one day and delivering them the next time they go over the route.

If these peddlars paid a proportionate share of the taxes there would be no complaint even though they sold to some of the regular customers of the merchants, although that is a matter that a considerate merchant would not be guilty of. As it is, the merchant plants the seed, waters the shoot, and pays the piper; while the peddlar who has in no way helped, picks the plums. It is not fair.

The following letter on the same subject from Eastern Ontario is self-explanatory:

"Editor of Canadian Grocer:—In accordance with your invitation in a recent Grocer I beg leave to give you some of my views on the subject of peddlars. I take the broad stand that all peddling should be abolished by law except perhaps in the case of perishable goods such as fresh fish and fruit. I believe that the mercantile classes are just as important for the welfare of the country and deserve as much encouragement and protection as the farmers or manufacturers do. See the large amounts of money that are expended by the Government every year in supporting the Agricultural College, in sending expert teachers and lecturers out all over the Province to assist the farmers. See the large amounts that are expended every year in destroying moths and other pests, and in spraying fruit trees, all to protect the farmers and for which all merchants have to pay a good share but get very little or no protection.

"Peddlars are the pests of our business and the Government should do as much to rid us of them as they do for the farmers. What an absurd law it is for instance that if a peddlar says he is a manufacturer or the agent of a manufacturer he can peddle his goods all over Ontario and the law allows him to do so without paying one cent license. There is no reason why manufacturers should be exempt from paying a license. We retailers are all too busy at home to do any lobbying, but our interests should not be neglected on that account. Hoping that you will agitate this subject until we get relief."

BRIGHT GROCERIES IN LONDON

Two Thousand Dollars in Fixtures and a Number of New Ideas Make Up an Interesting Store—A Combined Grocery and Meat Shop.

(By the Canadian Grocer's Travelling Representative.)

"There are more grocers in London in proportion to population than in any other city in Canada," is the statement repeated over and over again by many a merchant in the Forest City. On looking up the directory one is faced with a total of about 230, which, in a community of 50,000, is not so bad. Of this total, 150 are members of the Grocers' Association, which, all things considered, is a very good showing.

There are so many striking features connected with the grocery trade in London that one must necessarily generalize. In the centre of the city, of course, are the larger stores, which are equipped with the latest in store furniture and fixtures and which also make a study of the window dressing feature.

$2,000 in Fixtures.

Not all of the big and fine stores are in the centre of London, however, for Harry Coates, in the south, has just completed and moved into what is probably the finest grocery store in the city. It stands on a corner lot and has two very large windows, which, when dressed, show off the goods to perfection, and it will take but little to dress those windows, for the woodwork is of such good quality and neat carving that it would help out any scheme devised beautifully. Indeed the whole interior is finished in quite elaborate style in oak. Some idea of its elaborateness may be gained when it is said that the cost of the store fixings alone was $2,000. The whole front of the store is glass, which floods the interior with light. The store itself is roomy and there is a place for everything. A large square glass-case counter is the first object which strikes one on entering the store. This case, besides serving the purpose of a counter, is used for the display of confectionery of a high grade, and it shows it off to perfection. At the end is the regular grocery counter of carved oak, with seats for customers attached. Mounted on top are the latest in scales and other usual fittings of the grocery store. Behind the counter the same elaborate scheme of oak fixings and shelves is carried out. Elaborate is scarcely the word, for while the store furnishings are of a fine character, plainness is the main note, though no second glance is necessary to tell that the quality is A.1.

A Boot and Shoe Department.

Besides groceries, Mr. Coates carries a stock of boots and shoes—a rather strange line to be combined with groceries—and one side of the store, which is a very broad one, is devoted to the display of footwear and is furnished quite as elegantly as the grocery side. This boot and shoe side-line will be treated later. Over the whole store reigns cleanliness and order, and to say the establishment is attractive is to speak in mild terms of its inviting appearance. That it will serve as a model for many another grocery store is attested by a number of London grocers who have given up half a day from their businesses to jog across the river to see the model store. Indeed "Harry Coates' new store" has received as much publicity as many a well-placed ad., and he is attracting customers, too, to his store from particular people in his neighborhood.

Planning for Cleanliness.

Mr. Coates has plans, too, to keep his store clean and neat always. The shop is for customers alone, the orders being filled and sent out from the stock-room at the rear of the store and entirely separated from it. In this way much confusion is avoided. New goods, as well, are received at the back and immediately placed in position when taken from the wagon. One-half of the stock-room is reserved for incoming goods and the other half for outgoing articles. In the stockroom, too, are lavatories and wash basins for the convenience of the clerks. The upper floors are used as a dwelling.

A Grocery and Meat Store.

Another establishment which deserves special mention in this connection is the grocery and meat store of A. J. Clark & Co., in the north end of London. The store is a single-storey structure and was built expressly for the purpose it now serves. The first thought in the erection of the store was to have everything as attractive and bright as possible. Plate glass windows run across the full front of the building and two doors, one leading to the grocery and the other to the butcher department, break the windows in three for display purposes. Each end window is used for display, one showing meats and vegetables, and the other groceries. The centre one is reserved for alternate displays of fruits and confectionery, which are backed up with palms.

Abundance of Air and Light.

As if there was not already sufficient light in the interior a row of prism windows along the side, for this is a corner store, admit more light. These windows are swung on pivots and as they are near the ceiling and above the goods on the shelves, may readily be opened to admit air.

A glass partition down the store divides the meat shop from the groceries and the aroma from one department is not noticeable in the other. In the centre of the store is the cash desk and office raised higher than the floor surface, giving a view up and down the whole establishment. The grocery department is fitted with oak counters, fixtures and dust-proof display bins. Neat cane-bottomed chairs are set about the store for the convenience of buyers, and the goods are set off in sections for convenient handling—canned goods and bottled articles behind the counter on the display shelves; packages of biscuits and bulk goods at the rear; fruits on the office side, and confectionery in display cases at the front.

There are a number of other older London grocery stores which might serve as models, but these are two of the recent ones and may give some hints to the grocer who purposes to build in the near future. The butcher department of A. J. Clark & Co. will be treated in a separate article.

MAYELL & CO REORGANIZED.

Jas. Litster, Cecil Jenkins and John G. Kent Interested in Old Toronto Company.

A. W. Mayell, doing business as Mayell & Co., Toronto, manufacturers and dealers in spices, extracts, baking powders, coffees, etc., is applying for a charter. This business has been in existence for over a quarter of a century and expansion of trade demands the new step. It is understood that the manufacturing end of the business will now be under the direction of James Litster, who has had charge of the manufacturing processes for the Pure Gold Mfg. Co. since its inception. Mr. Litster is favorably known to the grocery trade of the entire Dominion and his connection with the new company will assure a maintenance of the production of strictly pure goods of the highest quality. He was maker of the first jelly powders marketed in Canada, and is an authority on flavoring extracts, etc. The sales department of the business will be looked after by Cecil R. Jenkins, also widely known to the grocery trade as sales manager for Gowans, Kent & Co., Toronto. These gentlemen have also succeeded in interesting John G. Kent, formerly of Gowans, Kent & Co., and with the addition of the combined ability and experience of the new executive the prospects of the larger company are exceedingly bright.

NO MORE "SNACKS" IN ALTON

Since the destruction of the Algie Mills at Alton a couple of weeks ago, it has been whispered in some quarters that this would spell the end of the "Drummers' Snack," that unique event which has been held at Alton for several years and which has accounted for a few bright days in the trips of a good many Ontario travelers. An inquiry from President "Bob" Asher the other day, however, put this idea at rest.

"Not a bit of it," said Bob. "The prospects are that next year's "Snack" will be better than ever. It isn't at all likely it will be held in Alton," he continued. "The fire and several other reasons account for that, but the residents of Erin are hot after it, and the chances are that 1909's outing will be held there. There was some talk of going to Georgetown, where we could get a whale of a crowd of travelers, but the death of Harry Coffin, one of our strongest supporters in that town, the other day, put a crimp in that. Nothing definite has been done yet, but you can be sure next year's 'Snack,' wherever it is held, won't be behind other years."

NEW CONDENSED MILK FACTORY.

There are now three condensed milk factories in Ontario—at Aylmer, Ingersoll and Tillsonburg. John Malcolm, of Beverley Township, Wentworth County, has removed to St. George, where he will start a factory for the manufacture of condensed milk, the St. George creamery being converted for that purpose.

T. H. Estabrooks, of St. John, N.B., is visiting the Red Rose branch office in Toronto this week.

With the Travelers

Annual Meeting and Election of Officers of Western Ontario Association—Travelers Taking Steps to Provide for Fire Appliances in Hotels—What the Law Says on the Matter.

The annual meeting of the Western Ontario Commercial Travelers' Association was held at London on Saturday, December 5.

In opening the meeting, President John T. Green stated that the annual report showed exceedingly good results in all respects, viz., a total membership of 2,482, which is practically the same as last year, and which was by far the largest in the history of the association, a new membership of about 400 and a total addition to the reserve fund of nearly $17,000. The death claims accruing due during the year had been somewhat larger than usual, amounting to $10,915, but after providing for these and all other liabilities, the reserve fund now amounts to $175,210.30. This is also one of the largest additions which has ever been made to this fund. The association has been called upon to mourn the loss of nineteen members by death. Further important representations had been made to the Provincial Government in regard to better accommodation for the traveling public in sections where local option law has obtained, also for the more rigid inspection of hotels and licensed places with reference to the cleanliness and sanitation, and also in providing all necessary fire escapes. In this connection the appointment of a special provincial inspector had been urged in order to obtain the best results. The most cordial relations continued with the transportation companies, but numerous complaints had been made that all members did not observe the rule of voluntarily producing their certificates when purchasing special rate tickets, and also to other authorized railway officials when requested. It was desired to impress upon the members that this was always necessary, and it was hoped that there would be no further occasion for complaint in this respect.

In the election of officers for the ensuing year, when the following were nominated, with the exception of the directors for London, and declared duly elected by acclamation. Seven out of the nine nominated will be elected directors from London. President, J. T. Green, re-elected; First Vice-President, R. E. Davis, re-elected; Second Vice-President, D. Ferguson, re-elected; Third Vice-President, John Lennox, Hamilton, re-elected; Treasurer, W. L. Underwood, London, re-elected; Directors for London, W. Smithson, H. W. Lind, W. D. Wright, A. S. Wallace, R. H. Turnbull, E. N. Hannah, P. M. Millman, Frank Lawson, F. E. Harley; for Toronto, Wm. Stone, H. Horsman, A. E. Johnston; for Ottawa, F. E. Breckenridge; for Hamilton, George Hope, John Booker, H. R. Thurber; for Stratford, Jas. Dow; for Brantford, George Watt, jr.; for St. Mary's, James Maxwell; for Montreal, H. H. Harnon, H. A. Bordeau; for Ayr, John G. Watson; for Oshawa, Major R. Dillon; for St. John, N.B., A. T. Lane, George H. Clarke; for St. Thomas, B. F. Honsinger; for Woodstock, Alby. Robinson, R. G. Beekerton, J. E. Ferguson; for Windsor, James F. Smyth; for Chatham, Charles E. Bodley, A. E. Merritt; for Ingersoll, Wm. Waterworth, C. W. Johnston; for New Hamburg, J. Ratz; for Winnipeg, H. J. Boyd, H. W. Little; for Aylmer, R. G. B. Moore; for Calgary, J. A. Brookbank; for Victoria, B.C., T. Harry Slater.

Arrangements were made by which the annual meeting will be held on Saturday, December 26, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

HOTELS AND FIRE ESCAPES.

The men who take the greatest risks are not always those facing danger in visible form but those who do not know when danger may approach or from what quarter it may come.

J. T. GREEN,

Re-elected President Western Commercial Travelers' Association.

The commercial traveler sleeping in hotels of every kind, all over the country has no means of telling when a serious fire may break out. Yet, according to the word of reputable men on the road, there are many public houses in Ontario openly violating the act which calls for such buildings, whether in licensed or local option districts, providing proper and ample fire escapes.

The question naturally arises, why have not the license inspectors seen that the terms of the law are carried out? Why have they been remiss in duty? The present state of affairs is so bad that a deputation of travelers intend in the near future to wait upon the Provincial Secretary to ascertain if the offending hotelkeepers cannot be brought to time. The delegation will lay before the minister a list of hotels which have not efficient fire escapes. Why should it be necessary for the travelers to take this move? It is unmistakably the duty of the local inspectors appointed by the Government, and either the department itself or its servants have been negligent in compelling compliance with the act. The law is clear and explicit on this point.

Chapter 264 of the Consolidated License Act of 1905 says in part:

"Every owner, lessee, or proprietor of an hotel exceeding two storeys in height, shall erect or cause to be erected at least one permanent outside stairway or ladder, from the landings or floors, landing or floor above the first storey of such hotel and extending to at least said first storey, such stairway or ladder to be built of iron and to be firmly attached to the wall of the building and to be supplied with a hand rail on either side, and to be of sufficient strength to sustain the weight of at least six full grown persons at the same time; and every such lessee or proprietor shall at all times keep the way or passage to such stairway or ladder unobstructed and free of access.

"The keeper of every hotel shall, where the same is more than two storeys in height, provide and keep in each of the sleeping apartments or bedrooms which are situate above the ground floor, a fire escape for the use of guests occupying the same. Such fire escape shall be sufficient within the meaning of this Act if it consists of a rope not less than three-quarters of an inch in thickness, and of sufficient length to reach from the room or apartment in which it is kept to the ground below, and is kept in a coil or other convenient position in each of the said bed-rooms or sleeping apartments; and if the outside window or opening of such sleeping apartments or bed-rooms is provided with proper, secure and convenient fastenings or appliances to which one end of the rope may be safely secured or fastened; "Provided that the provisions of this subsection shall be deemed to be sufficiently complied with by the substitution for the rope therein mentioned with the approval of the inspector, of the fire escape known as 'the Natural Drop Fire Escape' consisting of a cylindrical casing made of canvas or any other suitable material and provided at the top with a metal ring supported by chains from the window, the lower portion of the casing extending into proximity with the ground." R.S. O. 1897, c. 264, s. 3; 63 V. c. 44, s. 1.

"The keeper of every hotel shall, in addition to the notices which he is now required by law to keep posted up in each of his sleeping apartments or bedrooms, also keep posted up therein a notice calling attention to the said fire escapes, and containing full directions for the use of the same, as well as a description of the outside stairway and the situation and means of egress to O. 1897, c. 264, s. 3; 63 V. c. 44, s. 1.

Montreal, Dec. 10, 1908.

A steady improvement has been noted in trade during the week. It is rather difficult to determine how much of this is due to the general awakening, and how much to the increased volume of business incidental upon the holiday season. The colder weather and snow, is regarded by business men as a favorable feature in addition to the general improvement. Lumbering operations can now get well under way, and in a country like Canada, where this industry constitutes one of its largest assets, favorable natural conditions are a great factor. There is, however, amid all these admirable elements an unfortunate feature in the water situation. Reports from the Eastern Townships report remarkable shortage, and in some cases, sources are dried up which have never been known to fail before. Trade in Montreal has not developed many features of especial note, aside from the general improvement, and tendency for firmer prices. Eggs, butter and cheese are all firm, and in good demand. The vegetable business, which has not been any too good for some time, has shown more activity. Fruits are meeting with a good sale, especially Christmas lines. Beans have shown signs of renewed vigor, owing to greater activity at western points.

The demand for some lines of provisions has been a trifle slow, but others have firmed up slightly. Sugar is steady. Maple products remain featureless. Canned goods are fairly active, while other lines are going nicely.

SUGAR—While the demand is not large, there is a steady inquiry of fair proportions. Quotations have shown no changes since last report.

TEA—Japan dealers report a better inquiry locally. At this season of the year there is a small demand for teas, as most merchants are busy with holiday lines, and are liable to neglect staple goods. This season, however, the lightness of stocks has kept the demand fairly good and steady.

DRIED FRUITS—In discussing the situation with a prominent dealer, he stated that their business had never been better, and in reviewing the situation, said, the remarkable feature of the trade since new stock had arrived, was the celerity with which available stock had been bought up. The goods which were not already sold, were disposed of almost immediately upon reaching America. This general activity has been fairly well distributed among all lines. Locally trade is good.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Reports from the primary rice markets state that receipts are only moderate and owing to low prices are in good demand. Honduras lines are scarce and fancy grades are also small in supply. Cables from abroad note steady markets. Locally wholesalers report small volume of trade with no changes. CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Fish is the centre of attraction at the present time, while fruits and vegetables are meeting with a good sale. Meats are not as active as other lines.

TORONTO.—The amount of business passing at this season is rather a new feature. This is no doubt a result of the lighter buying in advance earlier in the season. Corn, peas and tomatoes are reported as the most active lines, with some attention being paid to fruits and fish.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Steady.
Teas—High grade Ceylons scarce and dear.
Apricots—Firmer.
Nuts—Demand excellent.
Spices—Firm.

Toronto, December 10, 1908.

Business continues on about the same basis as reported last week. Considerable brightness is evident and some of the wholesale houses are enthusiastic over present conditions. Others are less expressive but say that business is all right. This week the bulk of the orders is for fruit and nuts. While the greater part of the regular Christmas buying has been done, retailers in a great many cases seem to have bought rather lightly and an abundance of sorting orders is keeping matters active.

The beginning of sleighing has been a benefit to retailers at country points particularly. City grocers report business as fairly quiet but expect a big fortnight before Christmas.

The markets have been fairly steady during the week. The higher grades of Ceylon tea continue to climb and spices are a little firmer in feeling. Otherwise staple goods are on a pretty steady basis.

SUGAR—The refined market is unchanged, with very little interest displayed. European raw markets have fluctuated as usual, down and up. No new estimates of European beet crop have been brought forward and, generally speaking, the sugar situation is without change of importance in any direction and looks favorable to the continuance of about present values, both at home and abroad, for the immediate future.

Willett & Gray sum up the world's visible supply as follows:—Total stock of Europe and America, 1,835,851 tons, against 1,756,238 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The increase of stock is 79,613 tons, against an increase of 113,890 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 1,879,851 tons, against 1,813,238 tons last year, or an increase of 66,613 tons.

TEAS—High grade Ceylons continue to climb in price, as they have been doing for the past couple of months. A cable received by a local broker on Tuesday noted also a firmer feeling in the other grades. This places all Ceylons on a very strong basis.

In reviewing the situation, Thompson Bros., of London, weekly circular dated Nov. 26, says:—At this time of the year there is always a certain amount of speculation rife as to the amount of crop likely to be manufactured, and as to whether or not there will be an early or a late close. It is, of course, premature yet to be able to form an opinion one way or the other, but from Mail advices received, except from Assam, the crop is hardly likely to be so large as last year. In this connection it is interesting to note that for the first time since the commencement of the season, the total quantity of Indian tea offered in London is in excess of last year, thus removing what has been somewhat of an incubus to the market. With the lowest quotation steady and a good general demand for better grades a firm market has been maintained throughout the auctions for 73,640 pkgs. from all sources. The position of tea shows on the whole an improvement, from which a continued moderate increase in the Customs returns may be looked for.

COFFEE—Local business is exceptionally good this week, with prices steady. The primary markets are slightly easier, though not enough to affect local conditions.

Willett & Gray, in a review of the situation, say in part:—

"Strange to say, although we are now in the month of December, there is no fresh news forthcoming about the growing crop, nor any estimates from Rio or Santos. Of late years the Centro de Cafe in Rio has given out an estimate by the 1st of December, and their figures may be looked for any day. On the receipts in Brazil so far, compared with the crops from 1903-04 to 1905-06, the present crop in Santos does not appear to be larger than 9,000,000 bags, and considering the inducements for the planters to send down their crops as fast as possible, as 20 per cent. extra duty will be levied on any quantities received in Santos after the 9,000,000-bags limit shall have been reached, it must be supposed that the crop has been marketed this time just as rapidly as in those other years. The crop in San Paulo this season has been very irregular, some planters securing a very good yield, while others had even less than the small crops of last year; so that the planters who had good crops would ship them out quickly, whereas those who had only small crops were obliged to send them forward at once on account of financial necessity. Negotiations for the San Paulo Consolidated Loan, while not officially reported as finished, can be so considered. The majority in the House of Deputies in Rio was very large in favor of the Guarantee Law, while the majority in the Senate was assured before the discussion commenced."

DRIED FRUITS—There is an excellent demand for practically all lines this week, and while retailers have not bought so heavily in advance as in former years the sorting orders are bringing the business pretty well up to former years. Figs, dates, and raisins are all moving well. Fancy table raisins are in extra good demand, and wholesalers' stocks in these are light. Apricots are being bought freely and are reported firmer on the coast, present prices being very favorable. Low prices in Valencia raisins still continue. Quotations generally are about the same as last week.

A PARTICULAR CUSTOMER.

"Ma wants a pound of cheese exactly like what you sent us last. If it isn't exactly like what she got before she won't take it," said the small boy.

The grocer turned to his numerous customers and remarked blandly:

"Some people in my business don't like particular customers, but I do. It's my delight to serve them and get them what they want. I will attend to you in a moment, little boy."

"Be sure and get the same kind. A lot of pa's relations are visiting our house, and ma doesn't want 'em to come again," the small boy explained.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

The last day of November brought with it a real old-fashioned blizzard. There was too little snow for much drifting, but as the day advanced the thermometer dropped pretty steadily and from Monday onward the weather has been very sharply cold, but clear and fine, with plenty of sunshine. The sudden drop in temperature has suited the retail merchants and the coal dealers to perfection. The change was extreme enough to send everyone flying for overshoes, heavy underwear, fur collars and fur coats and the houses handling these lines have been doing a land-office business all week, and a couple of weeks of such weather before Christmas will go far to balance the extreme mildness of the fall so far as the clothing, fur and footwear trade is concerned.

The beginning of another month calls attention to the condition of collections and in every line of business they show improvement. The change is perhaps most marked in the matter of loan collections as November is a heavy month for them always and both the large loan and large insurance companies having heavy investments in the Canadian West report collections as really remarkably good and many claim that in collections 1908 will go down as a banner year. The companies not only report old business well cleaned up, but a very satisfactory line of new business. The loan companies claim that the only requests for extension of time are coming from a few points in Saskatchewan, where they suffered from frost damage to the grain. Wholesale houses report collections very good and expect to close with a distinct advance on last year. Christmas sorting trade has been good in dry goods, fancy goods and choice groceries. Retail Christmas trade is good in all lines and merchants declare the class of goods being bought is better than last year.

The much-talked-of, long-delayed St. Andrew's locks will probably be rushed to completion early in the summer of 1909. Colton & Scott, contractors, left during the last week for Lake Winnipeg, taking with them 150 men to work in the bush. This firm has contracted for 100,000 ties for the Canadian Northern Railway, and are going so far as to send their solicitor in person to Ottawa to endeavor to bring about the completion of the locks by the beginning of June, 1909. These men claim that were the locks open it would mean a saving of $10,000 to them on this tie contract alone. In addition to the ties, large quantities of wood could be brought in and laid down at the Winnipeg end for $2.75 per cord. Two other items would be greatly reduced in cost by the locks being opened and would have a very material effect on building. Sand in Winnipeg now runs from $1.40 to $1.75, and the quality offered is very inferior to the sand that can be got in almost inexhaustible quantities on the shores of Lake Winnipeg. With the locks open this sand could be loaded on barges and brought to the city at just about one-half of what is now paid for clean sand in this city. The other item is fine building granite which can be blasted and loaded on barges at very small expense. This contracting firm seems very confident of success in the embassy to Ottawa and there are many other firms in the wood and building lines in Winnipeg that will wish them success in their undertaking.

Among the interesting railway news of the week is the announcement of a big survey party pulling out from Saskatoon to locate the continuance of the Canadian Northern Railway to Calgary. It is announced that the survey will be pushed with all speed and that everything will be ready for the contractors to get to work early in the spring.

I learned last week that one of the big eastern dailies had requested their western correspondent to send them no more news of wheat inspections and such like, as they were tired of it. Perhaps readers of The Grocer are tired of it also, but assuredly it still forms one of the most important features of the situation in the West. Over forty-one thousand cars of wheat have passed through Winnipeg inspecting yards since the beginning of September, which means that there have been nearly four cars hauled this year to two in any other year. Of this wheat close on 75 per cent. has been of contract grade.

The outward shipment from the head of the lakes has been almost as phenomenal as the inspections. The storm of Monday delayed a large number of boats at the Soo and these all arrived in a bunch on Thursday, forty in all. Quite heavy premiums have been paid for spot stuff to fill these boats, indeed the scramble for boats is much greater than was anticipated. The period of open water has been extended so far as insurance is concerned, from the 5th to the 12th of the month, but it is just possible that Jack Frost may close the navigation even if the insurance companies do not. There is so large an amount of wheat to go out to Buffalo that it would be rather disastrous should navigation actually close earlier than the 12th. Not only has there been a heavy trade in spot stuff for the boats but the last three days of the week developed quite a trade for December delivery, so that it is evident the all-rail route will be patronized to a considerable extent after navigation closes. The situation looks extremely strong here, but among the more conservative traders there is a good deal of skepticism as to the success of the Bartlett-Paten corner.

The outbreak of foot and mouth disease among the cattle of the United States has been a serious inconvenience to western cattle dealers just at the close of the most successful season in the cattle trade that has yet been recorded. Dealers here had booked a large amount of space from Boston, Portland and other American ports for the last of the season, and these ports being closed, it has been found almost impossible to secure space out of Canadian ports, for space had been at a premium for some time before this outbreak occurred. By dint of hard work space has been secured for all cattle actually bought at the time of the closing of the ports, but a considerable number of cattle at that time unpurchased have been thrown on the local markets because they could not be exported and the markets were rather overburdened before, so that this influx has had the effect of further depressing prices. The change to very cold weather, however, has been beneficial in this respect in that it has closed the season up country sooner than would otherwise have been the case.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, December 10, 1908.)

POINTERS—
Sugar—Steady.
Prunes—Declined half cent.
Rice—Easier.
Evaporated Apples—Advanced to 8½c.

Christmas business has been active with the wholesalers and judging from the repeat orders received the retailers have also found it very satisfactory. Cold weather has materially helped the grocery trade as well as nearly every other line of business.

The close of the year finds the trade very optimistic as to business prospects for 1909. The depression has had many excellent results in spite of some unpleasant features. Business is now on a sounder basis, speculation has been checked, and with a return of prosperity there is bound to be a big improvement in legitimate business.

Methods of Attracting Holiday Trade

The Grocer Should Make Every Preparation to Bring the Customers Into His Store—Some Novel Ideas Which Will Aid in This Work.

Adequate methods of preparation for the business of the holiday season are absolutely necessary. There is little use of merchants endeavoring to console themselves or satisfy themselves by saying that to sell Christmas goods there is no need of an elaborate publicity campaign, either by interior and window display, or through the daily and weekly newspapers, because the "giving" spirit in the buying public is so active that it is a positive certainty that they will buy the goods.

Although the reason given for their lassitude is quite plausible, it isn't rational. Just because the people are sure to buy Christmas goods is no reason why a grocer should be so confident that he will enjoy their patronage without soliciting it.

As the competitive spirit has become so universal and so merciless, the grocer will find it imperative that he make strenuous endeavors to convince the buying public of the superiority of his goods if he hopes to maintain his business.

The first thing to do is to carefully inspect invoices and order sheets to ascertain whether the necessary goods have been ordered, and in sufficient quantity, and, second, to remind the jobbers and agents of your desire to have the goods delivered promptly.

The second thing to do is to remove goods, although seasonable, to less prominent positions in the store, to make room for the Christmas goods.

It will also be both appropriate and profitable to decorate the stores with evergreens, holly, and attractively designed and arranged lights. Everything that is calculated to increase the attractive power of your store and thereby increase the possibility of increasing your sales, in gaining new patrons and securing them for future patronage should without the slightest hesitation be done.

Then comes the arrangement of the Christmas goods. To array these in the most attractive and sales-effecting way possible is essential to the success of the holiday season's business.

A REVOLVING CHRISTMAS TREE.

There is nothing more impressive at Christmas time than a revolving Christmas tree, lighted by electric lamps. A simple, yet inexpensive way of arranging a revolving Christmas tree, that will not upset and is easy to put up and take down year after year, is shown in the accompanying sketches from the Scientific American. The initial cost is the only one except the recharging of the batteries every year, which can be done from an ordinary lamp socket, using a number of lamps as a rheostat.

First locate in the ceiling, at the selected place for the tree, a beam or lath, and with the point of a sharp knife cut out a V in the ceiling paper, and bend the point of the paper to one side. Into this exposed part of the ceiling screw a hook about 3-16-inch in diameter. To this the tree is hung as hereinafter described. When the tree is taken down and the hook unscrewed, the V-shaped piece of paper may be pasted back to cover the hole and leave no marks in the ceiling.

The inside or stationary part of an old bicycle pedal is fastened to the above-mentioned hook. To the outer or revolving part are secured two wires about 12-gauge and 2 feet long. These wires are securely fastened on opposite sides of the tree, preferably bent under a branch (Fig. 1). A piece of tin may be cut and fastened at the top pf the pedal, from which the tinsel and strings of glass balls may be hung.

To the lower part of the tree is secured an arrangement as shown in Fig. 3. This consists of a large grooved pulley about 12 inches in diameter by $\frac{7}{8}$-in. thick, made out of ordinary pine board. The groove may be made with the edge of a half-round rasp. To the upper side of this pulley are secured three or more small brackets, which are fastened to the tree with wood screws. On the under side of this pulley are secured and insulated from each other two metal discs or rings, such as brackets for ordinary gas globes, terminating on top of the pulley with binding posts. Into the centre is driven a tenpenny wire nail. A small box placed on its side may be put on the floor under the tree with a small hole to receive the nail. This forms a guide for the lower end of the tree. The box may either be nailed or weighted down, so as to keep the tree steady. Fastened on the box and insulated from each other are two copper brushes, one for each ring respectively. A small electric motor, such as is usually sold for $1, is now placed about 18 to 24 inches from the large pulley. As a rule, these motors run too fast for this purpose. A wire may be coiled about the motor shaft and soldered fast to form a worm which may mesh with a train of clock wheels. These can be obtained from any watchmaker. To the shaft of one of these wheels a small pulley is secured about one inch in diameter (Fig. 1). Wrap this pulley with cord, and put some resin on, so as to increase the friction. Now place a small endless cord over the large and small-grooved pulleys. The motor should be connected up with a dry-cell battery, and by placing in the circuit a switch or push button, the motor may be started at will.

The tree is now ready to revolve, and should make five to seven revolutions per minute. The batteries may either be kept in the box under the tree or in the cellar, where they will be out of the way. Two small holes may be drilled in the floor, about 2 inches apart. A pointed copper wire about 8 gauge may be pushed through the rug or carpet into these holes and connections made to these wires with the batteries in the cellar and to the brushes on the top of the box, and by putting a switch in the circuit the current may be turned on or off.

From the binding posts on top of the large pulley, the feed wires are run on opposite sides of the trunk of the tree to their respective lamps; ordinary bell wire will answer the purpose. It has been found best to run several of these feed wires, and to put about five lamps on each set. This gives far better and more uniform distribution of the electricity to the lamps than when large wires are used, as the top lamps get very little or no current. The lamps used in series from the ordinary current are by far too bright, as it simply puts the tree in the "shade." A soft light is the more desirable, and the tree may be decorated to a better advantage with battery lamps, as no unsightly sockets or heavy cords are used, and there is no danger of fire. The wires are soldered on the lamps, as shown in Fig. 4, and may be placed on the hands of the images used in decoration of the tree. The lamps may also be inclosed in small Japanese lanterns, which will greatly add to the beauty of the tree.

Another pretty effect may be obtained by using an ordinary tree candle with its usual holder hung on a bough. To do this, remove the wick by boring a small hole in the centre of the candle, into which insert the wires, already soldered onto the lamp, letting the lamp rest on the top of the candle (Fig. 5). Of course, the more lamps used, the prettier the effect. A 7-foot tree will require from 25 to 35 lamps.

The connection between the lamps and the feed wires may be done by twisting the ends together. Care should be taken that the ends of the opposite wires do not touch each other, and that no tinsel comes in contact with them. Run the branch wires on top of the branches. A diagram of the wiring is shown in Fig. 1.

When all the lights are turned on, start up the motor and see that everything is all right and that all the lamps are burning bright before decorating the tree. Then the lamps may be moved to suit the ornaments.

The box under the tree, as well as the motor may now be covered up with cotton batting and small twigs cut from the lower branches of the tree.

Electric Candle.

Instead of placing the tree in front of a window, it may be placed in the centre of a dining-room table. The table may be opened about six inches to let the trunk of the tree pass through. Some of the lower branches will have to be cut off. The chandelier may be removed and a small hook screwed on th gas pipe, from which the tree may b suspended. To close the opening in the table, two tablecloths must be used, and a few twigs may be placed where the cloths meet.

A double floor switch may be employed, to one side of which the wires from the motor and to the other the wires to the lights may be connected. By manipulating the switch with the foot, the motor may be started or the lights turned on independently of each other.

TO PREVENT TREE UPSETTING.

The Christmas tree can be safety supported by the use of fine, almost invisible, wire. Fasten three or four wires to the main body of the tree at a point near the top. Draw each wire tight, and secure to the brads in the door and window frames, or the picture molding, at opposite sides of the room. Twist one or two of the wires about strong limbs to prevent the tree from turning. This arrangement obviates all necessity for marring the floor.

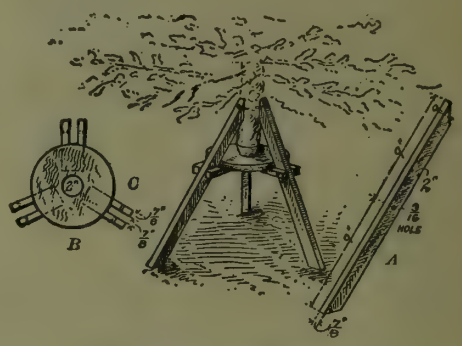
A HOLIDAY ATTRACTION.

The accompanying sketch, from the Merchants Record and Show Window shows a simple little device that can be used effectively at the top of a Christmas window background. The drawing indicates the mechanism clearly. A runway a few inches wide is placed horizontally across the top of the back. It has a roller at each end, over which an endless belt travels. To the belt is attached a toy automobile loaded with bags of toys. Santa Claus is the driver. At one end is an auto having a spring door which opens from the inside out. At the other end are some miniature fir trees. From the front of the runway hangs a fringe of imitation icicles which conceal the belt. When the motor is started up the auto runs out of the station door, across the back and disappears among the trees at the other end. This performance is repeated indefinitely. The ends of the runway should be concealed so that the onlooker cannot see the auto pass under on the return trip. By making an inclined instead of a horizontal runway a coasting hill or toboggan slide may be constructed on the same principle. In this case a number of Teddy Bears could be made to slide down hill in a very natural manner.

FOLDING TREE STAND.

The accompanying cut shows a simple way to make a support for a Christmas tree. The material should be of hard or tough wood that will not split easily, writes A. V. Searing.

Make three pieces like A, of ¾x2-inch strip, also three pieces like C, of ¾x2¾-inch strip, and one piece like B; for this the bottom of a peach basket will do very well. In the centre of the disc B bore a 2-inch hole to receive the sharpened base of the tree. Fasten the C pieces to the underside of the disc B with screws. Bore holes in the arms of each C piece to just receive a 3-inch wire nail. In the top of each leg, A, as shown, insert a small nail or screw to form a point that will press into the tree. Now place a leg A in the slot sawed out of C, and pass a 3-inch wire nail through the holes.



Folding Tree Stand.

When the Christmas tree is taken down the legs may be unhinged and the stand folded and packed away for use next year.

DON'T BE A GROUCH.

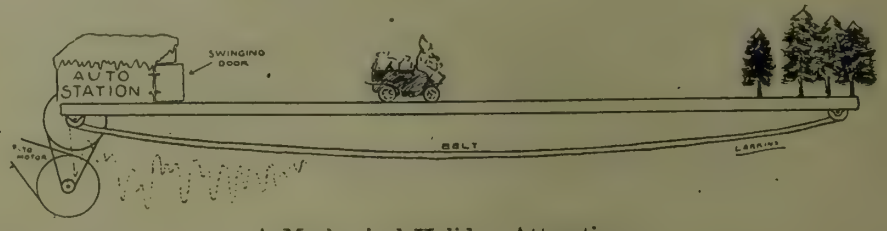
Don't you believe that if you, personally, directed a little more attention to your customers, your business would increase?

Manufacturers often hire men outside of the regular salesmen to call around and simply say good day to a customer and if the customer has any kicks against the goods or the firm, he stands ready to remedy them.

If, when you went to your wholesale house to buy groceries, instead of a salesman coming over to greet you, the president, vice-president or secretary of the concern shook your hand and showed you the goods they had in stock, wouldn't you feel more apt to run up a larger order than if one of the house salesmen waited upon you, and wouldn't you feel as though your business was appreciated by the firm?

A picture in an advertisement doesn't need translating, for it speaks all languages.

Temper is such a good thing that we should never lose it.



A Mechanical Holiday Attraction.

If you have trade days in your town, take advantage of them to display in your window the comparative prices and quality of your goods with catalogue-house supplies.

Hints on Show Card Writing

A Method of Advertising Which Grocers Might Well Take Wider Advantage of — Not so Difficult as Most Merchants Suppose—Pictures Clipped From Magazines and Pasted on Cards Make Designs Attractive—The Materials to Use

By J. L. Wyckoff, Manager Rowat & Co.'s Branch Store, London.

Up-to-date show cards are one of the most important methods of advertising for merchants, yet few grocers take advantage of this inexpensive way of selling their goods. How many grocery stores you pass to-day and see a neatly arranged window display but not a card calling attention to the quality and price of goods displayed, or if any cards appear they are so slovenly made that they seem to mar what otherwise might have been a profitable and attractive window display?

Card writing is not so difficult as it at first appears. With a little practice anyone could make fairly good cards. Select a plain type of letter, the plainer the better, and one that can be made with single strokes of the brush, that is, one single down-sweep of the brush forms the stem of the letter, another the top, etc. Go at it deliberately and carefully and you will be surprised in a short time to find yourself writing cards neatly and rapidly.

Have as few words on your cards as possible, something that can be read in a moment as people pass the window. In making price tickets, if you have such words as "choicest," "finest grown" or some others as a heading, and underneath the price you will find them far more effective than if the prices only appeared.

Spacing is Important.

After deciding what shall be the wording on the card, sketch it in roughly with a lead pencil or chalk on dark cardboard. The spacing of the letters and general layout of the card must be done very carefully. This is more important than having the letters accurately drawn as good composition and spacing will make an attractive card even if the letters are a bit irregular; the only lines you need to rule are the top and bottom, indicating the height of the letters. All the rest is done freehand.

A very attractive and serviceable card is one having a dark background with the letters in white. Have some kind of a design on one side of the card, appropriate to the wording, if possible. This need not be drawn or painted on the card, but may be a picture clipped from some magazine and pasted on the card. Now draw a black line about an eighth of an inch wide with the brush all around the picture and close up to it. This is to cover up the edge so that at a short distance you cannot detect that the picture was pasted on the card.

The Materials to Use.

For general use eight-ply white cardboard, with a matt surface, is the best, and for the dark cards get "carbon black" about eight or ten-ply in thickness.

The brushes are called "Red Sable Riggers," and Nos. 9 and 12 are the best sizes. These will make a fine line or as broad as the brush itself.

SHOW CARD WRITING—A Sample o f Mr. Wyckoff's More Elaborate Designs.

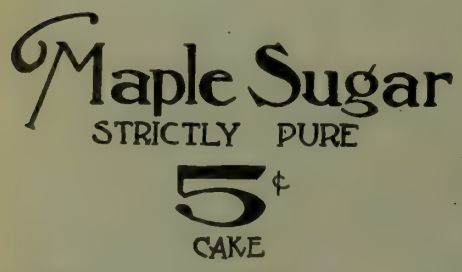
Stafford's white and black show card inks are about the best paint to use, although I use mostly the kind I mix myself by taking about half a teaspoonful of dry paint, bought at any hardware store and in any color, on a piece of glass, adding a few drops of alcohol—this is to break the paint—and grind with a palette knife or an ordinary table knife will answer just as well. Then add common mucilage until about as thin as a thick paste and grind thoroughly. Put this mass into a saucer and add water until it is about like thin maple syrup. If this is properly mixed you will have a paint that will flow freely from the brush and dry quite rapidly.

SHOW CARD WRITING—An Effective Design With Picture. The Original was 22 by 15 inches in size.

Some Further Hints.

Do not use too many colors on a card. Good combination is blue letters with underlining in red or black. These go very nicely together.

Try to make your cards original, different from your neighbors. Study the advertisements in magazines for good layouts. You will be surprised with the number of good ideas you will get from the advertising pages of the different magazines.



SHOW CARD WRITING—One of the Simpler Designs.

[Several cards written by Mr. Wyckoff himself are reproduced herewith. These show, not only how he carries out several of the ideas he has mentioned in the article, but also how very striking these cards can be made. Mr. Wyckoff's designs are not all so elaborate as most of those shown, but, unfortunately, the simpler ones were done in colors which do not permit of reproduction.—Editor.]

CANADIAN TRADE GROWING.

Trade Commissioners at Leeds and Cape Town Make Encouraging Reports.

The trade of Canada with the North of England is growing rapidly. A few years ago there was practically no direct business done and all Canadian produce sold in the North of England was disposed of as American. A great change has now been brought about.

Trade Commissioner J. B. Jackson, of Leeds, in a recent report to the Ottawa authorities, says:

The progress of Canada and of Canadian affairs in general are followed here with such close interests that in the eyes of the people anything coming from the Dominion seems to carry additional attraction and interest. This is worth a good deal in trade, and many firms have realized the importance of it, and establishments are being opened under the name of Canadian produce companies. Many firms are making use of the word Canadian to aid them in the sale of goods. Several firms are handling Canadian apples almost exclusively, and one of them has this year imported and disposed of 43,000 barrels. The development is not confined to fruit. Lines of other Canadian produce and of Canadian manufactures are being more and more largely handled.

SHOW CARD WRITING—A Striking Card for Everyday Use.

There is a tendency on the part of importing houses to use the Canadian trade index for the purpose of corresponding with many Canadian firms for the handling of lines they produce. Some of the Leeds fruit men came to Canada and made direct arrangements with Canadian fruit growers. He thinks this plan of direct negotiation might be carried on with profit in regard to other lines.

J. A. Chesley, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Cape Town, reports to the Trade and Commerce Department that last year South Africa imported 288,297,636 pounds of wheat, valued at $4,178,660. Of this Australia supplied 244,000,000 pounds odd. Canada sent 1,449,119 pounds, worth $5,168, as against 3,607,258 pounds, valued at $11,514 in 1906. The bulk of the importation is of wheat, our grain only being needed for mixing purposes.

RETAIL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION NOTES.

A meeting of the general executive of the Toronto Association was held on Thursday evening, Dec. 10, to consider several important matters.

The association is preparing a rejoinder to the literature of various co-operative societies and associations which have been formed in Canada. The reply will be published about Dec. 15 and will go fully into the history and experience of such societies in Canada and other countries.

Jas. Eadie, provincial organizer of the association, is visiting the branches in St. Catharines and Niagara Falls, where officers will be elected this week.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Reading notices under this heading will be accepted at 10 cents per agate line.

Jos. Cote, Quebec, tobacco importer, is offering a wide range of smokers' requisites to the trade. His values are attractive. The chief sellers of the firm in the cigar line are, Cake Walk, Golden Flower, My Best, V.H.C., St. Louis, Champlain, Havana, Second, at 5c, and El Sergeant at 10c.—Advt.

A correspondent writes that most of the Canadian manufacturing plants are now running full force. He expresses the opinion that if merchants lose much time in placing their orders for late fall and winter goods, they will stand an excellent chance of not getting the goods till a very late date. This holds true especially of lines which require time and attention in their preparation. Brushes and brooms, to take a familiar example, will not prove satisfactory either to the merchant or to his customers unless special care is put on their manufacture. Merchants should remember these facts when tempted to delay in placing their orders.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The President, in moving the adoption of the directors' report, said :—

A year ago business in the United States was staggering under a sudden collapse of credit and acute money stringency, while in Canada the brakes had been applied and the slowing down process had begun. To-day the situation is much improved, confidence has been largely restored, credit is again good, the money markets of the world are abnormally easy, but the volume of trade has been considerably diminished. Measured by the value of imports, the shrinkage in Canada within a year has been approximately 20 per cent., namely, from $362,460,000 to $297,300,000, the figures being for the twelve months ending October 1st, 1907 and 1908 respectively.

On the other hand, the value of domestic exports in the same period has been well maintained, being $231,500,000, as against $244,200,000 last year.

The daily business of the country, as gauged by bank note circulation, at no time showed a shrinkage exceeding 5 per cent.

In view of the great excess to which imports had grown over domestic exports, amounting to upwards of 100 million in 1907, the subsequent contraction in imports must be regarded as a healthy condition. The gap between exports and imports may be still further contracted with advantage, and it is to be hoped that this process will be steadily continued. No doubt this reform was assisted by the repeated recommendations of economy emanating from all financial quarters, and it is gratifying to note that the liquidation process compelled by monetary conditions has been accomplished in Canada with, upon the whole, little disturbance, and practically without any great disaster.

Commercial loans have been reduced by the banks sixty millions, or upwards of 10 per cent., with a contraction of less than 5 per cent. in the volume of domestic trade as measured by note circulation.

Immigration has fallen off about 50 per cent., but the quality of late has been good, farmers and farm laborers predominating.

The great feature of the year has been the excellent crops secured by the Northwest Provinces, Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan, variously estimated as in wheat 105 to 115 million bushels; oats, 100 million bushels; barley, 25 million bushels; in addition crops of flax, potatoes, etc. The money value of the grain crops to these farmers will approximate 125 million dollars earned by a territory practically deserted up to a comparatively recent date. We have further from the same territory the report that an unusually large percentage of fall ploughing has been done, that the land is in the very best condition, and a very considerable increase in acreage indicated for next season.

The export demand for our surplus farm products has been above the average, and a large proportion of these has already been marketed. In Ontario and Quebec, however, the brilliant prospects of spring were somewhat clouded over by a long continued mid-summer drought. As regards the special business of this port, the exports of wheat and oats were in excess of last year, being respectively 27,485,034 and 1,268,803 bushels. Most other grains were somewhat short.

Shipping—There is a widespread depression in shipping the extent of which may be imagined from a report from the North of England that about a million tons of steamers were already laid up, and many more will require to go into the ranks of the unemployed during the winter. Notwithstanding this the trade of the St. Lawrence has fairly well held its own. Some voyages, no doubt, were unremunerative on account of vacant space, but both passengers and freight were, upon the whole, profitable, which is another proof of the advantages which the St. Lawrence route possesses. The tendency in all new vessels is towards increased size and carrying capacity, demanding due provision in all harbor and channel work of the future.

The Lumber Trade—The exports of lumber and deals for the past year to both Europe and the United States have fallen below those of the year previous, both in volume and value. Pine deals have declined $3 to $4 per 1,000 feet, and spruce $2 per 1,000 feet, from which decline there has already been a partial recovery. This is considered a favorable omen, and a sign that the depression which has hung over the lumber trade for some time past is about to be dispersed, and that a more active business in the future may be looked for.

The British market shows an improvement, Liverpool advices being of a more cheerful tone. Quebec pine and spruce deals are being enquired for, and as stocks are somewhat heavy, their realization would be a great help to the trade.

The opinion seems to prevail that the turning point has been reached, and that better times are near at hand.

Exports—As regards the exportable products, it may be said that eggs, cheese, ham, bacon and meats, butter and apples, all showed a falling off, and wholesale grocery houses after having felt the depression in business in the past year, now speak of a decided improvement, with brightening prospects for the coming year.

Exports of Produce—The value of the principal exports of produce from this port during the past season of navigation are computed as follows:

Grain and flour	$32,948,000
Butter and cheese	19,157,000
Hams and bacon	2,101,000
Total	$54,206,000

If to the above we add the exports of cattle, $4,716,700, we have a grand total of $58,922,700.

Dry Goods—The effects of the panic of last October were not immediately felt by the dry goods trade. The general trade was so good in 1907 that the full effect did not appear until January, 1908. For six months previous to that a certain amount of taking in of extra canvas had been going on, as money had been very scarce. Arrangements had been made before October for a probable decrease in sales for spring, 1908, but the decrease in turnover was a great deal more than anticipated, reaching as much as 20 to 30 per cent. from 1st January to 1st June. After that the improvement began, and for the fall six months the loss of business was about half this amount, or 15 per cent.

Buying has been conducted everywhere on conservative lines for next spring season, 1909, which is just beginning. Orders taken in advance by the travelers are very fair.

The capacity of the Canadian cotton mills and calico printers is likely to be taxed in many lines to its full capacity, as they have received large orders which last year were placed in Manchester. Fine and coarse wools have advanced in England, and manufacturers of woolen dress goods in France have refused orders, except at an advance in price.

The good crops have helped collections very much, and the financial state of the retail trade is quite satisfactory. Comparatively few bad debts have been made by the wholesale trade during the year. (This is one of the features of this panic, as the Bank of Montreal returns show.) Generally the prospects seem distinctly improved, and the outlook decidedly hopeful.

Iron and Hardware—While some of our large wholesale firms complain that business has fallen off in the past year, everything points to an increased trade in the future. Manufacturers of iron and steel report increasing orders for future delivery, and a heavy spring business is anticipated.

Leather — Both business and profits have been curtailed in the past year, owing partly to the increased cost of hides, and the low price of leather, but prospects for the coming year are most encouraging. The allied trade of boots and shoes shows very similar results for the year.

Railway Construction—The past year certainly was, and the present holds out the prospect of being emphatically the era of railway construction. The Grand Trunk Pacific between Prince Rupert and Moncton is likely to occupy a considerable time, while it cannot be overlooked that most of the other railways in the country have been occupied with extensions, much greater than the public have any idea of. For example, the Canadian Pacific Railway at the end of June had over 700 miles under construction in different sections of the country, and the Canadian Northern was also engaged in increasing its mileage in Quebec and the western provinces.

The vast importance of the improvement of the agricultural products of the country must be an excuse for introducing a subject occupying a great deal of attention in other countries as well as here, and closely bound up with the prosperity of the country, and, of course, of this and other banking institutions. When we reflect that the annual value of the products of the soil of Canada must exceed four hundred millions of dollars, any percentage in increase in quantity or improvement in quality of our crops becomes of enormous importance. For example, if by selection of the seed or by hybridizing, with the light thrown on this subject by Mendel's discovery, the wheat plant can be made to increase its yield or shorten the period of ripening, even by days, it might mean the difference in the Northwest of saving or losing a large percentage of the crop.

In the magnificent instalation of Sir Wm. Macdonald at St. Anne's, which, after all, is only the continuation and culmination of his work in the same direction all over the Dominion, this question of improvement in the grain plant and in the fertilizing of the soil has been a subject of careful research and experiment, and no doubt will continue to be so.

Dr. Robertson is sanguine enough to state that within five years past an increase of more than 25 per cent. has been obtained over large areas in Canada, on the average yield per acre of wheat, barley and oats, by improvement in the quality of the seed sown. It is not too much to hope that this improvement will continue as fresh discoveries are made and their application extended, and that the research and experimental department of the Macdonald and other colleges will prove the most important institutions in the country.

I beg to move: "That the report of the Directors now read be adopted and printed for distribution among the shareholders." If any shareholder has any questions to ask, we shall be pleased to answer them.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

The Vice-President then spoke as follows:

Since I last had the pleasure of meeting you and giving an account of my stewardship, we have passed through a very momentous financial year. For several months our American neighbors were not, practically, on a specie basis, and though in Canada we considered that we were in a fairly sound condition, we were somewhat in the position of a man living in a fireproof house with his neighbor's residence ablaze. He believes himself safe, but is naturally nervous as to the result. I said, in a fairly sound condition, for though our state was satisfactory enough for normal times, the country's great prosperity had brought about an abnormal demand for money. We were overtrading on inadequate capital; everyone from the Government to the individual was spending too much and living too extravagantly. Canada's financial resources were strained to the utmost, and when in addition, there came a crisis in the United States, and extraordinary conditions elsewhere (witness a 7 per cent. Bank of England rate), we certainly had grounds for uneasiness, and good reason for putting on the brakes, financially, in rather an emergent manner. Fortunately, some of us had begun to do so before the crisis arrived. The general result of all this disturbance has been beneficial, and what I said last year; that we would eventually reach a better and a sounder basis, is coming to pass. Largely as the result of a harvest of exceptionally high quality, which is realizing excellent prices, Canada to-day is in a good commercial position, and can look to the future with renewed hope and satisfaction. Not that we are in a condition to start a boom; but if our people will continue the conservative policy which is at present animating their conduct of business, we will emerge stronger and better in every way.

Reference to the record of commercial failures which, during the past year, have increased from $10,000,000, the average of recent years, to $16,000,000, brings home the reality of the dangers which have threatened our industrial welfare. These are large figures, but considering the strain and stress of the times, the great expansion in business, and the heavy stocks carried last autumn, we may reasonably consider the commercial community to have weathered the storm fairly well, and I think it may be claimed that the banks did their share in carrying them through a season of trouble.

During the year we have had three bank failures—the Sovereign Bank of Canada, La Banque de St. Jean, and the Banque de St. Hyacinthe. It is hardly necessary to state that in no case have the noteholders suffered, and it is worthy of notice that since the circulation came more directly under the supervision of the Canadian Bankers' Association, there has been no failure of a bank which has disclosed any tampering with its circulation, either by over-issue or otherwise.

Through the assistance of a number of the banks, the Sovereign Bank is being liquidated without loss to its depositors. This was a case of "modern" banking, where unusual methods were adopted to attract deposits, and depositors can hardly be blamed if in the future they look askance at any bank which adopts catchpenny means of soliciting the savings of the people. They will certainly be justified in considering such devices signs of weakness on the part of the institution employing them.

The two other banks which I mentioned were small affairs, whose failures affected only the communities they served, but to the credit of those communities be it said that they behaved with admirable self-control, under trying circumstances. In each case the difficulty was too serious to warrant outside banking assistance. Whilst, however, the failure of the St. Jean institution was consequent upon mismanagement, the responsibility for which the criminal courts have been called upon to fix, that of the Banque de St. Hyacinthe shows how bad business, contracted originally by over-ambitious management, because an ever-increasing incubus, which must infallibly prove the downfall of a small and localized concern.

In July last, a brief Act of Parliament amended the Bank Act to the extent of enabling banks during the usual season of moving the crops (1st October to 31st January), to issue additional notes to the amount of 15 per cent. of each bank's combined capital and reserve.

Although desirable as a precaution against any sudden shortage of currency, such as our neighbors sometimes suffer from, very little use has yet been made of the privilege by the banks. This season, at least, it was not a necessary facility, as shown by the fact that, at the close of October, the balance of notes of chartered banks available for circulation exceeded $19,000,000; this, too, notwithstanding an usually heavy crop, which had to be moved in a limited period.

The explanation is, no doubt, that the increased number of branch banks in the country has become an important factor in assisting the crop movement, giving the farmer quick payment for his grain and aiding the prompt deposit of its proceeds. Thus circulation is returned to the banks with little delay, enabling them to reissue notes and taking them out of the pockets of the farmers, where, in former years, they became locked up.

The prominent feature of the present situation as contrasted with that of a year ago is the world-wide plethora of money The contrast is rendered greater by the fact that the late stringency was intensified by senseless hoarding, not only by individuals, but, in some cases, by banks. Such hoarding aggravated that want of confidence by which it was begotten, and rendered the crisis more acute. When, after the turn of the year, the normal financial loosening took place, the hoarded funds came out and swelled the supply of available cash. This soon became of unusual volume, owing to an enforced general liquidation and a desire to place business on a basis more commensurate with the capital employed.

When Europe untied the purse strings once more, she facilitated the liquidation of government and municipal advances at home by the flotation of loans in foreign countries. Thus it has come to pass that our deposits have increased $17,000,000, while our loans, other than call, have decreased $10,000,000, making our present percentage of immediately available assets 57 per cent., as against 43 per cent. a year ago. Containing such features, the financial statement laid before you shows an exceptionally strong position—stronger, indeed, than is necessary. Unfortunately, it is not a money-making position, as the rates ruling in the London and New York markets, where we are obliged to carry a large portion of our reserves, are unusually low, and I am afraid we cannot look forward to very good profits during the coming year. But, after all, lean years will come, and, as history repeats itself, it proves, in its application to banking at least, that conservative methods are the only ones which can safely be employed alike in times of prosperity and leanness, to build, in fair weather, a structure which will not be shaken by the inevitable storm.

The Vice-President having seconded the motion, Mr. Roswell C. Fisher referred to the asset of $600,000 for bank premises at Montreal and branches. "Last year we were told no reason was seen for altering the statement. I think there is one, as the shareholders do not know in the slightest degree the value of the premises, and, therefore, cannot criticise the expenditure. If we knew approximately how much was being spent in additions to bank premises all over this country, we would probably be in a position to criticise. We might also say if statements are not correct in one case, how are we to know that the others are not equally incorrect?"

The Vice-President—"The new board coming in will take the matter into consideration, and see if they will alter the formal statement. I think that, if an error at all, it is an error on the right side, and if all the Bank's assets were valued in the same way as its real estate, the Shareholders should be very well satisfied as to its position.

The motion for the adoption of the directors' report was then put and was carried unanimously.

Mr. B. A. Boas remarked: "Before moving the resolution I hold in my hand, I have a few words to say, and I have no doubt all the shareholders will join with me in congratulating our Vice-President on the great honor which has been shown him by His Majesty the King. We all trust he will live for many years to enjoy the distinction and to be the guiding spirit of this Bank. I now move:

"That the thanks of the meeting be presented to the President, the Vice-President and Directors for their attention to the interests of the Bank."

This was seconded by Mr. Henry Dobell, and unanimously concurred in, after which Mr. Charles R. Hosmer moved: "That the thanks of the meeting be given to the General Manager, the Assistant General Manager, the Inspectors, the Managers and other officers of the Bank for their services during the past year."

This was seconded by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, and was unanimously agreed to.

The Vice-President, in returning thanks, said: "With reference to Mr. Boas' kind remarks, I do not look upon the honor given me by His Majesty as an honor to me personally, but because of the position I occupy—I was chief executive officer of this Bank and also President of the Bankers' Association—it is an honor to the Bank of Montreal and to the Canadian Bankers' Association."

Mr. W. R. Miller moved: "That the ballot now open for the election of Directors be kept open until 2 o'clock, unless fifteen minutes elapse without a vote being cast, when it shall be closed, and until that time, and for that purpose only, this meeting be continued."

This was seconded by Mr. James Tasker, and was carried unanimously.

THE DIRECTORS.

The ballot resulted in the election of the following directors:

R. B. ANGUS.
SIR EDWARD CLOUSTON, BART.,
HON. SIR GEORGE DRUMMOND, K.C.M.G., C.V.O.
E. B. GREENSHIELDS,
CHARLES R. HOSMER,
SIR WILLIAM C. MACDONALD,
HON. ROBERT MACKAY,

ALEXANDER T. PATERSON,
JAMES ROSS,
SIR THOMAS G. SHAUGHNESSY, K.C.V.O.,
THE RIGHT HON. LORD STRATHCONA AND MOUNT ROYAL, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.

The Honorary President, the President and the Vice-President will, in the ordinary course of business, be elected at to-day's meeting of the Directors.

BARRIE CORRESPONDENCE.

December 8.—Saturday's market was a record breaker, owing to the fine sleighing and the Christmas shopping being at hand. New laid eggs are almost an impossibility and what few were offering were sold at 35c a dozen. A remarkable thing occurred that we seldom see at this time of year, that is the large number of held eggs that were offering and sold at twenty-five cents a dozen. Butter, which is being sold in all the surrounding districts at two and three cents lower, still remains at 25c a pound, and we don't expect to see that price advance, as the supply is now ahead of the demand. Turkeys, dressed, brought a good price according to the outside markets, as high as 13½c being paid by the buyers, while 12½c was the general price. Chickens, crate fed, sold at 12c; ordinary plump at 10c, and hens at 7c. Ducks were 12½c a pound and very scarce at that. Geese were in abundance and sold from 8c to 10c lb.

The peddler nuisance, which seems to be the topic of the business men just now, is as bad in our county as in any other, and upon calling upon various business men of this town your correspondent finds they all denounce the peddler and agree that a high license should be imposed on them so as to rid the country of them. The local council only last summer raised the license from $10 to $50, and should by the efforts of the Retail Merchants' Association raise it again this or early next year to $200 anyway.

W. J. Lennox, of Ivy, is issuing circulars this week announcing that he will, after Jan. 1st, 1909, conduct his business on a strictly cash system and asks his customers to assist him in his efforts. We wish him every success.

Last Saturday at noon the main street in our town was completely blocked by the loads of grain waiting to be unloaded at S. Calwell's and Brown & Co.'s storages. Never in one day has so much grain been handled for at least ten years.

This week has seen some heavy buying in holiday fruits by some of the merchants, principally in oranges, as practically all fruits in this line will have to be in stock by the first or middle of next week. The large sizes in navels this year are very scarce and high and the prices paid in large lots will range from $3.15 to $3.25, while the smaller sizes are being bought at even money. Mexicans are being bought heavily on account of their fine color and they make a good "cheap" orange. One merchant reports having bought them this year in a large quantity at $2 a box for assorted sizes.

Dairy Produce and Provisions

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Dec. 10, 1908.

The cheese market is firm and under good demand locally, but is without any business from England. Buyers are speculating on the possibilities of the future, and are resting after a season which has been rather interesting. While the production has been far from excessive, and export trade has not been remarkable as regards size, the market has developed many novel and unexpected features, all of which have contributed to the interest displayed in it. It is stated in some quarters that British buyers are beginning to renew their interest in this market, but so far this phase of the situation has not developed any considerable dimensions. This is a period of adjustment generally, as the cows are changing from grass to hay, and products show the change in their taste. Total receipts for the season since May 1 have been 1,893,631 boxes, as against 2,048,372 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Locally Westerns are quoted at 12¼c and 12½c, and Easterns at 11¾c to 12c.

The butter market was slightly more inactive at the beginning of the week, but has firmed up latterly. Stocks are not excessive and this fact, together with the increasing demand, will in all probability keep the market strong for some time. There has been some business done with western points, this stock, however, had been ordered previously to go forward later. Locally the demand for the finest lines is exceedingly good. Quotations are 27c in round lots and 27½ to 28c in a jobbing way.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, Dec. 11, 1908.

The provision trade is in a peculiar position. One large packer made the remark this week, "The local trade is bad and the English market is rotten." Hogs are 75c to $1 a hundred higher here, and the English prices for bacon 49 to 50 shillings, where they were from 53 to 55 shillings at the same time last year. The heavy run of hogs still continues, but the shipments to England are only to hold the trade, and the balance is stored for later shipment. The Danish and American markets are somewhat disturbing the calculations of our large packers. Denmark is rapidly increasing its output, and is also producing a quality of bacon that seems to please the Englishman better than the Canadian product, and for which he is willing to pay a better price. The enormous hog receipts in Chicago are also remarkable, and are puzzling the packers. Seventy-eight thousand hogs were received last week, and the entire receipts since November 1st exceed last year's supply by a million and a half. They take notice of the fact, however, that hogs are somewhat lighter in weight, which may mean that farmers are running them off earlier on account of the high price of corn. If this is the case, it will naturally follow that the receipts will later decrease and in the end settle down to normal conditions.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—The market is, if anything, a shade quieter this week. Prices remain at the same level as last quoted, with the exception of pure lard in tierces, 50-lb. boxes, and tubs, which is a trifle higher.

BUTTER—Owing to decreasing receipts this market is very firm, and quotations remain as reported last week.

Fresh Creamery, solids, lb		0 28
" " prints, lb		0 28½
Dairy, tubs, lb	0 20	0 22

CHEESE—Receipts of cheese are keeping up better than was expected. Export business is very small, which is not unusual for this period of the year. Prices continue firm under good demand.

Large	0 12½	0 13
Twins	0 12½	0 13
Old		0 15

EGGS—Colder weather, which has greatly reduced the receipts, combined with increasing demand, tends to keep this market very firm. No. 2's, however, are in good supply and easier in price.

Selected cold storage		0 26

Buckwheat, extracted	0 08	0 09
Clover, strained, bulk, 30 lb. tins	0 10	0 11

POULTRY—Prices are generally firm, owing to the increased demand to fill holiday orders. Dealers expect that prices will go higher in view of the heavy demand which is beginning. Dealers here are paying from 9c to 12c for chickens; 11c for young ducks, and 13c to 14c for turkeys.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The local demand, as reported last week, still continues to be very inactive, and although there is very little change in the prices, there is more push required to effect sales, and this is frequently met by a slight reduction. Lard is about ½c a lb. lower.

Long clear bacon, per lb	0 11	0 11½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb		0 14½
Roll bacon, per lb	0 10½	0 11

" pails "		0 13
" compounds, per lb		0 8½
Dressed hogs		9 00

BUTTER—The butter market on the whole is weaker, but prices are still about the same, although the stock is somewhat increasing. The English market is too low to offer any inducement for export, and therefore the supply is quite sufficient to meet the demand.

CHEESE—With the exception of a few lines of late make, which are inferior goods, the prices are well sustained, without any change this week.

Cheese, large, prime		0 13½
" twins	0 13½	0 14

EGGS—The egg trade is somewhat firmer, owing to good demand from the Northwest, where several cars have already been shipped, and orders for more are on hand. On the whole the egg trade is very satisfactory, and the held stock is in good condition.

Strictly new laid, per doz	0 35	0 40
Select cold storage	0 27	0 28
Cold storage	0 24	0 25
Limed	0 23	0 24

HONEY—Very little honey is moving at this time of the year. Dealers are pretty well supplied and it will receive very little attention until after the holidays. Prices are unchanged.

60-lb. tins	0 09	0 10
Smaller sizes, tins and bottles	0 10½	0 12
Comb, doz	1 50	2 50

POULTRY—The poultry market is firmer, and the birds, as a rule, are in better condition. Although quite sufficient to meet the present demand, the arrivals are not heavy. Farmers are holding them back for the holiday trade.

FIRE IN BRANTFORD WHOLESALE HOUSE.

Geo. Watt & Sons Suffer Loss From Damage by Water—The Blaze a Small One.

On Friday morning, Dec. 4, fire broke out shortly after eight o'clock in the wholesale grocery house of Geo. Watt & Son, at the corner of Dalhousie and King Streets, Brantford. The previous afternoon, it is said, an oil can leaked in the office near where were placed some brooms and boxes. On opening in the morning, James O. Dowd, seeing the mark on the floor from the oil, struck a match to investigate. As he did so the top of the match flew into the oil. At once the flames sprang up and fire commenced to work its way up the partition. There was a lot of smoke and the fire would have been a bad one had it not been for the prompt arrival of the city fire department. A stream of water was turned on the blaze and in short order the fire was extinguished. The warehouse was heavily stocked with Christmas groceries and damage from water will reach $1,000.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Rolled Oats Declined 15 to 20 Cents in Ontario—Steady in Quebec—Flour Firming Up With Good Overseas Demand.

A small decline on oatmeal in Quebec markets last week is followed by a drop of 15c to 20c on Ontario markets this week. The decline is reported to be the result of price-cutting among the manufacturers, and while the situation at present is reported as fairly easy, the decline is not expected to be permanent. The continuation of cold weather is expected to firm the market up somewhat.

The flour market is firmer, both in Ontario and Quebec, and while no advance has as yet occurred it is rather difficult to estimate what may happen. The firmer feeling is reported as resulting from speculation by Winnipeg and Chicago buyers. Millers generally are fairly busy with local demand good. Export inquiry continues active, though prices offered do not seem to be particularly attractive to millers here, and not a great deal seems to be going forward.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Inquiries still arrive from England and South Africa, but prices offered do not make this trade very profitable. Locally trade is improving, which is due to more activity in demand at country points. Prices are unchanged.

FEED—Demand for both shorts and bran is good, but the amount available is not large, hence the tendency for firmness in prices. Mouillie, both milled and straight grained, is in good demand. Other lines are the same as last reported.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—While no advance has taken place as yet, the market is very strong, a much firmer feeling having developed during the week. This is said to be due to the operations of speculators on the Winnipeg and Chicago markets. The close of navigation is causing a little falling off in demand from lake points, but this is off-set by new business from the lumber camp trade. Millers are kept fairly busy, though local demand is not quite so active.

CEREALS—A general easier feeling and some price-cutting accounts for a decline of 15c to 20c on rolled oats during the week. This, it is expected, is only temporary, but is effective pretty generally throughout Ontario. Manufacturers are running easily, but strong competition developed with the result mentioned above. Local business is only fair, though retailers' stocks must be fairly light.

MAY COME TO CANADA.

It is reported that the Postum Cereal Company, of Battle Creek, Michigan, may establish a Canadian branch in Sarnia. It is a well-known fact that for several months the Postum Company have been desirous of locating a branch factory in Canada, to take care of and protect its Canadian business. The officials refuse to discuss the matter, however, but the fact that they have several times investigated Canadian towns with this idea in view, substantiates the report.

JUST SENSE.

All conscientious typewriting addressers of envelopes would be stricken with remorse if they only knew how much their evil habit of writing the name of the State on the same line with the name of the post office is costing the Government in money and the mail assorting force in labor.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

This is common sense talk on a very practical matter of everyday life. One does not need to call in psychology or physiology to recognize the need of setting apart town and State so that the trained eye of the mail sorter can catch the key word or abbreviation and propel the letter into the proper pigeonhole. Run town and State together and there follows waste of time and effort—infinitesimal in each case but costly in the great aggregations of a day's mail.—New York Herald.

Possibly over fifty per cent. of the stenographers in Canada already adhere to this plan, but it would facilitate the mail sorters' duties very materially if the custom of writing the name of the town and Province on two lines were generally adopted by Canadian firms. Furthermore, the capitalization of the name of the town makes it even more distinct. All business colleges not adhering to this method should follow it when teaching their pupils how to address envelopes.

BIG SEASON IN HOCKEY LEAGUE.

Toronto Wholesale Grocers Will Have a Six-Team Schedule and Lots of Fun This Winter.

There'll be something doing in the Toronto Wholesale Grocers' Hockey League this season all right if the enthusiastic organization meeting held in the offices of R. S. McIndoe on Monday evening of th's week is any evidence. Towards the close of the season last year the interest in the league became very intense and this interest bids fair to be carried on and to grow the present season.

The meeting, which, by the way, was the 4th annual, was attended by representatives of practically all the Toronto wholesale grocery houses, as follows :— T. Kinnear & Co., T. H. Kinnear and C. Rennie ; Warren Bros., Otto Lang ; Eby, Blain & Co., Harold Meath and W. Roull ; Davidson-Hay, S. Wylie and L. Atkins ; H. P. Eckhardt, B. R. Brown; Jas. Lumbers Co., "Wes" Lumbers and F. Pyne ; Grocery Brokers, P. F. Millman, Geo. Hortop and T. C. Webber ; C. S. Morrow, vice-president, and A. S. May, secretary-treasurer.

How enthusiastic the meeting was may be imagined from the fact that it lasted two hours and a half.

One of the important items, of course, was the election of officers, which went in the following way : Hon. president, R. S. McIndoe ; Hon. vice-president, Thomas Kinnear ; president, W. G. Lumbers ; vice-president, C. S. Morrow ; secretary-treasurer, A. S. May, 54 Wellington Street East ; patrons, H. P. Eckhardt, Col. Jno. I. Davidson, Hugh Blain, W. A. Warren, W. H. Millman, F. W. Humphrey, J. Scott, James Lumbers. C. S. Morrow and Gordon Humphrey were appointed official referees.

A new departure was made this year in arranging that each wholesale house shall enter a team of its own. This will provide six teams instead of three under the grouped system of last year.

The teams, with their colors are ; H. P. Eckhardt & Co., black sweaters and red trimmings ; Eby-Blain, black sweaters with yellow trimmings ; T. Kinnear & Co., dark blue sweaters ; Jas. Lumbers Co., white sweaters with blue trimmings ; Brokers I., white sweaters with red and green trimmings ; Brokers II., red sweaters with white trimmings.

The league has exhibited commendable enterprise in securing the new Excelsior covered rink for games three nights a week. This will give excellent opportunity for spectators, and will assure satisfactory ice. 'Varsity ice has also been secured three nights a week for practice.

Undoubtedly the fight for the Tillson trophy will this season be a stiff one.

The result of last season's play is handed out by Secretary May as follows :

	Won	Lost	Goals for	Goals Agst.
T. Kinnear & Co. ..	3	1	28	8
Jas. Lumbers Co ..	2	2	13	16
Grocery Brokers ..	1	3	10	23

The league, during its three years of existence, has done a great deal to foster acquaintance and good fellowship among the various members of the Toronto wholesale houses, and as such deserves every support.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Christmas Demand Brightening the Fruit Markets — Vegetables Held More Firmly and Potatoes Expected to Advance — Good Business in Frozen and Salted Fish.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Valencia oranges are cheaper, being quoted at $3.25 to $3.75 per case. The price of California navels has been fully maintained. Delaware holly is quoted this week at $4.25 per case, and evergreen wreathing at $1.75 per bale. Nova Scotia cranberries are weaker, selling for $7.50 in barrels. Cape Cods have not changed. Locally trade is fair and other lines have not presented any new features.

FISH—Haddock is somewhat scarce and the price is slightly firmer, being quoted at 4½ to 5c this week. All lines of fish are selling well, having gotten well into the Advent season. Bloaters are plentiful. There is an extra good demand for pickled and salted lines. Labrador herrings and new green cod are selling exceptionally well.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The fruit market is active and firmer, especially apples and oranges. Northern Spies, which at present have the preference above all other varieties, are bringing as high as $5.50 a barrel. The extra good quality of navel oranges, together with the scarcity of well-ripened fruit for the time of the year is causing a sharp advance of fruit to arrive for Christmas. So far the receipts of navels are about 25 per cent. less than was expected. While the navels are the favorite fruit and most in demand, there are on the market many other varieties which for present use are quite equal to them if not preferable. Mexicans, Floridas, Cubans, Porto Ricans and Jamaicas are all about the same price. A car of excellent Jamaicas has just arrived. These are all shipped in barrels containing about 30 dozen, and while not so well assorted as the others, for quality and flavor they may be considered as good, if not better, than any at present on the market. Very few Valencia oranges come to Toronto. Several cars of fine Royal grape fruit are among the latest arrivals. One of these cars contains a novelty never seen on this market before which is 15 barrels of pink flesh grape fruit. These are said to be the first grown of this variety and are likely to be picked up very quickly. Cape Cod cranberries are also held more firmly being a dollar per barrel higher.

VEGETABLES—There is no change in price of potatoes. The arrivals during the mild weather were very heavy and large quantities are in stock. Cold weather always causes an advance owing to the expense of protecting them from frost, and therefore a slight rise may be expected. Other lines are unchanged.

FISH—The fish men are busy. Cold weather put life into the frozen fish trade, almost the only kind of stock in hand. Ciscoes are selling as low as 50c a basket. This is owing to an over supply during the mild weather. Some of these, however, are not in first-class condition and have to be sold at a loss.

MAKING MONEY IN A BAD YEAR

Manager of Chicago Packing House Tells How Advantage Was Taken of Low Prices Early in the Year to Make Big Profits Later— Canadian Hogs Superior to United States Product.

T. J. Connors, general manager of Armour & Co., Chicago, who by the way is a Canadian and was at one time a resident of Toronto, was in the city last week renewing acquaintances. In conversation with the Canadian Grocer Mr. Connors spoke on various matters affecting trade in the United States and Canada.

"You people in Canada have hardly any idea of the depressing effect the recent monetary stringency had on trade in the United States," he said. "The big concerns which had money were all right, but the growing concerns and the men who of necessity had to obtain loans to continue their business were all but crushed out of existence and those who reached out after trade on any but conservative lines were sent to the wall. Armour & Co. weathered the storm all right because they had plenty of money, and this passing year roiled up a larger surplus than ever before. A year of depression is good for the man who has money, but bad for him who has little or none. Of course this is from the selfish standpoint. Last January Armour & Co. bought and packed 600,000 hogs. We found that the farmer as well as the tradesman was turning everything he could possibly let go into money, so we bought everything offering, and the price at which we bought them, four cents, was a great deal lower than we could buy now. We simply stocked the product, knowing there would be an advance later on. And this has come. The same thing was done with cattle, and we bought at a price lower than prevailed during the summer."

Summer a Beef Season.

Asked as to the cause of high meat prices last summer, Mr. Connors stated that beef prices are always higher in summer than in winter. "While more meat is eaten during cold weather than in the warmer months," said Mr. Connors, "yet there is more beef consumed during summer than at any other season of the year. No person cares for pork and fat meat during summer, and with the exception of some breakfast lines, very little pork product, comparatively, is disposed of. The great demand for beef during the summer makes a raid on supply with a consequent advance in price. To-day beef prices are lower, because with the advent of colder weather other lines are being asked for. Next summer prices will be up again. At present beef is at 7¾ cents for the best grades, and by March next the price is expected to be 9 cents.

Superior Canadian Hogs.

Questioned regarding the hog situation, Mr. Connors said, "Well, we are paying 5¾ cents, and getting plenty of them. In Canada I believe the packers are paying 6 cents and over. Your hogs are a little better than United States porkers on account of the feed the farmers give them. They have a firmer and drier flesh, while the U.S. pig is oily because he is fed on corn. There are not sufficient hogs here, however, to keep a big packing-house going.

The Cattle Quarantine.

"The recent cattle quarantine is a good thing, and it is pleasing to see that both the Canadian and U.S. Governments are co-operating in trying to stamp out the disease. Dressed meats, however, should not be included. This meat bears the approval of the inspectors, is placed in refrigerator cars, and sealed while being shipped. Just now the meat is going to Europe via Portland because of the closing of New York and Baltimore ports.

"Some person has said that 'trade follows the flag.' This is not so—at least not to the man who wishes to make his business a money-maker. This continual crying-out because somebody else is getting business is poor policy. Some concerns, when they find they are losing their hold on a market immediately begin to cut prices. Armour & Co. never do that. Just as soon as a market proves a loser the company discontinues selling there and places its goods elsewhere. It has been found better to keep goods in stock and in storage rather than cut to get sales. We let the other fellow do that and sooner or later there will be one competitor less.

Features of British Markets.

"Certain lines of Canadian pork products have a good sale in England. The British consumer demands quality and is willing to pay the price. Undoubtedly Irish pork products are the best in the world, but not all pork that is sold as such in England comes from Ireland. The Danes are coming to the front in this respect and are sending first-class goods to the British markets. They are proving the greatest competitors of Canadians. The Danes' proximity to England is a distinct advantage in this and enables him to follow the markets more closely than the Canadian packer possibly could. In this way he knows when to kill and when not to send his products over.

"Canadian Wiltshire and Cumberland cuts have a ready sale in England," continued Mr. Connors, "and as these cuts take from Canada a great many backs and hams, there is a chance for the Chicago packers to come to Canada with backs, which are in demand for consumption. The duty, however, precludes doing any extensive business and it is only when a line proves profitable that Armour & Co. at least push business to the sale point."

A WIDEAWAKE CONSCIENCE.

From Warsaw, Ind., comes something entirely new in the way of a conscience of the old-fashioned type in the first-class working order. In these days of pure food agitation it is refreshing to hear that a prominent grocer of that town has caused to be inserted in various newspapers in that vicinity the following announcement:

"I want to make restitution and beg pardon of the people through the newspapers. When I was in the butcher business in Akron I mixed tallow with lard and sold it to my customers. I ask all of these people to forgive me of the offense, and if there are any who are not satisfied with just forgiving me, if they will send me a statement of the amount that they think they were wronged, honestly between God and man, I will make all wrongs right.—Journal of Commerce.

W. G. CRAIG & CO. LOSE BY FIRE.

Kingston Wholesale Grocer's Stock Burned in Disastrous Conflagration on Sunday.

W. G. Craig & Co., wholesale grocers, of Kingston, suffered serious loss in a fire early on Sunday morning, Dec. 6, which completely destroyed the fine building at the corner of Princess and Ontario Streets, occupied by the Wormwith Piano Company and the W. G. Craig Co.

The fire started in the varnish room of the piano factory about 2 a.m., and in spite of a fire wall rapidly spread to the premises occupied by the wholesale house and destroyed practically all the stock.

W. G. Craig & Co.'s loss is said to be about $30,000. Of this $28,000 was stock, and this was covered with $26,000 insurance. Over $1,000 tea was saved, many chests being carried out during the progress of the fire. According to local reports the direct loss on stock and office will not be exceedingly heavy, though the fact that the stock is destroyed at this season of the year is particularly unfortunate. It is understood that business will be renewed at once in other premises.

A VISITOR FROM JAMAICA.

Wm. F. Barry, Kingston, Jamaica, is in Montreal at present in the interests of his fruit business. Mr. Barry contemplates opening an office in Montreal in the near future for the more satisfactory transaction of his large and growing trade. He says the City of Kingston is being rapidly rebuilt and will be better than ever before, architecturally, as a result of the earthquake.

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Where the Supply of Cranberries on Canadian Markets Come From—How They Are Cultivated and Handled—In Great Demand at the Holiday Season.

CRANBERRIES — This familiar product finds in Canada a growing demand from year to year. They are cultivated in carieties in the New England States, in Nova Scotia, and grow wild in certain districts of northern Ontario. Cranberries, which bloom in the north, are picked by the Indians or settlers and no regular attempt has been made to market them, except in isolated cases. The cranberry, in order to enjoy a ready sale, must be as carefully attended to as any other product entering so largely into daily consumption.

There are several varieties of cranberries, such as Early Reds, Late Reds, Early Blacks, Bachelor, Centennial, Jersey, Early Howes, Late Howes and other specimens. The harvest is generally begun early in September, and continues until the middle of October, so that dealers in Canada are practically sure of a supply from the beginning of September until nearly the end of February the following year. The berries are raised on swampy, wet ground, and by the fourth year a good crop is generally assured.

The price of cranberries depends wholly on the supply. If the early harvest is a meagre one the figure is advanced, and if the late yield is liberal the price is inclined to drop. They are grown in New England States, particularly in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Cape Cod, and also in Wisconsin. The Nova Scotia berry is also cultivated to a fairly large extent, but they are not nearly as widely known, neither are they nearly as popular with the public, as the New England specimens. As to the harvest, it may be stated that the yield is on an average one barrel to the square rod, and the average picker can pick six bushels a day.

Cranberries will keep much better and longer in cool weather than in warm, but under no circumstances must they become frost-bitten. The secret of keeping them is to have them at an even temperature, neither too hot nor too cold. One crop of each variety is gathered each year. The opening price for the early varieties was about $9 per barrel, and now the late varieties are going at $15. The Nova Scotia berries generally sell from $1.50 to $2 less per barrel. The reason they are not in the same demand as the New England berries is that, generally speaking, they are not so dark in color in some instances and have not the flavor, the appearance nor tang of thr more widely known New England brands.

All cranberries before being sent out from Cape Cod are carefully assorted as to color, size and quality. In Nova Scotia the same care is not observed and, of course, it cannot be reasonably expected that they can be marketed to such good advantage.

The darker, firmer and more like the rich, ripe cherry the cranberry is, the wider its demand. Cranberries are not merely delicious as a side dish with fowl, particularly with the toothsome turkey, but also when preserved by the good housewife, either as a jelly or a sauce. In some instances cranberries are canned by factories, but not frequently. Cranberry jelly is, however, always a welcome morsel, particularly at Christmas and Thanksgiving periods. The demand for cranberries is so great that there are more sold in one day during Yuletide than in a week at other times.

Some of the points to be considered in the cultivation of cranberries is to select the place that will escape frost; a low piece of ground is the place generally chosen, although in some instances high ground, if surrounded with hills and high trees, is equally as good. In Nova Scotia cranberries require peat covered with sand. It is best to have the peat only a few inches thick, as it then requires only about four or five inches of sand.

Dealers have to guard particularly against the berries turning soft, as in case they do they are not marketable and prove a dead loss.

A Nove Scotia dealer writes in part: "I have a machine to winnow the berries with and then they run into a barrel. I then use sieves fifteen feet long and two feet wide, sitting on benches two feet high. The berries are put into the sieves and hand-picked. The dirt and little berries drop through the sieve to the floor, I then put the good berries into barrels holding two bushels and three pecks and ship them in small lots. It pays best to sell at once while the berries are in good condition. One great cause of berries spoiling is that they sweat in the barrel. The cause of sweating is that they get cold in the barrel during a cold spell of weather, and then the weather suddenly changes. The berries being cold, the warm weather condenses the moisture in the air, and the berries get wet. The secret is to keep the berries at an even temperature, either cold or hot."

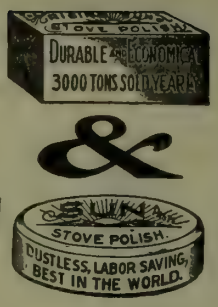
RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES



SUN & PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

Until you break the shell of a nut you are wholly in the dark as to the quality of the meat therein. A fair exterior often covers an unsatisfactory interior. Quality depends largely upon reputation—you've got to be guided by that. Be guided, then (if seeking highest quality in Canned Fruits), by these three words, "Canned by Griffin," and you'll be absolutely safe.

are used. Reduce expenses, eliminate losses, prevent misunderstandings—paying for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

1908-1909

We take this opportunity of extending to you the Season's Greetings. We sincerely hope that you will have a very prosperous Xmas trade, and that in the New Year your business will be still more satisfactory.

This last year has been an anxious one for most of us, and the profit side of our ledgers may not be altogether satisfactory, yet we have much to be grateful for, and the coming year, from all indications, should be a good one for all of us. As someone has said, "We Canadians have toiled hard until we have reached the top of the toboggan slide, and now nothing can hold us back."

We are entering the New Year with a determination to supply you with the very best Canned Goods at reasonable prices, and we hope your New Year's resolution will be to handle only the very best, viz., Canadian Canners' Brands.

Yours respectfully,

CANADIAN CANNERS, Ltd.

Clean Methods

mean a whole lot in the manufacture of canned goods. If a sloppy plant is kept and sloppy employes used, the result is generally a sloppy, flavorless product. We are very careful to avoid sloppiness in the manufacture of

Old Homestead Brand
Canned Fruits and Vegetables

Our methods are strictly clean and up-to-date. Our employes are cleanly people of great skill. Our stock is the subject of expert selection—only the highest grade of fruits and vegetables that can be obtained being used in Old Homestead Brand. The result is, clean, sound goods of a fine, full, natural flavor.

Your Jobber Can Supply You.

The Old Homestead Canning Co.

Get After the Peddler

Reach out after the tea trade he is getting—the trade that rightfully belongs to you. But how is this to be done? Only by educating your customers to purchase goods the peddler cannot buy. You can never hope to win back the peddler's tea trade by selling bulk teas. The peddler sells that.

Concentrate your energy and selling force on pushing a tea of supreme quality—well advertised and having an enormous sale—a tea the peddler cannot buy. Such a tea is

"SALADA"

The most profitable tea for a grocer to handle. For seventeen years it has maintained its prestige as the highest grade tea. A constantly increasing demand shows its great value to every grocer as a sure trade-winner. With "SALADA" you serve the public well, and the peddler can't take your trade.

Your Customers are Not Getting Much Enjoyment Out of 25c. Tea

30c. Red Rose Tea is cheaper than any 25c. tea—cheaper because it has much finer flavor, more strength, will make more cups of tea to the pound.

Any 25c. tea you can sell has only a coarse weedy flavor, a flavor you do not like yourself and you would never drink it unless you could not get anything else. Your customers are just the same as you.

Sell them a pound of 30c. Red Rose and you will see that they will very soon come back asking for "more of the same tea," and will say nothing about the small difference in price.

You would like to have more tea business; you would like to do the biggest tea trade in your section of the country.

You can do it by selling good tea, and you will find that your customers will say "Red Rose Tea is good tea" and will tell their friends that they buy it from you.

You can make a bigger business than you have ever had if you start right in now with the new year and push Red Rose Tea. Will you do so?

Mr. Grocer— Read This— It's For You

Nothing ever sold by Grocers can approach the KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER IN MERIT. Every housekeeper with common sense knows a good thing when she sees it—she is very ambitious to excel in her Laundry work—with the KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER a long felt want is supplied. It sells easily. By taking up an agency you can work up a steady and increasing business, as WHERE THE KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER IS ONCE USED it is ALWAYS USED. Housekeepers are mad after it and will thank you for supplying them with this great labor saving discovery. REDUCES IRONING TIME BY HALF.

Save Your Elbow Grease

PATENT APPLIED FOR

The Kaiser Wax Pad AND IRON CLEANER

The Cleaner that Cleans Well.
The Wax Pad that Waxes Well.

REQUIRES BUT HALF THE TIME TO DO AN IRONING.

Every Housekeeper dreads ironing day, especially so, when she has a lot of Shirt-Waists, Mens Shirts, Collars Cuffs, etc. to Iron; She always wants to obtain a high gloss finish equal to First Class Laundries, and after hard work by the use of Common Wax, a lot of rubbing and Polishing utterly fails.

The Kaiser Iron Cleaner & Wax Pad will clean and smooth the rough and rusty places that have accumulated since the last time they were used By rubbing the hot Iron quickly over the corrugated surface you remove immediately starch or rust. You will be delighted when you try the Iron to see how smoothly it slips over the linen and the result will be no difference from first class laundry work. When the wax is entirely exhausted in the outer 2 Layers on both sides, remove it—and you still will have 2 Layers left.

WHY YOU SHOULD USE IT.

The cost to use it is almost nothing.
The Iron does not adhere to the fabric.
It imparts a splendid perfume to the clothes.
It saves a great deal of hard work in Ironing.
It gives an excellent lustre to the Linen or Muslin.
The Clothes will remain clean and neat much longer.
It gives the Clothes a much better finish than by any other method.
It makes the Iron pass smoothly over the surface and does not leave any black streaks or spots.

Every Housekeeper that cares to do Good Work should have one. We claim there is nothing on the market is its equal to the KAISER IRON CLEANER & WAX PAD, for quickness, convenience, satisfactory work or economy.

Advertise Your Business!!!

In each gross you will find 500 descriptive circulars like the above, leaving space for you to stamp your name and address on. These circulars will pull you in the customers for the KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER and at the same time ADVERTISE YOUR BUSINESS. We want to convince you of the virtues of KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER. Send your order to your Jobber or to our nearest Agents or direct. We will see that you get supplied. We know that you will never regret having secured an agency.

Advertising As An Investment

It Must Not Be Considered as an Expense, but Rather as a Commodity—It is the Salesman's Greatest Ally — How to Keep Business Good After the Holiday Rush—Some Suggestions and Criticism.

Written specially for the Canadian Grocer by W. F. Raiph.

E. O. McCormick, of the Harriman lines, in an address to the fruit growers of Southern California recently said: "You must recognize advertising as a commodity. It is imperatively necessary that you get this truth fixed firmly in your minds before you can hope to give it that broad consideration which its importance demands. Get away at once and forever from the idea that it is an expense. It is not an expense, it is a commodity; just as necessary a commodity in the selling of oranges, as business is conducted to-day, as are the oranges themselves.

"I do not mean by this assertion that you cannot go on selling oranges forever without any advertising; but one of the purposes of this convention is to see if means can be devised which will increase the consumption of oranges and thereby increase the sales of the product.

"There is no mystery or magic about advertising—that is to say, no more mystery than attaches to doing any other thing well. It is not an experiment. Propery done it is simply good salesmanship. It does simultaneously in a thousand or a million places what an individual can do only in one place at a time.

The Salesman's Ally.

"Paradoxically it not only does not supersede the salesman, but is his greatest ally. The better the advertising, the better the ally. It is the advance agent of the salesman. It predisposes the dealers and the public, and clears the route of the salesman of many of its thorns. Good salesmanship is the ability to induce people to buy your things equally with, or in place of, the stuff others sell."

Mr. McCormick has touched the spot. He has named the quality which separates a good retail advertisement from a poor one. People will always buy groceries—they must—whether the grocers advertise or not; but the aim of advertising is to increase the consumption of groceries. Every ad should be full of suggestion. Your aim is to get the people to buy more than they intend to. Very few customers go out of even the most ordinary of grocery stores without being asked, "Now, is there anything else?" In the more progressive stores this inquiry takes the form of a suggestion of something else. The writer went into a grocery and butcher store the other day for the sole purpose of buying a pound of butter. But when he came out he was carrying, besides the butter, a roast of pork, a pound of cheese and some canned soup. Suggestion did the trick. The man behind the counter of that store was a genuine Salesman with a capital "S." He was chock full of suggestion.

Now, every grocer who is progressive enough to read this paper knows the value of suggestion as applied by the man behind the counter. But what a lot of grocers have yet to realize is the value of suggestion as applied by the man behind the counter when he sits down to write an ad.

A WELL-WRITTEN GROCERY AD FROM MONTREAL.

Suggestive advertising is pretty largely practised by all kinds of retail merchants during the holiday season. This is the case more especially with those dealing in the goods more readily adapted for Christmas gifts. But when the holiday rush is over, merchants are almost too ready to accept a "dull season" as an accomplished fact. Live, suggestive advertising, carried on all the time, in holiday season and out of it, is a great business stimulant. After the Christmas season there is, of course, bound to be a little slump; but the right kind of advertising will greatly lessen it.

A WELL-ARRANGED AD FROM CALGARY.

Keep It Up.

There is a good deal of sound sense in the following extract from an exchange:

"The duller the times the more you require advertising. There may be some possible excuse for a business man letting up a bit in his advertising when "The world moves along like a song." When sales come without effort and he has difficulty in meeting persistent demand—although even then we regard present advertising as a most tangible future asset. But surely it is mighty poor judgment for one to sit by and twiddle his thumbs in sorrow and dismally refuse to make any sort of advertising effort when times are troublesome. The wise oarsman going up stream increases his efforts in proportion to the strength of the current against him. The sensible business man should do the same. To stop advertising because there is a suggestion of business depression is like ceasing to court a pretty girl when a rival appears in sight. Really that is the time you should put in your best licks.

"If you let a bit of a financial flurry that's past bind your advertising wings you are not only proclaiming yourself a "quitter," but are leaving the field wide open for the other fellow. And when there is a tightening up of times it simply means that the business will be distributed where the most intelligent and enthusiastic effort is made to secure it.

"Advertising is not a luxury. It is not a decoration—not the "trimmings." It is the underlying motive power, the real wheel-mover of business, and when you allow this motive power to slacken you let your business machinery run down.

"In a battle a good soldier never runs before the firing begins and then he always stands his ground. It is small wonder that a number of business men at the first glimpse of the hovering hard times cloud, drop off their advertising, are now complaining of the serious financial condition of the country. It seems a platitude to say that the time when things are slackest is the time for you to buckle to and do your hardest hustling, but it is a fact that needs to be iterated and reiterated to the Canadian business man, who in the most buoyant and prosperous times, frequently allowed himself to become awed by the shadow of a slump.

"You have got to believe in the ultimate success of your business no matter what the times are, and you have got to keep every force working to bring about the desired condition.

"It's the grit of the cinder path that makes the foot race all the more fleet. It's the element of resistance that makes the business game worth the playing. You don't win 'hands down,' but with your muscles working.

"Supposing things are dull, get busy and make them better. In this fight every business man has his part to perform. Do your part to bring about good times and the law of average will distribute them so you will get your share."

Some Hints and Criticism.

That's a good piece of suggestive advertising of Fraser, Viger & Co.'s re-

Hello! Hello!
"Is that Diprose's store? We have heard about your own make Mincemeat and want to try it. It's 10 cents per lb., isn't it? Well, send me two or three pounds, and also some of those Cranberries you advertise at 10 cents per quart and, yes, send me another pound of White House Coffee and Diprose Special Tea. That 40c blend is the nicest tea I ever tasted. I'll order my Christmas fruits from you when I come down town Saturday."

A NOVEL AND STRIING AD FROM LONDON.

produced with this article, headed, "Delicious English Confectionery." Take particular notice of the suggestions under the heads of "Scotch Peppermints" and "New Zealand Rabbit." The latter is particularly good; and its safe betting that it induced people to try that particular dainty. This ad, however, lacks a good arrangement, and its strength is accordingly impaired. The ad is not as neat in appearance as it deserves to be.

The Calgary Grocery Co. ad is good, too—particularly so in appearance. Its systematic neatness is very attractive and there is an absence of superfluous reading matter that strengthens it. In this ad the suggestive quality is covered by the special price.

John Diprose, the London grocer, submits an ad that gets at the point in rather a different manner to that taken by the writer of the Calgary ad. For general purposes, the Calgary ad style is conceded the best. All the same, the man who can produce an occasional novel advertisement such as that written by Mr. Diprose is bound to make an impression. The ad is certainly suggestive. It is more; it is persuasive. The woman who is hesitating between buying mincemeat ready-made and making it herself is liable to send for some of the Diprose brand without more ado. Of course, the test of any ad is its ability to sell goods; and the occasional use of the style submitted by Mr. Diprose by a regular advertiser is quite likely to accomplish that end. To be effective an ad must attract, interest and persuade. This ad is attractive—the picture makes it so. It is interesting, because the imaginary telephone conversation is brightly written and gets to the point quickly. It is persuasive because it suggests easy action on the part of the reader. Thus, possessing the qualities of a good advertisement, this kind of ad should sell the goods if not used too frequently.

A Grocer at the Winter Fair

Points of Interest to the Trade in the Provincial Exhibition at Guelph Last Week—The Seed and Poultry Departments the Most Attractive, Though Others Give Information to Discuss With Customers—Some of the Meetings of the Week.

Specially written for The Canadian Grocer by a local merchant.

Guelph, Dec. 14.—The annual Winter Fair, held here last week from Tuesday to Saturday, Dec. 8 to 12, was larger and better than any former effort in the way of a Provincial Winter Fair here or anywhere is the opinion of the officers and exhibitors. A grocer on entering the Machinery Hall where gasoline engines, hay lifters, etc., are displayed is at once struck with the handy devices for doing a great deal to assist the farmer with his work. The latest washing machines, wringers, cream separators, sewing machines, are in evidence, and, last, is a potato sprayer and also a potato planter. These seem new ideas and drew the attention of the crowd of city people as well as the farmers. A grocer can spend a full day investigating and getting the benefit of the teaching at this Exhibition. Each cream separator that your customers buy is adding its part to the betterment of the grocer, and a grocer ought to be able to decide which is the best from his own knowledge gleaned at these fairs and from the information he receives from his farmer customers who have the different kinds. It is simply wonderful to note the interest a farmer will take in a grocer when he finds out the grocer is interested in him, his farm and his machinery for the advancement of his farm. One little feature of the machinery section of the Fair that was of interest to everybody was a miniature teter and slide just like we all used to use when we were children. Even the grocers with their little chaps were experimenting on it.

The Seed Department.

After a pleasant chat with the grocer, who is taking tickets at the door, we move along inside. Immediately on entering the lower floor this year a grocer is interested, as right on the ground floor is the seed department, alongside the famous fat cattle, including all of the many different varieties. The seed department is one of the grocers' hobbies, and takes a long time to be fully investigated. We feel fortunate in getting a chance to have a look at the different varieties of seeds before the judges have made their decision. You have often seen a bunch of grocers out at a horse race picking a winner, but for good, clean, educational excitement, watch them all pick out a winner in the different grades of clover and timothy, and have to wait a whole day before finding out which carries off the prize, and also note the different times they will sneak back and have another look to make sure. This year the oats are by far the largest display, there being about eighty different samples of two bushels each. There are twenty-five different samples of wheat, about one hundred of corn, over a hundred of potatoes of different kinds, and these are a very interesting study for a grocer. Last year, with thirty-five varieties it was quite attractive, but this year with so many and of such quality, you feel it is beyond you to select the best, but, at the same time, you can learn a lot from the gentleman in charge, who, besides being an expert judge, will tell you the best variety for the different soils. "Buy your seed corn on the cob and avoid uncertainty," is one dealer's sign, and as there are so many samples and we know so little about them we decide he knows best, which is a very easy way out of it.

The new kinds of potatoes, such as the "Devil's Favorite" and "Earner's Comers," put us in mind of some of the names that are manufactured by seedsmen when they sell five or six different kinds of early brands out of the one bin, or the grocer who can sell 30c, 40c and 50c vinegar out of the one barrel.

Two mammoth green squash attract a good deal of attention in this department, one weighing 259 and the other 229 pounds. These were used in a local window for a guessing contest before being brought here. It would be too bad to leave this department without special mention of 100 samples of small seeds shown for exhibition purposes by the O.A.C. seed department. These samples are put up in little glass bottles, labeled and described, and are an interesting study. The different varieties of wheat and oats in sheaf give a very finishing touch to one of the finest exhibitions of seed grains ever displayed here.

Some Fine Dressed Poultry.

We move on to the dressed poultry department and here we have on good authority, the greatest in numbers, the best in quality, and the finest displayed lot of dressed poultry ever seen in Ontario. No bad stuff among it is the word. A grocer is more and more convinced from his own standpoint of the great educational features by the wonderful improvement in the method of displaying the fowl this year. The colored papers the fowl are displayed on and the extra roses and sashes of ribbon with which they are decorated is really an evidence of the fact that touching up helps to win the prizes.

Some Heavy Eggs.

Another feature of interest to grocers was the display of eggs. Please spell with a capital at the present price. The special feature about this was the fact that the prize was awarded for those which weighed the most. The question of selling eggs by the dozen or by the pound has been a debatable question between grocers and farmers for years. This may lead to something better for the grocer.

The Cattle and Sheep.

The cattle this year show a very gratifying increase in number, being about 20 ahead of last year. The Grades are particularly strong. Here the Galloways, with their long black shining coats and the dark red Devons, all sleek and fat, and in the best of condition, are a fine sight, and of interest to all classes of people. The sheep are exhibited upstairs and are among the most interesting to visitors of the whole show. Who is not interested in the meek animals who stand so silently in their pens, and the different breeds of long and short wool. To those who can tell the merits of the animals, such an exhibit of fine stock, probably the finest ever under one roof, this is an interest study.

The Bacon Hog.

The exhibit of hogs is about on a par with last year, and the animals show a great deal of care and attention. There are about two hundred and fifty entries in the different breeds. The bacon hog is the one the grocer is interested in, and I do not remember now whether it is a Tamworth, Berkshire, or what, but it was a pig, anyhow, I think.

The showing of live poultry upstairs is the largest in the history of the winter fair. There was some talk of the foot and mouth disease from over the border interfering with this department, but this was not evident, as the showing is away ahead of any previous year. Local men have carried off their share of the prizes, in some cases getting three out of four prizes, especially in the bantam classes. Turkeys, geese, ducks and pigeons are all well exhibited, and there is also a good showing of fancy canary birds, and each different exhibitor tells you the kind he has is the best for all purposes.

In dressed beef carcasses the entries are greatly increased, as is also the case in hog block tests. A skip into the testing room of the dairy department amply repaid one. Some of the milch cows were thin looking, but seem to be great milkers. It is almost impossible to give any idea on paper of the immense exposition and it has really got to be seen to be appreciated.

Some Interesting Meetings.

The winter fair would perhaps not be such a success but for the fact of the annual sessions of the Experimental Union of Ontario, which is meeting at the O.A.C. At its first session Prof. C. A. Zavitz, of the O.A.C., outlined some of the co-operative experiments in potatoes. Among other things he said the value of the potato crop in Ontario this year is estimated at $12,000,000. There are over 90 varieties grown. He claims that this should not be so, that fewer varieties would be better. The average of the experiments this year place the Empire State and the Dempsys as the two best varieties of late potatoes. The Early Puritan and the Early Eureka stand at the top of the early varieties. Carter's Invicta is the most popular turnip.

The crowds on Wednesday and Thursday were the largest in the history of the fair. The Women's Institute meeting on Wednesday was another feature of the week.

Another important meeting of interest to grocers was the Ontario Millers' Association, which was held in the chemical classroom at the O.A.C., and showed that much practical good has resulted from experiments in the flour-testing plant installed last year. You will probably remember how the different samples of wheat were tested at this meeting a year ago. Well this year again Prof. Harcourt was the speaker, and reported the results of his many experiments during the year in testing the different standards and blends of flour for break-making purposes. During the year that the milling and baking outfit at the college has been operating many kinds of flour from all sections of the country have been tested for baking qualities. It has proven pretty conclusively that the official grading of wheat represents fairly their value as baking flours. Prof. Harcourt has discovered a great difference in the quality of the old and new flour and of flour made from old and new wheat for baking purposes. He has also been able to produce bread from some blends of Manitoba and Ontario flour which practically equal the bread from pure Manitoba. Although it seems that much information has already been gained, especially by millers who have had the opportunity of having their flours tested against any other flour they desired, and thus have been able to calculate the exact value of the wheats they were handling from the standpoint of the value of the flour made from them for bread-making purposes, the work is just in its beginning and many new problems of very great importance are presenting themselves. The value of wheat cut at different dates of maturity for bread-baking purposes, the relative nutritive value pound for pound of bread made from Ontario flour to that made from Manitoba, and the relative value of blended flours of different percentages are some of the problems which presented themselves and upon which Prof. Harcourt will work next year.

These are some of the main points as far as the grocer is concerned, and so ends another winter fair, which has so far outshone the others as to make us wonder where it will all end.

WAS A TORONTO GROCER IN THE 60'S.

Robert Reford, of Robert Reford & Co., Montreal, who recently donated the sum of $50,000 to McGill University, began his business life in Toronto as a jobbing and retail grocer.

Bearing on Mr. Reford's early career, Henry Swan, of Swan Bros., grocers, Toronto, has some interesting reminiscences to relate. "So far as I can recollect," he said, "Robert Reford first went into business for himself as a jobbing and retail grocer, as we called them in those days, at the corner of West Market and Colborne Streets, under the name of Robert Reford & Co. That was about 1860. He afterwards took in Richard Dunbar into partnership, who was his next door competitor. Then in 1864 he went into the wholesale business as Reford and Dillon, on Wellington Street East, near Yonge Street, Robert Dunbar continuing the retail business. After a time the firm moved to Montreal where the business was continued under the same name until about 1867, when Mr. Reford retired to found the present steamship and forwarding agency of Robert Reford & Co., Montreal."

"Yes," Mr. Swan continued, "Robert Reford was one of the finest men I ever met. He was genial and kind-hearted and was in all respects a thorough gentleman. His personality was unusually attractive. The farmers for miles around used to go direct to Reford's when they came to town, and the saying was, and I know it to be true, that if you once became a customer of Reford's store you continued to deal there regularly. I think I can safely say that Mr. Reford was at that time one of the best liked grocers in the city."

"Oh yes," Mr. Swan continued, "of all the business that came to Toronto Robert Reford used to get more than a goodly share. I'm glad to know, and there are others, too, who will be pleased to hear of Mr. Reford's success and his characteristic kindness now that large wealth has come to him."

ORGANIZING THE HOCKEY TEAMS.

Interest in the Toronto Wholesale Grocers' Hockey League is growing daily, and prospects for the best season in its history are very bright. Two of the teams were organized during the week and the schedule is in course of preparation.

The officers of H. P. Eckhardt & Co.'s team are as follows: Hon. president, H. P. Eckhardt; Hon. vice-presidents, S. H. P. Mackenzie, C. F. Richardson; president, H. D. Eckhardt; manager, G. Wilkinson; secretary-treasurer, J. O. Elton; committee, J. McEwen, H. J. Middleton.

Eby-Blain's team have also elected their officers, as follows: President, J. F. Eby; vice-president, W. P. Eby; secretary-treasurer, W. R. Bond, captain. H. Millath.

HAS MADE SUCCESS IN THE WEST.

W. R. Megaw, accompanied by his son, W. E. Megaw, both of Vernon, B. C., was in Toronto this week. Mr. Megaw is a general merchant who went out west some 30 years ago, from what is now Auburn, Ont. He has built up a large and prosperous business in his town. He carries groceries, hardware, dry goods, millinery and boots and shoes. His store is 120x48 feet and a building 30 feet wide is to be erected across the back, making the full depth 78 feet. Nearby his store he has a warehouse in which he carries agricultural implements and carriages, while in this line of business he has recently opened a branch in Vancouver.

W. E. Megaw, the son, has charge of the advertising for the firm, which amounts to about $200 a month.

The Megaw firm subscribe for four of the MacLean publications, viz., Canadian Grocer, Hardware and Metal, Dry Goods Review and Busy Man's Magazine.

A NEW SWEEPING PREPARATION.

One of the newest things on the market of interest to grocers is a preparation to facilitate sweeping, known as "Nomordust." The preparation is in the form of a coarse powder to be sprinkled on the floor or carpet and used with the broom or brush. It is said to obviate dust and to save mopping and dusting. Being antiseptic, it kills germs and moths, and will purify the atmosphere of the rooms where it is used. A handful of the powder is said to be enough for several rooms, and it can be used repeatedly. The product is put up conveniently in tin cans and is sold by the "Nomordust" Co., 600 Crown Life Building, Toronto.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Jos. Cote, importer and wholesale tobacconist, Quebec, recommends to dealers in the Dominion the "Germinal Manilia" cigars, which should be given a trial order.—Advt.

THE CUSTOMERS' GIFT QUESTION.

The holiday season is with us again, and with it bobs up the perennial question as to whether grocers should make presents to their customers.

The question is a very discussable one, and yet from wide inquiry it seems that the custom is to some extent falling into disuse and business is coming down to a more strictly business basis.

It is a very nice thing for a grocer to give at the Christmas season, to a particularly good and loyal customer, a remembrance to show his appreciation of their patronage. And yet is it the best business? The question becomes largely one of where to draw the line and this practice of giving gifts to certain customers seems rather dangerous from the fact that some of those not remembered are almost certain to hear of the other cases and become offended.

On the other hand, there are the grocers, thousands of them, who give out calendars at Christmas time, usually in a more or less indiscriminate way. While this practice is perhaps more justifiable from the fact that the calendar bears advertising matter which can be counted on for at least some benefit, in practically every case the same amount of money expended in timely advertising in the local newspaper would have brought immeasurably better results.

The profits in the grocery business today are too small to allow of giving gifts to customers. Give good reliable goods and good service, and let the public know what you have to offer, and there will be no need to bribe them to continue their custom.

ARE BUTTER PRICES AT THE TOP?

Perhaps through force of habit the grocers assume that at this time of the year butter must advance in price, and are quite ready to pay more without knowing the reason why they should do so. Last year hay was very scarce, selling at from $20 to $23 a ton, and this year it is selling for $10 to $12, or about $10 a ton cheaper. Besides the hay crop being very good, corn also was a very heavy crop, so that the farmer must have plenty of feed for the cows, and with the high price for butter, will naturally feed better and produce more. Whether there is more butter held in stock or not is difficult to learn, but the English markets are not offering any inducements for export, and, therefore, there is only the home demand to be supplied. When the price of butter reaches from 30c to 35c a lb., it becomes too dear for many people to use, and, in consequence, the consumption will fall off. With the abundance of feed to keep up the supply it may be expected that butter has at least reached its highest mark, if it will not drop a little, which is more than likely.

CONTESTS AROUSING WIDE INTEREST.

"Several of the Christmas windows in the stores in town are intended for The Grocer's contest." So said one of our correspondents this week. "There is a good deal of interest evident in The Grocer's Christmas contests," wrote another. Letters are coming in from all parts of Canada with similar expressions of interest, and at this stage it looks as if this year's contest, in point of numbers, at least, would surpass last year's by a long margin. During this week and next, of course, practically every grocer will have one or more special Christmas windows, and the photographing will be done. It may seem somewhat of a nuisance to bother with photographs of windows when rushed with Christmas business, but the inspiration to the grocer or clerk of having his work compared with others, should, even beyond the prizes offered, be enough to induce entrance in the competition. Quite a number who submitted photographs last year have already signified their intention of entering again and the contest promises to be close.

The advertising competition, conducted on somewhat similar lines, already has a number of entries. Every grocer who does any newspaper advertising should be represented in this. All that is necessary is to clip one of your advertisements of Christmas groceries or crockery from your local newspaper and forward it to the editor of The Canadian Grocer before December 31. Even though you do not win the prize, the criticism of your ad by our specialists, who are thoroughly versed in what real business-bringing advertising is, should be worth dollars to you.

REMEMBER THE CLERKS.

There is no better way for an employer to show his appreciation of faithful employes, or going even further, to secure loyal service from his help, than to remember them with a gift at the holiday season. This seems rather far-reaching, but it is nevertheless, true. Hundreds of the largest employers of labor follow this principle, and the fact that the practice is repeated from year to year is an evidence of its soundness.

In no case is this more applicable than between the grocer and his clerk. A reasonable gift at the holiday season will indicate not only an employer's interest in the clerk, but will, if given in the right way, provide a friendly feeling which is worth many dollars in the conduct of the season.

While such a gift should be useful it need not be valuable As several correspondents have suggested during the past couple of weeks, a year's subscription to The Canadian Grocer would fill the bill admirably for a gift of this kind. It would be a constant reminder of the giver's interest, and not only that, but it would undoubtedly educate the clerk until he was of increasingly greater service. The investment would be an exceedingly promising one. Why not try it?

LOTS OF CHRISTMAS ORANGES.

While it was feared that we would have a limited quantity of California navel oranges for Christmas, the latest reports would indicate that the demand will be met with a superior article. This year one picking took place earlier than last, with the supposition that another picking would be ready for the Christmas trade. Owing to the warm weather the fruit ripened very slowly, but kept on growing. The weather lately being very favorable the fruit has ripened rapidly, and although later than was expected, they will in all probability reach the markets in time for our Christmas trade, and the quality will be excellent.

QUEBEC MARKETS

December 17, 1908.

POINTERS—

Provisions—Declined.
Butter—Steady.
Cheese—Firm.
Eggs—Firm.
Vegetables—Advanced slightly.
Beans—Steady.
Sugar—Undertone weaker.

A quiet but steady trade is reported in wholesale circles. The colder and more seasonable weather has had a good effect upon business generally. Most dealers, however, are agreed that there will be a slight falling off in the volume of business this year, as compared with last. This, however, will not be as large as some have expected. Many retailers who were not prepared for an excessive demand are finding themselves short, so at the last moment are hastening to make good their deficiencies in stock. Prices have not shown many alterations during the week. Provisions have responded to a weaker feeling in England. Canned goods are selling well, especially fish, which is in extra good demand. Evaporated apples are firm and scarce. Peppers are strong. Coffee is selling with its usual steadiness. Syrups and molasses are in better demand this week. Sugar is displaying an easier undertone just at present. Teas are slightly more active this week. Honey, cheese, butter and eggs, are firm, and in good demand. Maple products continue uninteresting. Fruits are selling well, also fish. Vegetables are not in as good demand as might be expected at this time of the year. Flour, feed and rolled oats are rather slow. Rolled oats has slumped in price during the week. but this fact does not seem to have brightened up the market much.

SUGAR—The undertone of the market is easy. This condition it is expected will prevail for some time. Locally, there is a good demand from manufacturers of confectionery and general trade is fair.

CANNED GOODS.

MONTREAL.—Canned fish seems to be the centre of attraction, which is owing to the season being favorable to its consumption. Fruits and vegetables are also in good demand. Meats continue to be less in demand than other lines, although demand has improved during the week.

TORONTO.—There is considerable activity in vegetables, this line selling surprisingly well, considering the time of the year. Larger consumption in consequence of cheaper prices and the fact that grocers have been buying for immediate needs, rather than for future, seem to be factors in this. Fruits and fish are not at all active.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Steady.
Table Raisins—Scarce.
Nuts—Selling well, stocks light.
Spices—Firmer.
Teas—Ceylons, advancing.
Collections—Fair.

Toronto, Dec. 17, 1908.

Business is reported somewhat brighter in the wholesale markets this week, and a cheery spirit seems to pervade the whole trade. While it might be expected that the greater part of the Christmas business would have been done, nearly all the travelers are still on their ground and orders are coming in quite freely. The retail trade has also brightened up noticeably during the week, something which was quite desirable. Indeed, the whole trade seems to be experiencing good Christmas business.

SUGAR—The local market is steady with no prospects of any immediate change. More sugar is being sold, however, than a month ago. European beet markets have been easing off, but reports received this week indicate a strong feeling.

TEAS—Prices continue to creep upward. A cable received by a local broker this week noted a further advance on all grades Ceylons and Indians. High grade Ceylons are held at abnormal prices.

COFFEE—Local dealers report business very active, with no change in prices.

DRIED FRUITS—Demand is quite active, particularly in lines for special Christmas business. Sales have been so good, in some lines, that wholesalers' stocks, rather lighter this year than usual, have been reduced to practically nothing. This applies particularly to table raisins, of which there are none to be had in Toronto. Stocks of figs and dates are also rather low, though large enough to supply the demand. Prices are unchanged:

WINDING UP ONTARIO SUGAR CO.

Order Granted by Justice Falconbridge This Week—Company May be Re-organized.

The Ontario Sugar Company, Berlin, Ont., which has passed through many difficulties since 1901, and has had numerous ups and downs, is being wound up by the courts, an order to that effect having been granted in Toronto on Tuesday by Chief Justice Falconbridge. J. A. McAndrew is referee, and J. H. Cockburn interim liquidator.

The managing director James Fowler admits insolvency. He says that the company was incorporated on September 6th, 1901, with an authorized capital stock of $1,000,000, divided into 10,000 shares. Of this amount 4,000 shares are issued and said to be fully paid.

Petitioner Fowler says that $750 salary is due him as managing director, that he has advanced $200 to the company, besides paying wages exceeding $300, and that the company has been sued by twelve or thirteen creditors.

Jacob Kaufman, of Berlin, one of the directors, says in an affidavit, that he holds 110 paid-up shares of the par value of $11,000, and also $7,000 in bonds as security for a debt of the same amount. Mr. Kaufman goes on in his affidavit to say: "The company's assets have been bonded to the amount of $200,000, which bonds are now worth only 66 cents on the dollar. The capital stock is impaired to a greater extent than 25 per cent, thereof, and the lost capital will not be likely restored within one year, if at all. The company is deeply indebted to creditors for supplies during the past two years, especially for coal and sugar beets. Many of the farmers who grew sugar beets during 1907 have not as yet been paid, and the company has been sued by many of them.

"Among the larger creditors is the Lake Erie Coal Company, to which the company is indebted in some $20,000. I am not aware of any assets which the company now possesses with which the claim can be paid.

On the other side, James Fowler, managing director, says that he will take measures to show his resentment of Mr. Kaufman's affidavit.

The company has been in deep water lately, owing partly to the fact that its building is worth $555,000, while its capital was only $401,634. The auditors have found, however, that the assets of $626,653 exceed the liabilities by approximately $24,000. While admitting the present insolvency of the company, Mr. Fowler thinks that the preponderance of assets over liabilities makes a favorable showing, and states that the company will be re-organized.

SAYS NO SCOTCH SUGARS COMING

A correspondent from Montreal who does not desire his name mentioned, writes as follows:

Editor Canadian Grocer.

In a paragraph in your issue of the 4th inst., you state that the reason given for the reduction of the second grade of sugar 'is generally attributed to the competition of Scotch sugars, which are said to be coming in somewhat largely at the present time and which are said to hold their own in price and quality with these second grades of local refined.'

"Anyone who is at all conversant with this business will know that no Scotch sugars have come in since the close of navigation, and we believe we are right in stating that the importation this year has been smaller than for some years past, for the simple reason that the Scotch refiners only secured a very small share of the British grown raw material.

"So far from holding their own with the Canadian sugars in price, it is practically impossible to import Scotch sugars at the present moment with winter freight, as the prices asked are above the parity at which local refined is offering. As regards the quality of Scotch sugars, they are considerably better than the second grades of local refined."

(The statement referred to was made as a result of information obtained in good faith from members of the trade who ought to be in a position to know whereof they speak. In justice to our correspondent, however, the facts as he presents them are published.—Editor.)

STARCH CO.'S ANNUAL MEETING.

A meeting of the Edwardsburg Starch Co. was held at the office of the company, No. 164 St. James Street, Montreal, on Tuesday morning, December 15th, at which the company's agents and representatives from all parts of Canada were present. In the evening a banquet was held in the Canada Club, Board of Trade building, which was a most pleasant social re-union of the company's officers and representatives.

L. Chaput & Fils, wholesale grocers, Montreal, have decided to close their place of business for Friday and Saturday of this week and the same days of the following week.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Dec. 15.—The grocery trade has certainly given a good account of itself in the recent civic election in Winnipeg, as no less than three of the newly-elected board of control are men who have been actively engaged in the retail grocery business. These are Controllers Cockburn, Harvey and Macarthur. All of these men have had considerable experience in civic matters, having served as aldermen in their various wards and all were returned by a very substantial vote. At the top of the poll for controllers, however, was R. D. Waugh, a real estate man, who has served the city long and faithfully on its parks board.

The mayoralty vote returned W. Sanford Evans at the head of the polls by over 1,500 votes. The whole civic campaign was fought out on straight lines of merit and personalities were carefully abstained from on both sides. It would be well if Provincial and Dominion elections could be conducted on the same lines. It is generally admitted that Winnipeg has made a very decided step forward in the general ability of its governing body. The new mayor and the majority of the aldermen and controllers are pledged to the immediate carrying out of the power scheme and at the same time to a careful maintenance of the city's credit, both at home and abroad by the judicious handling of finances.

A matter that is of immense interest to the building trade of the West, and more especially to that of Winnipeg, was the merger effected during the past week of a number of the smaller stone quarries into the Garson Quarry Company, Limited. The new organization will have a capital of $250,000, and it is expected that the output will be increased by about 300 per cent. The principal quarries are located at Tyndall, which is only 26 miles east of Winnipeg. At present the equipment of this quarry consists of three gangs of saws and one planer, and it is now proposed to increase this equipment by two double diamond saws, one single diamond, four planers, two lathes and pneumatic tools. Thus equipped this quarry will be the largest in Canada and one of the largest on the continent of America. The outlook for the requirements of building stone for next season are very bright, the list of public buildings already announced being the new Legislative buildings at Regina, reformatory at Portage la Prairie, court house at Brandon, public school at Regina, Collegiate Institute at Regina, another Collegiate at Moose Jaw, and still a third Collegiate at Prince Albert, and new post office buildings at Dauphin, Yorkton, Emerson and Edmonton; not to mention the completion of the union depot at Winnipeg. In addition to the quarry, this company will handle one of the largest lime plants in Canada. It has been pointed out by one interested in the trade in building stone that whereas the price of building stone has declined to a considerable extent since the original Garson's Limited came into being, the rate of wages for journeymen stonecutters has advanced from 50c to 60 per hour.

The warehouse commissioner during this week has made up his returns to elevators in the interior and also as to terminal elevators and this report shows that whereas the number of elevators in Manitoba has decreased some twelve in the year, and the number of warehouses by two, these decreases have been far more than offset by the enormous increase in elevator storage throughout Saskatchewan and Alberta. Saskatchewan shows an increase of 99 elevators and 6 warehouses, and Alberta an increase of 109 elevators and 8 warehouses.

The interior elevator's capacity of the Canadian West now stands as follows :

	1908. Bushels	1907. Bushels.
Manitoba, 678 elevators and 13 warehouses, capacity	20,558,500	20,983,500
Saskatchewan, 607 elevators, 14 warehouses, capacity	17,699,500	14,621,500
Alberta, 120 elevators, 14 warehouses, capacity	4,386,400	3,843,500
British Columbia, 3 elevators, capacity	168,000	276,000

This gives the Canadian West a total interior elevator capacity of 42,812,400, as against 39,724,000 bushels last year. Divided by railway lines, the C.P.R. has 949 elevators and 28 warehouses, with a total capacity of 29,810,900 bushels ; the C.N.R., 386 elevators and 12 warehouses, or a total capacity of 10,853,500 ; the G.N.R., 23 elevators, with a capacity of 550,000, and the Grand Trunk Pacific, 39 elevators, with a capacity of 1,184,000 bushels. Last year there was not a single elevator on the line of the G.T.P. The Alberta I. R. Co., in Alberta, has 11 elevators, with a capacity of 274,000.

At the head of the lakes the elevator capacity is divided as follows :

C.P.R., in 3 elevators at Fort William	7,777,700
Consolidated Elevator Co., at Fort William	1,000,000
Empire Elevator Co., at Fort William	1,750,000
Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., at Fort William	500,000
Davidson, Smith & Co., at Fort William	75,000
C.N.R., at Port Arthur	7,000,000
Kings, at Port Arthur	750,000
Total	20,153,700

In addition to these elevators the Lake of the Woods has two at Keewatin with a total capacity of 13,000 bushels, so that west of the Great Lakes to the Pacific coast there is a total storage capacity of 62,965,100 bushels, as against 58,482,700 bushels last year, an increase of 4,483,400 bushels. Where elevator capacity has decreased in Manitoba it has been occasioned by decreased demand at points in the older parts of the province and these buildings being taken down and removed to and rebuilt at points in Saskatchewan, where the demand was increasing.

The whole statement with regard to elevators shows a very satisfactory condition of affairs and especially is this the case along the new lines of road where it is evident an effort is being made to meet the requirements of trade. There is no blinking the fact, however, that capacity is not increasing in the ratio of production and this is very easily accounted for by the present unsettled state of the whole elevator question in the west. The clamor of the Grain Growers' Association for Government-owned interior elevators is making many companies shy of extending their lines until such time as this question is definitely settled one way or the other.

The poultry market is one that is attracting a good deal of attention at the present time as the Christmas supply is now practically all in stock in the big cold storage houses. It is quite safe to say that the Canadian West has this year bought over half a million pounds of turkeys alone from Ontario. One firm, Winnipeg's oldest and best known fish and poultry house, W. J. Guest & Co., received on Saturday, the 12th, the last of their annual shipments from Ontario, bringing their total purchases up to 280,000 pounds. They had wanted 300,000, but had not been able to get the additional car of the quality that suited their trade.

While this shows that the farmers of the West are not doing their duty in the line of poultry raising, it must not be supposed that no improvement has taken place. All the houses handling poultry in large quantities report that in the matter of chicken, particularly, Manitoba has made a long stride during the year and that the birds they are getting from Manitoba have no superiors and few equals, many hundreds of Plymouth Rocks being received that are as large as small turkeys and are well fed and toothsome. The larger houses are now having all their local poultry shipped to them alive and do the killing and dressing themselves. This tends to a much more uniform article to be placed on the market, and is also favored by the raiser of poultry, as out on the farms it is difficult to get help to do this work as it should be done. During September some of the larger houses here killed and dressed from 5,000 to 6,000 birds each and placed them in their storage. Each of these birds is wrapped in parchment paper and presents a most attractive appearance when placed on the market.

For the past ten days the weather has been very fine and very mild. The heavy cold snap at the first of December, which lasted less than a week, gave fur and clothing people a chance to unload and now the weather is simply ideal for Christmas shopping and the stores are thronged all day long.

Navigation closed officially Friday, the 11th, and during that short week over four and a half million bushels were loaded out of Fort William and Port Arthur of wheat along. Full particulars of the actual season's shipments will be available in a few days.—H.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, December 17, 1908.)

Christmas business has been good this year, sales being largely in excess of last year. General business is likewise showing a steady improvement, money is cir-

BELLEVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

December 15.—The grocers of this city, both wholesale and retail, all report an exceedingly bright outlook for a splendid Christmas trade. They say December so far has been in excess of last year's trade, owing to the fact that sleighing began much earlier this year than last, also to the fact that work has been plentiful, there being few idle men in this city. The local market has been well attended. If there is one thing the citizens of this city are proud of, it is their market, and it is always pointed to with pride. It is doubtful if there is another city of the same size in Canada that can boast of as fine a market as this city, a fact which can be attested by all who have ever visited it. Perhaps the prices are no lower than the other places, but the quality cannot be beaten. Here are the average prices for the last couple of weeks and which will probably remain in force for some time: Fresh butter, 28c to 30c; strictly fresh eggs, 28c to 32c; packed eggs, 25c to 27c; turkeys, $1.25 to $2; geese, 90c to $1.25; chickens, 12c per lb.; potatoes, 75c to 80c per bag.

At a meeting of the retail merchants of Deseronto, recently, a resolution was unanimously passed repudiating all connection with the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, which has been in the limelight recently, and calling upon both the Provincial and Dominion Governments to enforce the provisions of the Criminal Code against all combines and monopolies in Canada.

Miss Sheppard, of Toronto, was here this month demonstrating at William T. Patterson's store the lines of Cowan's cocoas and chocolates. She won many friends here, both for her employers and herself. She reported business here very satisfactory.

Among the recent callers on the trade here were: Mr. McDonald, of Thomas Bros.; St. Thomas; John Hodge, White Swan Mills, Toronto; Mr. Shield, Quaker Oats Co., Peterboro; Mr. Henderson, H. & H. Nelson; Mr. Curtis, Comfort Soap, Toronto; James T. Venables, Pollack Bros., Montreal.

TRADE NOTES.

John Avery, who for years conducted a fish business in Lancaster, N.B., passed away last week, as a result of paralysis.

Harold Barrett, who for many years conducted a milling business in Port Hope, passed away in that town after a lingering illness, on December 14.

The Chelsea Trading Co., with a capital of $40,000, has been formed to take over the Bank Street branch of Bate & Co.'s liquor business, Ottawa.

Winnipeg is Enjoying Good Christmas Business and Stores Are Showing Pleasing Holiday Display—Shipments of Jap Oranges to Vancouver.

WINNIPEG.

December 14.—Cold weather has given a big impetus to all classes of retail business in Winnipeg. Perhaps the grocer has not benefitted as much as the clothier, but the change in temperature has helped a great deal, and the city grocery stores are busy.

Christmas trade is good this year, much better than it was a year ago. Twelve months ago the outlook for business in Winnipeg was very discouraging, people were spending very carefully in the holiday season, and the local retailers did not cater for holiday trade as if they expected to get it. This year all that has changed, money is more plentiful, holiday trade is bound to be good, and the retailers are doing what they can to make it better.

The Hudson's Bay Co. store has had some splendid grocery windows lately which must have given that department a boost. The W. H. Stone Grocery Co., E. B. Nixon, A. Hendry and A. R. Christie have also been devoting special attention to their holiday windows. The Stone store is attractively decorated with holly this week and has been doing a rushing business.

Business has been better since the turmoil of the civic elections is over. It is true that a civic election is never the disturbing influence that a parliamentary election is, but the disturbance before the 8th was quite enough to satisfy the ordinary dealer who wants to attend to business.

During the month of December the retailers are allowed by the city by-law to keep open until 10 o'clock. The grocers very sensibly keep their stores closed after 6 o'clock until very close to the end of the holiday rush.

VANCOUVER.

December 12.—Japanese oranges, which are now on the market, are coming in limited quantities this year, but the quality is much better than last year. It has been stated that the crop in Japan has been practically a failure. The demand on the coast is good, not only here but in the interior. They are jobbing at 65c, and retailing at 75c, but with another shipment it is expected the price to the consumer will be down to about 50c or 60c by Christmas.

A new line of fancy confectionery for the holiday trade has been placed by Kelly, Douglas & Co., the manufacturers being Roach, Tisdale & Co., of Minneapolis. These are fancy gelatine goods marchmallow combination, etc., something a little out of the ordinary. They are attractive for the season.

Butter and eggs are very firm, the latter selling, for strictly fresh, as high as 65c. The high cost of feeding seems to be a principal factor in bringing the price up so high at this time of year, the demand also counting, as large quantities are needed for the Christmas cooking.

The 125 members of the Co-Operative Society of New Westminster have subscribed over $2,400, and it is expected to increase this amount before the end of the year. A location for the store has been decided upon in the Cunningham block, and it will be opened soon after the first of January. The officials of the company are: J. Campbell, president; T. Turnbull, vice-president; W. Brown, treasurer; W. Dodd, secretary.; executive, John Archibald, R. G. Patterson, A. F. Hale, R. Hampton and John Roscoe. These officers are looking after the details in connection with the starting of the store.

Complaint is made of the business methods of the Japanese handlers of rice, it having been stated that they sell to any and all customers, wholesale, retail or any other, and moreover, sell it in the same package, instead of according to sample. Some grocers have wondered why they could not meet the selling price of rice handled by a competitor, until it was discovered that the cheaper man was selling the product handled by the Japanese. One reason why it was cheaper was that it was not so well cleaned, but this fact does not seem to weigh particularly with the buyer, who notes the difference of a cent or two per pound. The Japanese are also accused of receiving overweight from their houses in Japan. While they might pay for this on agreement, a saving of $48 per hundred-ton shipment is made. It is stated that the ostensible 50-pound sacks received by the Japs contain about 54 pounds, the freight rate being $5 per ton, with 50c for wharfage and 50c for cartage. On the other hand, the white dealer complains that he receives underweight if anything, which increases his freight rates in proportion. These are tricks of trade which are difficult to overcome.

The cigarmakers of New Westminster have elected the following officers: President, Wm. Scott; vice-president, Geo. Bacon; recording correspondent and financial secretary, H. Knudsen; finance committee, Fred Thorn, Joe Hatter and A. Miller; executive, F. Clark, George Micelage, Fred Thorn; treasurer, I. R. Lawrence; delegate to trades and labor council, George Bacon, H. Knudsen and William Scott.

The death took place in Vernon, B.C., last Saturday, of Charles E. Mellish, traveler for Wm. Braid & Co., coffees and spices, of this city. He took very ill with typhoid fever, and the news of his death came very much as a surprise to his many friendsl He leaves a wife and one child. The funeral took place here on Tuesday, being conducted by the United Commercial Travelers. The pallbearers were G. H. Hewitt, R. J. Scott, H. M. Burritt, W. W. Buck, E. Gerster and C. P.. Egan. Among the many and beautiful floral tributes was a crescent and sickle from the Vernon Retail Grocers' Association.

The shipment of fish, such as herring and dog fish, to Japan is steadily growing, the Japanese themselves being principally engaged in the business. A shipment of about 1,000 boxes of herring, weighing about four to the ton, is being made. One of the members of the company superintending the shipment, stated that the prospects of the business were excellent, and that his firm, as well as others, were preparing to embark on a more extensive scale as soon as monetary conditions in the Orient improve.

The Southern Okanagan Canning Co., which is composed of people of Penticton, B.C., has decided to put in a plant capable of producing 10,000 cans daily. Thirty more shares, at par value of $100, will be placed on the market, and these will be taken by present shareholders.

A meeting of the directors of the Fru t and Produce Exchange of British Columbia was held at Revelstoke last week, those present being: James Johnston, Nelson; C. S. Hancock, G. Salt, G. R. Lawes, Enderby; E. V. Beeston, Nelson; C. A. Cordy, Summerland; J. L. Vicary, Peachland; A. E. Meighan, Kamloops; C. Ericson, Malakwa; H. Puckle, Victoria; J. Wilson, Vernon; R. Robertson, Vancouver, W. B. Robertson, L. M. Hagar, Revelstoke. The reports showed that the shipments of fruit and produce fall below the amount estimated, due chiefly to the fact that growers were shipping individually and not through the exchange. It was decided to re-organize on new lines whereby the local branches shall be under contract for their estimates to the head office, and the growers to their respective exchanges. It is hoped that by this means the better financing of the business may be done. It was also decided that the plans put forward shall be discussed by the various local exchanges, reports to be submitted to the general meeting to be held in Revelstoke on February 1st and 2nd, 1909. An important step taken was that of having one of the head office staff located on the prairies during the heavy shipping season to look after the interests of the growers. The question of express and fruit rates will be discussed at the February meeting. The year's shipments were 171 car shipments of fruit and produce; 793 cases rhubarb; 14,628 cases strawberries; 1,607 cases raspberries; 1,585 cases blackberries; 9,248 cases plums; 14,874 cases apples; 1,237 cases pears; 69 cases quinces; 27 cases apricots; 853 cases crab apples; 55 cases berries; 9,375 cases peaches; 3,569 lbs. gooseberries; 7,992 lbs. currants; 33,983 lbs. cherries; 15 cars mixed vegetables; 83 cars hay; 21 cars potatoes; 1 car canned goods. Other small shipments were also made.

HALIFAX.

December 14—The prospects for a large Christmas trade this year are excellent. Prices are fairly reasonable in most lines, and a large amount of goods are being turned over. Many of the retail grocers report largely increased sales of Scotch granulated sugar and Austrian granulated sugar. This is now sold generally at 4c per pound, and at this price is quite attractive to the consumer. The sales of dried fruit promise to be heavy. Butter and eggs are unchanged since last report.

E. E. McNutt, of Truro, who for many years carried on a successful grocery business on Prince Street, Truro, but for the past three years has been giving his attention to other interests, has decided to open business again at the old stand. Mr. McNutt is now stocking up with high-class groceries, and will be all ready for the Christmas trade.

In response to a demand made by the Yarmouth Board of Trade, Secretary Kelly has been notified by Superintendent Barclay, of the Halifax and Southwestern Railway, that special trains will be put on the road between Shelburne and Yarmouth during the Christmas season. This will be of great benefit to the merchants of Yarmouth.

The exports from Labrador during the season of 1908 were valued at $821,178.77. During the season 288,831 quintals of codfish were exported, about the same quantity as last year, but there was a large decrease in the price. In 1907 the value of this fish was $1,013,227, while this year only $779.858.40 was received.

There is a good demand locally for first-class apples. No. 1 winter fruit is selling at $3 ; No. 2 at $2 and No. 3 at $1.50. Nearly all the cheap varieties of apples are cleaned up.

An interesting case was decided in the city civil court last week. Andrew Hubby, a grocer, bought three dozen eggs in the green market and paid $1.20 for them on a guarantee that they were fresh laid eggs. They did not turn out to be as guaranteed and Hubby brought action against the woman who sold him the eggs. The defendant claimed that she did not sell the eggs as fresh-laid. When the case was called the plaintiff did not appear and judgment was given for the defendant with costs.

The warehouse occupied by R. W. Cooper, confectioner, of Glace Bay, C. B., was badly gutted by fire last week. The fire was caused by the upsetting of a lamp. A large stock of confectionery and fruit for the Christmas trade had just been imported and his loss will be about $1,000.

ST. JOHN.

December 14.—The wholesale grocers report that business continues exceptionally good. A lot of heavy goods are being sold, as well as the usual sorting-up orders for Christmas. There were no changes in quotations during the past week. The retailers also report trade very satisfactory. Special attention is being given to window displays now and all indicate the near approach of the holiday season.

J. E. Porter & Sons' general store at Ondover, Victoria County, was totally destroyed by fire on December 8. The firm had $4,000 insurance on their building and stock, but the loss will be much more than that.

The executive of the St. John Exhibition Association has selected September 6 (Labor Day) for the opening of the 1909 Exhibition. Should St. John receive the Dominion grant, as expected, this will be the date for the opening of the Dominion Fair.

Application has been made to the Provincial Government for the incorporation of Dearborn & Co. The object is to take over the business in St. John now carried on by Fred. R. Dearborn under the name of Dearborn & Co., as wholesale grocers and manufacturers of baking powders, coffees, spices and flavoring extracts, and to exercise in connection therewith all the privileges and rights incidental to such a business. The capital stock of the company is to be $75,000 divided into 750 shares of $100 each. The names of the applicants are Frederick R. Dearborn, Mrs. Minnie H. Dearborn, Mrs. Louise C. Dearborn, Harry N. Dearborn and Clarence H. Ferguson. Frederick R. Dearborn, Minnie H. Dearborn and Clarence H. Ferguson are the provisional directors of the company.

P. E. Island has exported a great deal of potatoes this season. Among the shipments last week were 24,000 bushels via schooner to Norfolk, Va., 16,000 bushels in two vessels for New York, and 6,000 bushels for Boston. Several other schooners also took large cargoes of the tubers to Boston, Sydney, C.B., and St. John's, Newfoundland.

The total output of the lobster fishery for Prince Edward Island this year is estimated at about 50,000 cases, and the average price was $16 a case. Oyster fishing yielded about 10,000 bushels, ranging from $3 to $9 per barrel.

A Hartland correspondent writing about the potato situation, says: "Prices for produce are about the same as last year, but in many cases are double what they were ten years ago. At that time there was no potato market, while the potato shipments of this year will total more than half a million dollars. By far most of the potatoes go to Quebec and Ontario points, although many carloads are shipped to St. John. Until three or four years ago there was no market for our potatoes in the Upper Provinces, as Michigan and New York stock could be imported there more cheaply than from here. In the last revision of the tariff, however, the duty on potatoes was increased by fifteen cents the barrel, which was just sufficient to shut out the American stock and create a demand for New Brunswick potatoes. The increase of duty was one of the greatest boons that has ever come to Carleton County farmers, and the measure was urged by our member, Frank B. Carvell, M.P., in spite of the fact that it met with much opposition. Last year's production of potatoes was so poor in this Province that Eastern potatoes got a very bad name in Quebec and Ontario, but by careful culling of the stock last spring and the unrivalled product of this season the New Brunswick potato has gained a name that means something. Few potatoes are now being shipped. There are many in the county yet to be sold, but the market everywhere seems dull. Dealers here are still buying and paying $1.10, which is just double the price of ten years ago, when there was no market whatever for them, except that occasionally a carload was bought in the spring and shipped to the American market."

Charles B. Adams, grocer, corner of Germain and St. James Street, is advertising his business for sale. He has gone to McAdam to manage the Royal Hotel, owned by the C.P.R. at that place.

MONTREAL.

December 15.—A. A. Woodman, of Woodman & McKee, Coaticooke, Que., was visiting the city for a few days last week. Mr. Woodman came here to see his wife, who is seriously ill at one of the city hospitals.

J. Hurteau, who recently bought the business of S. Robinson, Esplanade Avenue, Annex, is contemplating some small alterations to the inside of his store. A feature of this store, which is an admirable one, and which is a valuable asset to business, is the fact that in the rear of the grocery store is situated a modern butcher and provision shop. The latter business is conducted by A. Lesperance. When two stores of this nature, which are closely allied in trade, are placed together in this way, they are naturally advantageous to one another's trade.

Trade in poultry locally is in a good healthy state. The quantity of turkeys and fowl is said to be superior to that of 1907, and a good demand for most of the varieties in small and large lots has continued up to the present time. Roasting chickens of best quality have been somewhat scarce, and the supplies have not been sufficient to meet the growing demand. Prices generally have been lower this year than at the commencement of the holiday season during the previous year. Dealers express the opinion that there is likely to be a slight advance in the price of poultry within the next ten days. The cold weather has been favorable to the trade, and merchants are looking forward to a large business, in turkeys, especially, and there is good reason to believe that a heavy volume of trading will be done in the latter part of December and the first week of the new year.

W. S. Goodhugh, of W. S. Goodhugh & Co., left Tuesday for Halifax, from where he will sail on the steamer Sobo for the West Indies, where he goes on both pleasure and business.

Many of the grocery stores around the city have taken on their holiday appearance. Windows in many cases contain a profusion of evergreen decorations and Christmas trees, with various tempting articles displayed thereon are in evidence. Trade is reflecting in earnest the near approach of Christmas. Although the demand is a little delayed this year, many dealers state that they expect it will made up for the lost time, and are making preparations to meet the rush when it does come.

BRANTFORD.

December 15.—A new factory has been opened by Mr. Smith, of Dundas Street, for manufacturing brushes and brooms. The bu lding is a new one and has been fitted up with the latest style of machinery used in the trade. The proprietor was formerly a broom manufacturer in this city. He is at present employing six hands, but after new year's expects that probably twenty-five hands in all will be taken on.

Brantford merchants have decided to experiment with the trade excursion idea, and have secured low rates on the two radial railroad systems which centre here. The excursions are to take place to-morrow and the points selected are Ancaster, Paris and Galt. The radials will give a five-cent return fare from Paris and Ancaster, and a 10-cent fare from Galt. These are very low prices and ought to draw large crowds. Special cars will be provided on both roads and the stores will be kept open until nine o'clock the evening of the excursion. Automobiles properly placarded will be sent through the country distributing bills and advertising the excursions in every possible way.

Christmas buying has at last commenced in earnest and merchants report a decided improvement over the previous week. The "calendar" fiends have started on their rounds, and after every ten to twenty-five-cent purchase the clerks look for the question, "I would like you to give me one of those lovely calendars of yours?" Most of the merchants are giving them out, although others have decided not to give any this year.

GUELPH.

December 15.—Last week was a great week for the grocery stores, and all kinds of business. The downtown stores did not do it all by any means, though All the grocers would like to see a winter fair oftener, but the fact is, just the same, that it really starts the ball rolling for the Christmas trade. The great crowds touched nearly every householder and the boarding houses and hotels feed so many that every store is bound to be interested. One noticeable feature this last two years has been that there is not the foolish buying ahead in anticipation of big things by people who cannot afford it, and then, when the crowds do not come to them, have to fall back on the grocer to wait for his money. This was so in the first years of the fair, and most grocers are glad to see the last of that kind of buying. The usual grist of travelers were in town, and, along with the grocers, could be seen shaking hands with the sons of toil. It was a great time and now we can settle down to the good old Christmas trade.

Oman's window display on Saturday was a dandy for this time of the year. They had all their purchases of prize fowl, with the different colored ribbons attached, and drew a large crowd of admirers. That was worth while getting a few high-priced fowl for. The display no doubt, paid for the expense.

The Christmas bells and decorations are being put up in the local grocery stores this week, and most stores are all lit up and the boys are busy getting ready for the great annual rush. How many entr es will we have from Guelph in the window dressing contest? There is a chance for you all.

Don't forget, Mr. Grocer, the Christmas box that you have had your mind on for the boys. They earn it these nights working overtime. See that they get it. If you are in doubt, a year's subscription to The Canadian Grocer only costs $2, and it lasts all year.

PERTH.

December 15.—Perth Poultry Fair was held last Thursday and Friday, and it brought a good crowd of people to town. Prices were: Turkeys, 14c to 16c; chickens, about 10c; geese, 8c and 9c. Although the amount of poultry bought did not total up to what it sometimes has, the people were here and business was consequently brisk.

Harry Murry, who opened a grocery and ice cream parlor here last summer, has assigned to C. J. Foy.

There are a number of well-dressed grocery windows at present. J. H. Mendels window this week is specially worthy of notice.

C. A. Farmer has admitted his son, Tom Farmer, as a partner, and the business will in future be carried on under the name of C. A. Farmer & Son.

Early December grocery business is, if anything, a little ahead of the same period last year.

ST. CATHARINES.

December 15.—That article on "The Talking Point" in last week's Grocer was right to the point. That is just what the retail grocer needs in nine cases out of ten—clerks and proprietors that can discover the talking points of their business. We have too many order takers now. If you neglected reading that article look it up now and see if you can catch the idea of "The Talking Point" as applied to your business.

H. Henry has joined the rank of grocers using the daily newspaper as the medium to attract trade. While this is an entirely new departure for Mr. Henry, results will, no doubt, give him ample proof that judicious advertising pays.

Frank Wilson, the Queen St. grocer, has an elaborate display of Christmas stockings and decorations. Strings of these run from columns in the centre of the store to the shelving and are arranged rather artistically. The selling powers of the window displays would have been largely increased by the liberal use of price tickets.

The American Bazaar has a large display of Christmas fruits and the various ingredients used in preparing Christmas pastry. In this window neat price tickets have been used to advantage.

Bradley & Son have one window devoted to fruits, etc., and one to candy. This firm makes a speciality of medium-priced candies for Christmas. The displays are timely—good use is made of price tickets and they report a larger Christmas business this year than last.

E. O. Rawson, Humberstone, who purchased the branch store of J. H. Stanley, Port Colborne, has assigned.

Christmas fruit moved in larger quantities during the past week. Some report business much better than last year, while others are not so cheerful.

McLean Brothers, the James St. grocers, have decorated their store for the holiday season, using paper decorations strung from the ceiling and large red bells. At present this firm has a window display of fancy biscuits. The display slopes from the front of the window gradually to the back. The ground work is of white goods. On this individual glass dishes are arranged, each containing a different variety of fancy biscuit. Tinsel decoration is placed around each display. The showing, while not elaborate, is neat.

W. A. Sherwood & Son have also a display of Christmas groceries using the left-hand window. The bareness of the side wall of the window is relieved by a background of white cheese cloth, on which rests an arch of holly. Within the ark red paper bells are arranged. The display consists of figs, raisins, currants, flavoring extracts, olives, etc.

Sherwood & Son have added a stock of furniture to that of groceries. This section of the business will be under the personal supervision of W. A. Sherwood, while George Sherwood, the junior partner, will devote his attention to the grocery section.

OTTAWA.

December 15.—At a meeting of the Ottawa Retail Merchants' Association on Wednesday, December 9, it was decided to ask the Legislature for important amendments to the present market regulations. A copy of suggested amendments to the present regulations had been drafted by A. E. Fripp, M.L.A., and in the main these were adopted. When they are brought up before the Legislature, Mr. Fripp will do his best to see that they go through. In a nutshell, the change sought is one to prevent peddlers.

hucksters and transient traders who are not taxpayers, doing business in the city unless they pay a substantial fee. The Peddlers' and Hucksters' By-laws mainly concern the grocers, and the Transient Traders' By-law affects dry goods men, jewelers and stationers. First, the portion relative to hucksters and peddlers was dealt with. The first clause suggested that when goods, contracted for are delivered to the city person buying, no fee be charged. The second would aim at making it illegal for peddlers and hucksters who sell fruit, garden produce, etc., from door to door in the city to simply evade paying an annual license fee by going to the market with their wagons first, and paying the regular small market fee of 10 cents. This is done quite regularly. This, of course, pertains to the hucksters who buy vegetables, fruit, etc., from others and then retail them. The man who raises his own produce has the right by law to sell it when and where he wishes, and there is no desire to interfere with him. The third clause provides that farmers and producers who go to the market, after paying the market fee there to the market inspector, may sell when they want to or go where they like after 10 o'clock in the morning, from November to May, and after 9 o'clock from May to November. The fourth suggested the passing of by-laws forbidding criers or runners selling wares on the streets by shouting them out. The rights of hawkers and peddlers were also discussed. It was suggested that a license fee should be charged when such hawkers or peddlers go round from door to door selling tea, dry goods, watches and carpets, having no place of business in the city and not on the assessment roll.

Legislation to prevent peanut and fruit vendors from selling on the streets will also be sought.

INGERSOLL.

December 15.—It is a very noticeable fact that at this season of the year many merchants jump into "printer's ink" who, only use it occasionally at other periods, and some not at all. The Christmas trade seems to possess possibilities which demand the greatest attention of merchants in general, but nevertheless it is singular that many who are so desirous of getting their share of the harvest do not attach the same importance to the value of advertising throughout the other months. After all is said and done, it is the steady, substantial trade that brings success, and if advertising is an important leverage, why can it not be used with the same results at other seasons of the year? While it is noticeable that many merchants are only advertising during the holiday season, it is also noticeable that the shrewd, up-to-date merchant doubles, and in some instances trebles, his advertising space at this season. He appreciates the value of advertising the year round, is in touch with the people of his community either by actual contact or the advertising medium, and as the opportunities widen he increases his advertising scope. An effective system of advertising has been adopted by a local grocery firm, which should prove a great convenience to the housewives of the community. It is in the form of a neatly-printed and altogether attractive price-list, suggestive of the requisites for the holiday season. It might properly be termed a "grocery catalogue," as practically all the articles in the store are enumerated, and particularly those for which there is an increased demand at this season. These have been sent through the mails to customers and others, and should prove of much assistance when preparations for the plum pudding and other Christmas delicacies are being made. Not only does this list assist the housewife in making her selections, but it also keeps her posted on the different prices. This is an important feature, as prices have fluctuated considerably of late and with a list of this kind before her the housewife is able to figure out to a cent the cost of her holiday cooking. This is enterprise which customers and the public in general appreciate and no doubt is profitable to the advertisers.

The attendance at the market has shown a steady increase during the past few weeks. On Saturday last all the available display space was occupied by the vendors and quite a number were unable to offer their produce to proper advantage. The attendance of purchasers was sufficiently large to keep prices steady and business booming. Dairy butter was plentiful at prices ranging from 28c to 30c per pound. Eggs were more numerous than usual and sold freely at 25c and 30c per dozen. Geese held chief place in the poultry department and sold at 10c and 11c per pound. Chickens brought 10c per pound, and turkey was none too plentiful at 14c and 15c per pound. Apples brought from 50c to 75c per bag according to quality. Potatoes were in good demand at from 60c to 75c per bag.

TORONTO.

December 16.—A deputation representing the Retail Merchants' Association and the Retail Grocers' Association waited on the Board of Control last Friday morning with a view to securing more just conditions in regard to the peddling nuisance. E. M. Trowern, secretary of the R.M.A., who headed the delegation, complained that many licenses were taken out for half a year only, from June to December, for $5, and that this was altogether too low a rate. On inquiry it was learned that this season 707 licenses had been issued, all of the half-year variety. Mayor Oliver expressed himself as in sympathy with the retail merchants, and as believing there were altogether too many peddlers in Toronto. After some discussion, however, the matter was dropped, to be taken up again at the first of the year. The deputation received the assurance that no licenses would be issued in the meantime, and that in all probability the fee would be raised next year.

A judgment which shows that the complaints which have come from England and Scotland regarding the packing of Canadian apples were well founded was handed out by Mr. Justice Riddell this week. The case was that of R. S. Long against P. L. and H. Williams & Co., Limited. The plaintiffs agreed to purchase from 30 to 35 barrels of apples from the defendants. They claimed damages for improper packing, and claimed that the fruit was inferior. They produced evidence from their customers in Glasgow, Scotland, to the effect that the fruit was bad when it arrived there. Mr. Justice Riddell gives judgment in their favor, and refers the amount to the Master in Ordinary.

The stubbornness of horses when they smell fire was once more demonstrated last Friday night, when two animals belonging to Ewing Bros., grocers, 199 Roncesvalles Avenue, refused to be led out of a burning barn at the rear of their premises. Every known device was used, but still the horses refused to leave their stalls. Luckily the fire was discovered before it had gained any headway, and was put out with a few pails of water.

The Dominion Co-Operative Association held a most successful and enjoyable social re-union in Broadway Hall last night. The gathering was under the auspices of the Ladies' Co-operative Guild. Mayor Oliver presided, and a fine musical programme was rendered. Addresses on the work of the association, which will shortly open a second store in Toronto, were given by Alex. Fraser, president; H. Macdonald, secretary, and others.

STRATFORD.

December 15.—Business in general has not been up to the mark, but since the arrival of the G.T.R. pay car on Monday it has taken on the old-time rush. Stratford always feels a decided depression in business for a week previous to the Grand Trunk pay. Prospects are bright for a good Xmas trade, and grocers here feel confident that this year's business will eclipse all other years.

There was no material change in the local market on Saturday. Produce of all seasonable variety appeared in the usual abundant supply, apples, potatoes and fowl being particularly plentiful. Eggs seemed more plentiful than a week ago, but still one or two vendors had the courage to ask 32c for their hen fruit.

The creameries report the butter business brightening up. The unsettled weather of the past month has been unfavorable for butter making. The manager of the local creamery states that they have a great increase in butter when the weather is steadily cold or warm, as the changeable temperature causes a decided unrest among the cattle, making a decrease of butter-fat in the milk.

C. McIlhargey, president of the Stratford Wholesale Grocery Co., is the busiest man in the city these days. He has the Mayor's chair in view, and if hard work wins, he should come out victorious.

The grocers of Stratford a few days ago had the pleasure of meeting James O'Hagen, The Canadian Grocer's traveling representative, and are anticipating a good report of Stratford and its grocers. The coming of The Canadian Grocer each week is eagerly looked for by both proprietor and clerk. The column called the "Grocers' Encyclopedia" is a store of information which is universally enjoyed, and several grocers have expressed a wish for a sequel to "Men Who Sell Things."

H. T. Barker's grocery has a fine Santa Claus window this week. A large red brick fireplace forms the chief feature of the display, with well-filled stockings hanging above, while a little girl doll is anxiously looking for her stocking. In the front they have Xmas fruits, nuts, etc., tastily displayed, and many are the moments spent by the little folk before this window.

The Barnsdale Trading Co. have something new in the line of window display. Four wire netting tubes, about 4 feet high and 1 foot thick, filled with different kinds of nuts, occupy the four corners of the window, while on top of each tube a pyramid of oranges is arranged. The ground work of the window is formed of fancy candies.

McCully & Haugh are showing two well-dressed Xmas windows. The glass front of their windows being very high, they have formed a network ceiling of evergreens about halfway between the store floor and the roof of the windows. Grape fruit, oranges, Malaga grapes and candy canes are hanging from the evergreens. Xmas fruits, mixed candies, chocolates and nuts are well displayed, and each window is brilliantly lighted by numerous wax candles.

GALT.

December 15.—With the advent of good sleighing, business in Galt has taken on an added impetus. The stores have brightened up, the people are buying more freely, and more farmers take advantage of the sleighing to "slip" in and see the Christmas goods, and, in most cases, they buy a considerable quantity of groceries, dry goods and such like. The factories are working full time, there are very few unemployed, and the prospects for a prosperous and happy Christmas seem exceptionally bright at present. Of course, the poor are always with us, but their care is in capable hands. In this connection your correspondent witnessed a strange proceeding the other day. He was in Sloan's grocery store when a woman came in with an order from the Mayor for groceries to the extent of one dollar. She purchased small quantities of bread and butter, and larger quantities of jam and marmalade. Seventy-five cents had been expended of the charity money, and she requested that she be given a 25c box of candy for the remaining quarter. The clerk had some experience with such customers, and he sought the advice of the proprietor, who promptly informed the lady in question that charity orders did not include candy. Other grocers have the same experience, some of the recipients of charity asking for goods even more useless to a poor family.

John Sloan has a very pretty Christmas window. His large south window has been devoted to a display of Christmas goods. The walls of the window have been hung with green streamers, while large red bells are hung from the ceiling and about the walls. Christmas boxes of candy, stockings and other gifts complete the display.

The market on Saturday was exceptionally large. Large numbers of huge chrysanthemums were offered at 25 cents each. Butter was 30 cents and eggs 35 cents. Other prices remained unchanged. Collie pups were offered at $2 each, and all were sold.

A number of local grocers have laid in a stock of fancy boxes of candy for the Christmas trade. The Guelph correspondent makes a good suggestion when he advocates closing the stores for both Friday and Saturday. A number of Galt merchants are complaining that they will do no business on Saturday, and they might consider the suggestion. It would be a good thing for both the proprietors and the clerks.

Galt merchants are up in arms against their Brantford brethren. Whether business in the Telephone City is not brisk enough, or whether the merchants of the city are trying a new scheme, is not known, but an excursion has been arranged from Galt to Brantford on Wednesday next for a return fare of ten cents. It is not definitely known, but it is thought that the Brantford merchants are behind the scheme. As the regular fare is 90 cents, it will be easily seen that a large number of Galtonians will take in the trip over the Grand Valley Electric line. And it is safe to say that they will do considerable shopping.

CHATHAM.

Dec. 15.—Chatham grocers are now in the throes of a busy Christmas season, which gives promise of being one of the best in years. From all accounts people are buying quite a bit earlier than usual. They are also buying more liberally than they did last year, which is a good indication of returning prosperity.

An important business transfer took place last Monday, when N. A. McGeachy & Sons, City Dairy, acquired the milk business for some time past conducted by the Maple City Creamery. The transfer includes, not only the Creamery milk routes, but also concerns delivery wagons and bottles and its sources of milk supply. Henceforth, Mr. Lister, of the Creamery, will confine his attention to butter making. In an interview, W. A. McGeachy stated that, far from involving the oft-predicted increase in the price of milk to 7c a quart, the change will ensure Chatham 6c milk, at least for the present winter, owing to the fact that running expenses will be considerably reduced. Last winter the milkmen lost money on milk at 6c. Mr. McGeachy added that prior to the transfer he had contemplated establishing a butter factory, being encouraged by the success which had attended him in butter manufacturing on a small scale, but that the largely increased milk business would have the effect of keeping his hands pretty full.

The assets of Lorne A. Cummings, of the "Teddy Bear" grocery, who made an assignment some time ago, were last week sold at 42 cents on the dollar to Wm. Jenkins, of this city. Subsequently the business was taken over by Harry W. Jacques, who formerly carried on a grocery on Raleigh Street.

J. McHardy, of Merlin, has moved his stock of confectionery into his new store in the Oddfellows' Block. He is remodeling his old store into a dwelling house.

M. Macfarlane, Ridgetown, has opened a grocery in D. J. McLean's old stand, Main Street West.

Jas. Hillman has given up his position in E. Coulter's grocery at Wheatley, and has accepted a position in Merlin.

A Greenberg, a second-hand dealer, in Wallaceburg, has gone into the grocery business, opening a store opposite Taylor's grocery.

Last week Thos. Hicks, of Essex, disposed of his bakery and grocery to Charles Billing, of North Ridge. Mr. Billing, while continuing the grocery business, will pay particular attention to the bakery, and will retain A. H. Meston as baker.

The establishment of a cold storage station at Leamington is talked of. There are few places where it would serve so many ends. Besides the fruit during the summer season, butter, eggs, poultry and apples would keep a large section busy; while the fishermen need it badly. Local parties are interesting themselves in the scheme, and there is considerable likelihood that it will materialize, one gentleman having stated that he would put $10,000 into it.

The Essex canning factory has finished work on pumpkins, and from now on will be engaged on jams and catsups, keeping several hands employed all winter. The past year has been one of the best in the factory's history, the output being far in excess of any previous year.

The city Board of Trade made a progressive move last week, when, at a well-attended meeting, they decided to petition the Dominion Government for the dredging of the Thames to a depth of 16 feet. Plans for the work were prepared by the Government some years ago, but it was never carried out. The deepening of the river would have a beneficial effect on freight rates, both on incoming and outgoing shipments. A number of matters of local interest were discussed.

Ald. John Edmondson, the St. Clair Street butcher, and doyen of the council, is out for the mayoralty. His only opponent so far is Ald. W. H. Westman, of the hardware firm of Westman Bros., though there is quite a bit of talk of ex-Ald. Wm. Potter, the Queen Street grocer, who was defeated last year, coming out and making it a three-cornered fight. For the council, Ald. Harry A. Andrew, who is standing for re-election, is so far the only grocer aspirant, though Chairman John McCorvie, of John McCorvie & Son, is expected to enter the race for aldermanic honors.

Eggs on the local market are now up to 30c a dozen—a price practically unheard of before. Potatoes are reported plentiful, and can be had at from 75c to 90c on the market, though last Saturday as high as $1 was asked. Grocers offer the best quality at $1 a bag.

John W. Dyer, the St. Clair St. grocer, was last week honored by his fellow members of Thames Lodge, No. 101, S.O.E., by being elected to the W. President's chair. T. W. Smythe, treasurer, and R. I. Weaver, trustee, are other grocers on the list of S.O.E. officers.

"Tom Cats," in striking big capitals was the catchy feature of J. H. Kadwell's advertisement recently. The housewife, curious to know who advertised tomcats for sale, discovered, on closer examination, that the advertisement related to tomato catsup.

Travelers Discuss Society Business

Dominion Association Held Annual Meeting in Montreal on Saturday, Dec. 12—Maritime Travelers Met at Halifax on Friday, Dec. 11—Shall the Woman Be Admitted to Associations' Ranks?

Close upon 100 members of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association attended the annual meeting of that body held in Montreal in Fraser Hall last Saturday evening.

Retiring President Egan occupied the chair, while S. J. Mathewson, the vice-president and president-elect; Maxwell Murdock, treasurer; E. D. Marceau, Hon. J. D. Rolland, Ald. Robinson, J. S. N. Dougall, L. W. Anderson, A. L. Friedman, E. Duckett, James Robertson, E. E. Guilbert, A. J. Brown, and H. W. Wadsworth, the secretary, also occupied seats on the platform.

Several important questions were discussed, the chief among them being the proposal to establish a pension fund, which did not meet with much favor. Whether or not ladies should be admitted for membership also came in for some discussion.

Opening the meeting, President Egan stated that the year has been a most satisfactory one, a larger amount than ever having been added to the reserve fund. During the year 833 new members were enrolled. This, however, did not represent the total increase, as many members failed to renew. This made the net gain 101, and the present membership 6,194. The total amount received on revenue account was $74,798.08, of this amount $58,250 was represented by annual subscriptions and $16,345.58 interest on investments; $50,225 had been paid in mortuary benefits, against $63,250 last year. The working expenses amounted to $5,564.86; $32,000 had been invested in first mortgage real estate at 6 per cent. interest, and matured loans amounting to $56,500, bearing 5 and 5½ per cent. interest, had been renewed at 6 per cent. The net surplus for the year was $21,935.86, which, added to capital account, made a grand total of $315,732.14.

Mortuary claims were lighter than last year, being 56, against 62. The average age of those who died during the year was forty-seven years, their length of membership averaging sixteen and a half years. The trustees of the educational fund reported ten new pupils during the year, with five retired, leaving eleven at present receiving gratuitous education.

It was reported that the Government of Prince Edward Island had decided to abolish the tax on commercial travelers, which had been an obstruction to trade.

The committee appointed to consider the notices of motion re the mortuary benefit fund reported against their adoption. The receipts and expenditures accounts showed a credit balance of $13,-116.96.

R. C. Wilkins commented on the satisfactory nature of the report.

The president then read the list of members who died during the year. Following this the report of the trustees of the educational fund, showing an expenditure of $186.66, was read, the trustees applying for an appropriation of $150, as the balance in hand was only $64.53. On motion of Geo. Mann the amount was recommended.

The hospital fund report showed a balance of $240.94, and the chairman suggested that the amount be equally divided between the Grace Dart Home, the Hospital for Incurables, and the Western Hospital. A member suggesting that the hospitals should be asked to endow a cot in consideration of these payments, Mr. Marceau pointed out this could not be done for $80 each, but the first speaker held it could be got for $75. R. C. Wilkins said the permanent endowment of a cot would cost $2,000, and proposed the distribution of the amounts mentioned, leaving the hospitals to do as they pleased.

Speaking as one of the governors of the Western Hospital, S. J. Mathewson explained that it cost the hospital $1.25 per day to maintain patients, and he did not see that the proposed donation would enable the hospital to do anything in the way of enlarging the building. Mr. Gardner moved that the General Hospital be substituted for the Western, whereupon the chairman explained that $2,000 had been given to the General Hospital two years ago, and after Ald. Robinson had expressed his opinion that the money could not be used to any better purpose than that proposed, the motion was carried.

Ed. Duckett's motion regarding the establishment of a pension fund was then made. He explained his reasons for requesting that a committee be appointed to study the means of creating a pension fund, and that $500 be devoted to secure actuarial opinion on the mortuary liabilities. Messrs. Marceau and Mathewson dissented, the latter remarking that if anyone wanted a pension the Government of the country would grant it if they could pass a medical examination. Every cent of the surplus was needed for the mortuary fund. A few were in favor of the motion, and on a vote being taken it was defeated.

Then Major J. T. McBride's motion—proposed in his absence through illness—that by-law article III, section 3, be amended to make the qualification for active members "he or she," instead of "he." There was considerable discussion on this question, participated in by Messrs. Woods, Marceau, Murdock, Mann, Lefebvre and others. The motion was put and lost.

S. Woods again brought forward the suggestion that an actuary be appointed to provide an estimate of the mortuary liabilities. R. C. Wilkins and S. J. Mathewson could not see the necessity for this, the former stating that they had $300,000 assets to meet their liabilities, the actual amount of which no one could definitely tell, since they had liabilities to every member's widow and family. So long, however, as they could present satisfactory reports as they were now doing, that was all that was necessary. Mr. Woods persisted in his contention. Mr. Mathewson then rose, and said that the association knew perfectly well its nominal liabilities from the lists in its possession. The association was run on a business-like basis. Finally a show of hands to indicate feeling was called for, and the motion was unanimously defeated.

A letter was received from C. Petrie, calling attention to a paragraph in the newspapers to the effect that Quebec City would move for the adoption of a by-law to tax commercial travelers and others $200 before they were at liberty to take orders or sell goods. The chairman explained that article 50, chapter 15 of the Quebec Legislature held that: No municipal corporation shall levy any tax upon any commercial traveler, taking orders or selling goods, wares or merchandise by sample, catalogue or price list, or require any such person to procure a license from such municipal corporation, notwithstanding any disposition to the contrary in any statute.

Whether commission received by travelers should be considered salary was one of the last matters brought before the meeting. This question was considered important enough to be brought before the board, and E. D. Marceau, as a member of the Chambre de Commerce, said he would be willing to bring the question before that body. He understood it had already been brought up at a meeting of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Egan then thanked the members for their loyalty to him during the past year, and expressed the honor he felt in having held the office of president. He then announced the election by acclamation for the coming year of S. J. Mathewson as president; J. Bevans Giles as vice-president, and Maxwell Murdock as treasurer. Out of 2,305 votes cast for directors, the following secured election: Messrs. F. N. Picard, H. M. Levine, L. Decelles, A. J. Brown and C. D. O'Brien. These gentlemen will act concurrently with the other five directors making up the board.

President-elect S. J. Mathewson then took the chair amid applause. He made a neat little speech, stating his appreciation of the honor shown him, and requesting a continuance, during his turn of office, of the loyalty shown by the members during 1908.

Mutual Benefit Meeting.

On Friday evening the annual meeting of the Dominion Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society took place. The membership is now 1,378, 139 new members having been added during the year. A social evening was passed after the business on hand was disposed of. Songs and recitations were pleasingly rendered by Charles Gurd, J. Bevans Giles and R. C. Wilkins. E. C. Levine gave an exhibition of legerdemain and performed some amusing card tricks.

The annual dinner of the Dominion association will be held next Monday evening, Dec. 21. The committee are working actively and promise one of the best functions yet held, which means a good deal. The programme is being well looked after and is said to contain some novel features which will be particularly attractive. The following will be the chief speakers: Charles Marcil, prospective Speaker of the House of Commons; Prof. Stephen Leacock, of McGill University; Hon. Charles Murphy, Henri Bourassa, and Senator L. J. Forget. A complete and bright account of the dinner will be given in The Canadian Grocer next week.

MARITIME TRAVELERS ADMIT LADIES

At Annual Meeting Held at Halifax Last Week—Changes in Mortuary Benefit Scheme.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 14.—The annual meeting of the Maritime Commercial Travelers' Association was held here on Wednesday, Dec. 9.

One of the novel features of the meeting was a resolution to the effect that hereafter ladies would be admitted to the privileges of the association.

The secretary reported the membership as 869, as compared with 816 a year ago.

In the election of officers, R. A. March, St. John, was chosen president, and the vice-presidents for New Brunswick are: R. J. Humphrey, St. John; A. E. Massie, Fredericton; J. E. Petrie, and J. Pope Barnes, St. John.

Vice-presidents for Nova Scotia—Chas. Blackie, D. R. Rutherford, A. Milne Fraser, D. Hockin, Halifax.

Directors—H. E. Pyke, William Tapp, C. T. Hermann, together with R. H. McCulloch, J. B. Douglas and P. T. Strong.

The report showed that of the 869 members, 499 are registered at Halifax, and 370 at St. John, (N.B.)

Four members entitled to mortuary benefits, died during the year, H. M. Doane, Archibald McLean, Bernard Quinan and Capt. Thomas Douglas, the last named being a past president of the association.

Seventeen accident and sickness claims were presented by members during the year, aggregating $476.76, all of which were settled promptly by the Canada Accident Assurance Company.

A report on the mortuary benefit fund of the association, made by T. Bradshaw, insurance actuary, has been under consideration by the board of management during the year. As a result of their deliberations and in conformity with the recommendations of the report referred to, it is deemed expedient that measures should be adopted for strengthening the reserve funds of the association. To this end it is proposed that the $1,000 accident insurance heretofore provided to members at the expense of the association, should be discontinued at the close of the present year, and that a modified scale of mortuary benefits shall be adopted for members joining the association from after Jan. 1, 1909. The directors have arranged with the Canada Accident Assurance Company to continue the special rates for accident insurance to members of the association who may desire such protection.

The audited statements of the secretary and the cashier show an increase in the funds of $4,858 for the year, and that the total reserve now amounts to $47,716.

The meeting unanimously decided to abolish the accident insurance privilege. It was also decided to extend the time in which members shall qualify for the maximum benefit from thirteen years to twenty-four years. This refers only to new members and will go into effect at the beginning of the year.

The association will hold a banquet at the Royal Hotel, St. John, on Thursday, Dec. 17.

C. T. A. BANQUET.

The annual banquet of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada, to be held on Wednesday evening, Dec. 23, at McConkey's, Toronto, promises to be one of the brightest and most entertaining of similar functions yet held. The committee have been scurrying round since their appointment making arrangements for a dinner and programme that would appeal to everyone, and their efforts promise to be well rewarded.

Among the brighter lights on the toast list are Hon. Geo. P. Graham and Hon. W. J. Hanna, W. K. George, Hugh Blain and S. R. Wickett. This, with a number of speeches from members of the association, assures the excellence of this department of the programme. The musical end is also being well looked after, and a couple of novel features are being introduced which will add to the interest. The official programme will be as follows:

The King.

Next week's issue of The Canadian Grocer will contain a bright and complete report of the dinner, which should be of interest to retailers as well as to the travelers themselves.

MONTREAL EXCHANGE MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Exchange will take place in Montreal to-day, Friday, Dec. 18.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

December 15.—Except for filling sorting-up orders, local wholesalers are doing very little just now. Travelers will be in about the middle of next week and then stock-taking will proceed. There is no changes in prices for staples and Christmas goods. Haddies are scarce, owing to storms on the Atlantic coast, and prices are half a cent higher.

Slight improvement is noted in retail trade, and if the sleighing stays with us there will be busy times in London stores from now until Christmas.

The regular meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association was held in Sherwood Hall last Tuesday evening. First Vice-President, John Diprose was in the chair in the unavoidable absence of President Shaw. The meeting was well attended. A committee was appointed to look into several grievances. A strong resolution was passed, condemning Sir Wm. C. Macdonald for not allowing a larger margin of profit to the retailer on his tobaccoes. If the retailer would ask 11c per plug, instead of 10c, it would kill the sale of it. Vice-president, J. Diprose, ex-President Harry Ranahan, Treasurer E. J. Ryan and C. W. Summer were named a deputation to wait on a local miller, in regard to selling flour at retail. President Shaw and Vice-President Diprose, who waited on some price-cutters in the east last week, reported that they could fix the matters all O.K., but for one grocer, who is not a member of the association. He has a store for sale and he is trying to work up a trade by selling some lines at cost. Another deputation was appointed to wait on one of the local biscuit houses in regard to selling one retail grocer goods at one-half cent per pound lower than other retailers.

A new wholesale crockery firm has been organized in London, and will open business in the Green-Swift building at the beginning of the year.

During the last forty days the Grand Trunk Railway has sent out of this city 87 cold storage cars, the large majority of which were filled with turkeys for the western markets, valued at upwards of a quarter of a million dollars. Turkeys will be dear in the West this year, as shippers have to pay on an average two cents a pound on all the birds they ship. The freight charges on a carload of turkeys shipped to Vancouver a few days ago amounted to $1,200. For several weeks to come large shipments west will be of daily occurrence, and it is estimated that Middlesex turkey raisers along will send out over a million dollars' worth of the birds.

Apple shippers complain of a rot which has attacked their fruit, and dealers say they have the greatest difficulty in keeping them from spoiling. Barrels of apples which appear to be first-class when put into cellars, almost immediately develop symptoms of decay. Good apples were never so high-priced as they are this season.

Higher prices are predicted by egg dealers for the output of the next few weeks. This is in part due to the fact that the stocks held by dealers are not as large as usual at this season. In the United States prices are even higher than they are here.

Mathon Bros. & Co., general merchants, Ville Marie, are asking an extension of time.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Dec. 16, 1908.

The usual quietness which is noticeable in the cheese trade at this time of the year is not, perhaps, so pronounced this year. A few orders for export are being filled. English buyers are finding that there is not as much cheese left over from the close of navigation as there was last year. Cable inquiries are arriving for the lower grades, but these cannot be filled, owing to scarcity. Total receipts since May 1 are 1,896,335 boxes, against 2,050,410 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

The local market is steady, with Westerns quoted at 12¼c to 12½c, and Easterns at 11¾c to 12c.

The butter situation is not very interesting at the present moment. Dealers are complaining about the poor quality and the high prices which they have to pay for this stock.

The objectionable feature of this butter is the fact that much of it possesses a strong stable flavor, which is due to carelessness of farmers in allowing the milk to stand too long in stables, before it is removed to the cellars or pantries. Locally, the demand for high grade stock continues good. It is thought that stocks are not larger than will be required between now and spring time. Considerable stock is said to be held here for the account of Western houses. Receipts of butter for the season have been 402,523 packages, against 399,973 packages for the same period of last year. The local market is steady at 26½c to 27c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, Dec. 17, 1908.

The farmers seem to have the control of the markets pretty much in their own hands. If the prices suit them, they will sell their hogs, but if not they will simply hold their stuff until the prices advance, which occurs, too, if buyers want their goods. This is particularly so with the hog product. A few weeks past the run of hogs, at prices from 75c to $1 a hundred higher than last year, was unusually heavy. With the English market supplied by the Danes, Irish and Americans, from 2 to 3 shillings lower than last year the packers made a slight drop. As soon as this reached the ears of the farmers their hogs were granted a longer lease of life, and the packers, in order to get them, have only one thing to do. Some years ago when farmers had to meet the interest on their mortgages, they had to sell at any price, but now they are independent, and practically boss the situation. The prices offered this week is $6 off cars for selects, grading a little lower for less desirable quality.

PROVISION MARKETS

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The principal feature of the provision market this week is the sudden dropping off of the hog supply. This was, however, not unexpected, as it is always the case after an unusually heavy run. Cured meats are not much in demand, fresh meats, and particularly poultry, take their place. Prices on the whole are unchanged.

POULTRY — When the enormous quantity of fowl it requires to supply the demand of a large city is taken into consideration, especially just before Christmas, dealers naturally have to make their calculations on what is in sight, and compare it with other years. So far the receipts are small, and it is feared that farmers will again make the mistake of holding their stock until within a few days of Christmas, and then the usual slump will take place. One firm's receipts during three days before Thanksgiving were 27 tons, and they expect 50 tons will be their requirements for Christmas. The stock that is coming in is in good condition. Farmers have no doubt been learning the folly of sending skeletons instead of fowl, and are finding out that it pays to feed and prepare their poultry to meet the wants of the buying public.

HONEY—Honey is about 1c higher this week, but in the rush for holiday trade it receives very little attention. There is considerable honey on the shelves of grocers which would scarcely stand inspection, and should be properly labelled.

EGGS—The egg market continues firm, and the stock on hand, both in cold storage and in pickle, is not supposed to be more than will be required, unless the winter will be exceptionally open and mild, which might start the hens from their winter rest to produce an early supply.

BUTTER—Dairy butter is in fairly good supply, country points reporting surprisingly large offerings for the season of the year. For No. 1 tubs or bricks the produce houses are offering 22c per lb., f.o.b. Winnipeg; for No. 2, 17c to 18c per lb., and for No. 3, 15c to 16c per lb.

EGGS—Supplies are very scanty and produce houses are offering high prices for new laid eggs. Shipments are being brought in from Ontario to supplement the local supply. Produce houses are paying 30c and higher per dozen for new laid eggs.

CHEESE—Manitoba cheese is very scarce. Ontario is selling at 14½c to 14¾c per lb.

POULTRY—Buying prices f.o.b. Winnipeg are as follows:

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Ontario Flour Advanced 20 Cents on Strong Feeling — Cereals Unsteady, but Promise to Advance Shortly.

An advance of 20 cents on flour in Ontario is about the only change noted in these markets this week. This was the result of the strong conditions in the trade and the good business, both at home and export, which has been done all season. Millers have been busy, but have been holding the price. Some reports say, because of competition at various points. The advance was not at all a surprise.

There appears to be abundance of inquiry these days for Canadian flour from England, Scotland, South Africa and other points. Prices offered are fair, but millers have been able to dispose of their output to good advantage locally and not a great deal of attention has as yet been paid to this overseas demand.

The market for rolled oats is rather unsteady. Local demand is rather better this week, and retailers seem to be buying a little more heavily, but the market is not at all strong, even after the recent declines. The fact that a large quantity of oats is going to the United States at present should, however, prove a factor of steadiness and lend considerable strength to the situation. The oats held across the border are said to be of poor quality this year, and there is consequently a strong demand for Canadian grain, which is in excellent condition. During the past few days upwards of 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian oats are said to have been sent to buyers in the United States, and if this exportation keeps on it promises to have a materially firming effect on the market here.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Inquiries from England and South Africa continue to arrive, but nothing of any consequence has resulted. Trade in country is improving slowly. Stocks are very much on the low side. Prices rule firm and unchanged.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—Prices took a jump of 20 cents during the week on a very strong market. The change was not unanticipated since millers have been holding off for some time. The general strong situation in wheat, and the excellent demand both at home and abroad, is keeping the market firm. Millers are, perhaps, a little less busy than during the past several weeks, but still have enough to keep them going well. There is considerable inquiry from Great Britain, but not a great deal of attention is being paid to it.

Prices now stand as follows:

CEREALS—There has been no change since the decline last week, though the market is rather unsettled at present. Retailers are buying quite heavily, and this has built up local business somewhat. At present prices this, too, seems advisable, for with the abundance of oats going to the United States, the local markets seem destined to be firmer, shortly. Not much attention is being paid to export business.

TRAVELERS REMEMBERED.

The contents of the will of the late Caleb Chase, of Chase & Sanborn, now made public show one of the wisest and most comprehensive dispositions of a large estate. He was noted in his life for his numerous philanthropies and now "his works do follow him." The list of his public benefactions is an unusually long one, and it recongizes good service wherever it had come under his notice. Among his many benefactions are a large number of bequests in Canada, among which he generously remembered the Canadian salesmen, wives of deceased salesmen, and many others in a very generous manner. Though an active and thorough man of business, this distribution of a large portion of his means is an attestation of the time and thought that he had devoted to other interests than those of mere money-making.

Biscuit Baking

is not such an easy matter as you might think. First of all you've got to have the ingredients right. This requires both theoretical knowledge and practical experience. Next comes the baking; and here's where special skill is required. After the baking is done comes the packing, which must be very carefully attended to. The reason why are better than the ordinary kind is simply because in the mixing, baking and packing our skill is unequalled.

Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas

ST. THOMAS AND ITS GROCERS

Many Cake Departments Yield Regular Profit of Twenty Per Cent. — Bakers Supply Stock at Their Own Risk—In Business Since 1880.

St. Thomas, Dec. 14.—This is one of those few happily-situated centres which did not feel to a very appreciable extent the wave of trade depression which rolled over the whole continent during the past year. To say that the depression was not at all felt would be untrue, for some of the industries did curtail output in common with manufacturing concerns elsewhere. But St. Thomas first of all is a railway centre, and when work fell slack in one direction the workers were able to find employment elsewhere. Three United States railways make the city a base of operations and there is a consequent air about the city and its inhabitants which smacks of l fe across the border. The cattle quarantine is at present working some harm by reducing the number of freight trains passing through, and so cutting down the train crews.

A 30-Day Town.

In common parlance, St. Thomas is a "30-day town"—one of those places where the workers are paid but once a month—and in consequence a great proportion of the business is done on a credit basis. Grocers, as well as other merchants, are compelled to give credit if they wish to see their business grow. Compelled, though, is hardly the word. The merchants believe they must give credit to make a success of their business, and certainly the grocer who first adopts the "strictly cash" system in St. Thomas will be a Daniel indeed. This is not impossible, however, a great many of the grocers say, if only the trade would come together; decide to do a cash business, and live to the rules laid down. Of course, it is probably more difficult to inaugurate such a system in a place like St. Thomas than it would be in a centre less dependent on railways, whose employes are paid but once a month. However, the local Retail Merchants' Association has two grocers among its officers—W. J. Stewart, vice-president, and L. O. Pearson, secretary—and they should be in a position to express the feeling of the trade.

Prompt Order Deliveries.

Like Brantford and some other centres in Western Ontario, calling for orders is a feature of the grocery trade in St. Thomas. Paul Egan and L. O. Pearson do quite a lot of this work for their respective businesses, and they state a large proportion of their sales are made by this means. The orders are taken early in the morning and telephoned in, so that they are filled and delivered before the dinner hour. This quickness in filling orders is commendable and very few towns can compare with St. Thomas in giving such prompt service.

Long Terms in Business.

The fact that the grocers of St. Thomas are sound business men is proven by the length of time in which a great proportion of them have been in business. Egan Bros. has two stores as long ago as 1880, and Jas. Munn, Miss Drinkwater, W. E. Ross, Butler Bros., Reeks & Co., and Angus McKenzie have been in business a couple of decades. W. D. Boyce, too, might be put in the old-time class. All of these conduct their businesses on up-to-date methods, and have first-class establishments.

Many Cake Departments.

Probably the strongest side line feature of the St. Thomas grocery trade is the cake department conducted by almost every grocer in the city. Unlike some few other places where this line is given some prominence, the St. Thomas grocer is obliged to take no chances—indeed has been asked to take none—but reaps a profit on all sales. Some of the bakers of the city push their cakes through the grocery trade. The bakers put in a glass case at their own expense, fill it with various kinds of cakes, which are changed, if necessary, once, and in some cases, twice a day. In this manner the goods are always fresh. The grocer buys the first lot and what cakes are left over from day to day the baker takes away, refreshing and replenishing the stock. In this way the grocer pays only for what he sells, the baker taking the risks. Though the actual cash profit is not great, still when a fair business is done in that line a return of 20 per cent. is assured. The grocer buys fruit cakes and seed cakes at 8c a lb.; jelly rolls, layer cakes and other fancy lines at 8c each, and a great variety of the smaller lines of cakes at 8c per doz. These are sold at 10c a pound; 10c each, and 10c a dozen, as the case may be, netting 2c profit on each sale. This is not a great profit, of course, but when a number of sales are made, it means something, and 20 per cent. is better than some staple grocery lines pay.

The grocers in other centres of western Ontario, notably London and Stratford, also have added cake departments, though some of them are not in as good a position as the St. Thomas grocers, owing to their having to buy the cakes outright, and these are not always exchanged when they become stale.

Cakes Attract Other Business.

Another point which has a bearing on this subject is that cakes attract custom to the grocery store, and where attention is paid to this line other goods handled by the grocers often figure on the sales slip. Jno. A. McCance devotes one whole window all the time to the display of cakes made specially for him by a baker who occupies the rear of his business prenises, and he finds that it pays handsomely—in fact, it is one of the best paying lines he handles. Cakes have their seasons, of course, but Mr. McCance's experience is that they are worth while carrying the year round.

McCance's store is one of the finest in western Ontario. It was recently renovated at a cost of about $3,000, and it lends itself admirably to the display of cakes and groceries.

SLIGHTLY MIXED.

A good joke is going the rounds on a well-known Toronto drummer. The grip man in the case was up a little too late in Oshawa the other night when a rear-end collision occurred on the C.P.R. just east of Pontypool. This tore up the C. P.R. track in such shape that they were obliged to run their Peterboro train around via the G.T.R. track. Mr. Drummer stepped from the Oshawa car on the G.T.R. platform, just as the C. P. R. train pulled in, and with one wild look around, he exclaimed, "Boys, no more for your Uncle Dudley. This finishes it. I thought I was in Oshawa."

J. H. Lehmann, who for some years represented H. P. Eckhart & Co., Toronto, in western Ontario, is in Chicago this week in the interests of the Borden Co., manufacturers of special machinery. While it is quite a change from groceries to Machinery, Mr. Lehmann is one of those versatile salesman who can sell anything.

A CANADIAN CONDENSED MILK FACTORY

Description of the Plant and Facilities of the Aylmer Condensed Milk Company at Aylmer, Ontario—An Ideal Location and Close Inspection Assure a Pure Product.

Of all food products there is none so important as milk, particularly since it has been demonstrated that diseases such as tuberculosis, foot and mouth disease, are very common among cows, even on the most carefully-conducted dairy farms. It is particularly interesting to know how the Aylmer Condensed Milk Company, of Aylmer, Ontario, have fought impure milk. This company was organized in the fall of 1907. In fifteen weeks from the day the first sod was broken their modern, sanitary factory was in full operation. It seems that no point that would improve the quality of their product was overlooked when the factory was being situated.

The district surrounding Aylmer is noted for the fine corn raised and the beautiful pasture land in that vicinity. The factory of the company is situated on the northern outskirts of the town directly on the line of the Grand Trunk and Wabash Railways. They have enough land under their control to prevent any industry building up near them that might manufacture products with disagreeable odors. Their water supply is the very best, coming from flowing wells some five miles from the factory which water is stored in a large cement reservoir in the front of the building.

A Sanitary Factory.

The factory itself is of a cement block and pressed brick construction, which has been built on the most sanitary plans. No building could possibly be kept cleaner than this factory. The power used is manufactured by a gas producer. The gas produced is used for heating soldering irons and for the operation of the engine.

The milk from which their products are manufactured is produced on dairies under their constant supervision. The company have inspectors whose constant duty is to inspect the different dairies and at regular intervals examine the cows to see that they are in a healthy condition. They require the farmers to keep their barns and milk houses thoroughly whitewashed. These inspectors also see that all milking utensils are kept scrupulously clean and thoroughly aired. In addition to this the company supplies each dairyman with an approved aerator and cooler. No milk is accepted at the factory that does not arrive there at a temperature of 60 degrees Fahrenheit or below.

On arriving at the factory the milk is carefully inspected to see that it is free as possible from impurities, shows a high percentage of butter fat and solids and is in as near perfect condition as possible. All dairymen's cans are thoroughly washed and sterilized before being returned to the dairymen.

After passing through the receiving room this milk passes into the condensing room where it is greatly reduced in consistency by evaporation in vacuuo with the most modern machinery. Many people in the past have been opposed to the use of unsweetened evaporated cream or sweetened condensed milk, but this prejudice would all be overcome could people really see the great care that is exercised in the manufacture of these products.

The evaporated cream, after passing through the condensing room goes to the filling department, where it is automatically put into the cans, each can containing the same quantity. It next passes through a sterilizing process where all disease germs are destroyed and the milk rendered more digestible than fresh milk or cream, because the casein is softened. After passing through the sterilizing process the cream is held from some thirty to sixty days to insure it being in perfect condition before going on the market. The sweetened condensed milk is handled very similarly, except that it is preserved by the addition of pure granulated sugar.

Factory of the Aylmer Condensed Milk Company at Aylmer, Ontario.

While this company have only been in operation eleven months, during that period they have turned out an enormous quantity of goods, manufacturing over a carload a day. Their brands of Canada First Evaporated Cream unsweetened and Canada First Condensed Milk sweetened, have very rapidly made a place for themselves. Their finest package is Canada First Evaporated Cream, large size, which is put up in a sanitary can, sealed without solder or acid, and has proved a very popular seller. This brand is largely used in coffee, and is adaptable for all purposes for which milk is used. Owing to the extreme care that is exercised in the selection of the fresh milk and in the manufacture of evaporated cream, it is perfectly safe and highly recommended by physicians for infant feeding.

In addition to the two brands mentioned the company have recently put on the market a small 14 oz. can of sweetened milk, which is known as "Beaver Brand," and is put up in a sanitary can.

By the company's selection of district they are in a position to handle all business entrusted to their care promptly, as the fresh milk supply is unlimited and the conditions for the production of pure milk unsurpassed.

The general manager of the company, H. W. Knight, has had twelve years' experience in the manufacture of sweetened and unsweetened condensed milk, having been employed in other of the best factories in Canada. He is thoroughly conversant with the details of the industry and this itself is a good deal of an assurance of the good quality of the product.

A CURIOUS COOK BOOK.

A cook book printed in Chinese has just been issued by E. W. Gillett Co., Toronto. Its object is to encourage the use of Magic Baking Powder and other goods used for domestic purposes, which are manufactured by them. It will, no doubt, appeal to Chinese cooks for its usefulness, as well as its attractiveness. The front page is a lattice of red and white with a fierce yellow dragon coiled about the title of the book. There are sixty pages in the book, sixty pages of incomprehensible turkey tracks to us, which are said to include recipes for everything from oatmeal gruel to peppermint drops.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The market this week is somewhat unsettled, although there are very few changes in prices. Being so near the holidays, there is a good deal of uneasiness as to expected arrivals to meet the usual demand for Christmas. The only line, however, which seems to be short is the California navel oranges, which, consequently, are very firm. One of the dealers who seemed to have a peep beyond the vision of the others, made the statement that the demand for navels will be fully supplied with stock now on the way. Apples, especially Spies, are higher, and are now selling for $5 to $6 per barrel. All other varieties for $2.50 to $4.

VEGETABLES—Owing to favorable weather, potatoes are still arriving and are accumulating, and prices are unchanged. Several cars of Canadian-grown cabbage are being unloaded and sold at $25 a ton, or $1.50 a barrel. Last year cabbage was imported from the States and was bought there at $7 to $8 a ton, but this year they are from $35 to $40 in New York.

NEW BUILDINGS FOR VICTORIA FIRMS.

Wilson Bros., Wholesale Grocers, and B. Wilson Company, Cold Storage, Erecting Fine New Premises.

Buildings having a floor space of 81,000 feet have been commenced on Herald Street, Victoria, B.C., for the B. Wilson Company, cold storage, and Wilson Bros., wholesale grocers. The buildings are close to the new E. & N. Railway terminals and a switch line will be run into the basements.

The buildings planned far Wilson Bros. comprises six storeys and basement, the whole of which will be occupied by the firm for their business. Two elevators, one freight and one for passengers, will be installed.

The B. Wilson Company cold storage warehouse will cost $40,000, with refrigerating machinery, which, it is estimated, will cost $30,000. The premises will be used entirely for the cold storage business. The refrigerating and ice-making plant will make 20 tons of ice and refrigerate 65,000 cubic feet of cold storage at temperatures ranging from 10 below zero to 34 above. The ice storage room will be located alongside of the ice tank, and ice will be delivered to wagons by means of a pneumatic ice-lowering device. There is also an ice shoot so arranged for the quick icing of railroad cars so that perishable freight such as fruit, fish, etc., can be economically handled. The system adopted for refrigerating the cold rooms will be direct evaporation, using anhydrous ammonia as the refrigerating agent, through coils of 2-inch pipe, the temperature being controlled from the engine room, any desired temperature can be maintained. The freezer contains 1,800 feet of 1¼-inch pipe and can freeze five tons of fish every twelve hours. When in operation the plant will be the most modern on the Pacific coast.

Handled "Sealshipts" 2 Weeks 90% of the Oyster Trade Theirs

"You made a mistake when you told us we would have 75% of the oyster trade in our town if we put in "Sealshipt" Oysters," write Stiles Brothers, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, "your estimate was too low. We already have fully 90% of the oyster trade and we have only handled them two weeks. We've sold 25 gallons this week which we think is very good as this is not good oyster weather—it is too warm."

"Sealshipt" Oysters

pay you a good profit and are the most satisfactory line to handle. They come in airtight cans—solid meats—with ice around the can but not touching the oysters. This keeps them fresh, firm, natural sized. The piquant "half shell" flavor is retained.

"Sealshipt" Oysters will give you increased trade among the class of customers you most desire to have come into your store.

SOME DON'TS FOR THE CLERK.

Don't fail to get address of customer when possible. Don't fail to memorize the ads. of your store. Don't let your interest lag. Don't hide from a poorly dressed customer. Don't converse with other clerks while serving trade. Don't forget that if you want promotion you must merit it. Don't forget that the more you know the more you are worth. Don't get angry if the other fellow gets a raise—just hustle. Don't fail to be honest with your employer and customers. Don't be a "knocker." Don't growl when asked to do a little extra work. Don't forget that a lot of small sales are as good as big ones. Don't think by watching the clock that the store will close any sooner. Don't fail to impress customers so they will ask for you next time. Don't lose patience with a hard customer. Don't forget to introduce some other article to customers besides that which they bought. Don't fail to try and make as many extra sales as possible.—St. Paul Trade.

THE TREATMENT OF EMPLOYES.

Your employes are not going to give you their best for your worst; their admiration and devotion and loyalty in return for your suspicion and meanness. If you scold and nag them, and look down upon them, you cannot expect them to admire you, to look up to you and love you. If you sow thistles and thorns among them, do not expect a harvest of roses and the sweet perfume of admiration and love in return.

Yet I know business men who never express appreciation of an employe's work, no matter how faithful or painstaking he may be. They say that if they show any appreciation it will not be long before the employes will think that they are as good as their employers; will get "swelled heads," and will become dissatisfied and discontented.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

"Business is poor," said the beggar.
Said the undertaker, "It's dead!"
"Falling off," said the riding school teacher.
The druggist, "Oh, vial," he said.

"It's all write with me," said the author;
"Picking up," said the man on the dump,
"My business is sound," quoth the bandsman;
Said the athlete, "I'm kept on the jump."

The bottler declared it was "corking!"
The parson, "It's good," answered he.
"I make both end meat," said the butcher;
The tailor replied, "It suits me."

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Interesting Information Concerning Nutmegs—Grown in East and West Indies, Spice Islands and Brazil—Canada's Supply From Penang and the Banda Islands.

NUTMEGS.

The nutmeg is the aromatic kernel of the fruit of several species of myristica of the natural order of myristicaceae, which contains about forty species, all tropical fruits or shrubs, and natives of America, Asia and Madagascar. Nutmegs are now cultivated commercially in the East Indies, West Indies, Spice Islands and Brazil. They are used chiefly as a spice, but medically are a stimulant and carmanative. They possess narcotic properties and in large doses produce stupefaction and delirium. This phase of their use is of small interest to the grocer, however. What he desires to know is that nutmegs by expression yield a peculiar yellow fat, called oil of mace, and by distillation is obtained an almost colorless essential oil which has very fully the flavor of the nutmeg.

The species which furnishes the greater part of the nutmegs of commerce is Moschota, but the long nutmeg from the Banda Islands is now frequent in western markets.

The common nutmeg tree is about 25 feet in height, with oblong leaves. The fruit is of the size and appearance of a roundish pear, and is golden yellow in color when ripe. The fleshy part of the fruit is rather hard, and is of a peculiar consistency, resembling candied fruit. It is often preserved and eaten as a sweetmeat. Within the nut, enveloped in the curious yellow-red aril, is the mace, under which is a thin shining brown shell, slightly grooved by the pressure of the mace, and within which is the kernel or nutmeg.

Up to 1796 the Dutch, being the possessors of the Banda Islands, jealously prevented the nutmeg from being carried in a living state to any other place, but, during the contest and retention of the islands by the British, care was taken to spread the culture of this valuable spice, and plants were sent to Penang, India and other places where they are now successfully cultivates, and excellent nutmegs are produced in Jamaica, Trinidad, Brazil and other places already mentioned.

The nutmeg is very liable to the destructive attacks of a beetle, and it is a common practice to protect the nuts with a coating of lime before shipping them for export. The Dutch or Batavian nutmegs are nearly always limed, but those of Penang are not and are consequently of greater value. Great Britain is furnished by her own settlements with the greater portion of this spice, but some lots of Batavian nutmegs also come into the market. The quantity imported each year is about 300,000 pounds weight, worth about $350,000, while the United States imports the spice to the value of about $600,000 annually. In Canada during the last seven months about $82,000 pounds of nutmegs and mace were imported.

Other species of the myristica also yield nutmegs, which, though sometimes used, are of inferior quality. Among these are the clove nutmegs of Madagascar, the calabash nutmeg and others.

The nutmegs imported into Canada come principally from Penang and the Banda Islands, being superior in every way to the West Indies product. It is the fashion to have them limed in the United States, but in Canada they are never sold this way. A Toronto firm a few months ago had to resell one hundred cases in New York simply because the nuts were limed, and the importers knew there would be no demand for them here.

There is a growing market for nutmegs each year and around Christmas time the sales are much larger than at any other season. Wholesale grocers sell large quantities of ground nutmegs, but the product is usually sold in the form of the nut and the busy housewife grinds it up as she requires. It is said that while nutmegs were limed at first to ward off destructive insects, the liming was also found an excellent means of covering up any defect in the nut itself.

Once, in a certain state—Connecticut—a brilliant Yankee conceived the idea that it would be a brilliant and profitable venture to grind up broom-handles to such a fine degree that they would resemble ground nutmegs, and then put the powdered product on the market. The fraud was discovered and to this day Connecticut is nicknamed the "Wooden Nutmeg State."

NO ONE REMEMBERS YOUR FAILURES

The World Doesn't Condemn a Man for Failures so Long as He keeps on Trying—Confidence Gained by Falling Down and Getting up.

By Herbert Kaufman, in the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

So long as you won't acknowledge it, you haven't failed. Suppose one thing has gone wrong—make something else go right. This is such a busy world that we haven't time to recall unimportant things, and if you don't keep reminding us, we'll forget all about the incident. But if you walk around with the badge of despair in your face and reference to the past in your talk, how can we help remembering?

Your greatest trouble is your egotism. You over-estimate your status in the scheme of life. You imagine that your misfortunes are just as fresh in every one else's thoughts, but if you want the truth, we don't know that you're living except when you force us to realize that you're alive.

The world doesn't condemn you when you fail trying, so long as you don't fail crying. It does hate a quitter. You can still get everything you set out for if you set out with determination, but if you haven't enough confidence in yourself to feel that success is merely postponed, you surely can't hope that we will rate you higher than you estimate yourself.

Acrobats not only practice how to leap, but also how to fall. They've learned that they must miss the mark every now and then, and so they train themselves to miss without getting hurt. You, too, must expect to miss once in a while, and have enough manhood not to let it hurt you.

Getting Confidence by Hard Knocks.

The greatest achievements are almost invariably prefaced by temporary adversities. Men acquire a confidence by falling down and then getting up again.

Few of us have sufficient judgment to know at the outset of our careers the work for which we are best fitted. When we are misplaced the sooner we are displaced the better. We can't learn where we belong until we discover where we don't belong.

The supply of opportunity won't peter out—like the atmosphere, it is always with us, and ready for use twenty-four hours of every day.

There are more inventions unthought than perfected—more industries unplanned than established—more ideas undeveloped than matured.

We go to the ball game and watch Hagan fan out steadily for eight innings, but when the score is tied in the ninth and Hagan swats the ball into the middle of next week, do you suppose any one cares a hang what he did in the middle of the game? Each day means a fresh innings for you with a chance for a home run, but you can't make a hit unless you swing for it.

The worst part of cowardice is laziness. The man who constantly pities himself keeps his brain cells so crowded with useless regrets that he can't find room for creative ideas. The energy it takes to cry over spilt milk will fill new pitchers.

Everything Worth While is Hard.

Nothing really worth while is arrived at without some heartache and some backbreak. There are few miners who didn't wear blisters on their feet and endure all but starvation before they struck pay dirt.

The game of life can't be played by quailers. Its rules haven't changed since nature laid out her scheme of creation, with the underlying law of survival only for the fit.

A prize fight isn't a pretty thing, but it's a man's lesson. No matter how many knockdowns a pugilist gets, he hasn't lost so long as he isn't knocked out. If you want to see how your fellows judge you, watch them hiss the man who throws up the sponge while he had a chance. We all fail, even those of us whose careers have seemed to be unbroken successes, but we kept the secret tight locked in our own bosoms and managed to laugh to the world until we had it laughing with us instead of at us.

We take this opportunity of extending to you the Season's Greetings. We sincerely hope that you will have a very prosperous Xmas trade, and that in the New Year your business will be still more satisfactory.

This last year has been an anxious one for most of us, and the profit side of our ledgers may not be altogether satisfactory, yet we have much to be grateful for, and the coming year, from all indications, should be a good one for all of us. As someone has said, "We Canadians have toiled hard until we have reached the top of the toboggan slide, and now nothing can hold us back."

We are entering the New Year with a determination to supply you with the very best Canned Goods at reasonable prices, and we hope your New Year's resolution will be to handle only the very best, viz., Canadian Canners' Brands.

Yours respectfully,

CANADIAN CANNERS, Ltd.
